CAN YOU GUESS.

Here's a Chance to Make
Ten Dollars Easy.

All You Have to Do Is to Pick the Winners in the Coming
Primary.

Just for the interest attached to a guessing contest and to put a little more interest into the coming campaign for County officers, THE NEWS will give its readers a chance to make ten dollars and have a little fun at guessing on the side.

To the person making the first nearest correct guess of the winners in the Democratic Primary Election which will be held in this county on Saturday, June 1st, 1901, THE NEWS will present a ten dollar gold piece. The conditions of the contest are simple. Old subscribers and new subscribers who pay $2 on their subscriptions will each be entitled to a guess, and to as many guesses as they pay for a subscription. If no one guesses correctly, the first one who guesses the closest to all the winners will receive the ten dollars.

You intend to pay your subscription anyway, and you may as well pay before the first day of June and have a chance of getting your money back, besides gaining the distinction of knowing more about the political situation than your neighbors.

Each guess will be registered with a received as to the exact day, hour and minute. No one will be permitted to see how any one else has guessed. In guessing only the offices on the ballot are to be considered.

Contests of Eggs.

From the remotest ages the egg has been looked upon as the symbol of creation, or new birth. According to the Persians, the world was hatched from an egg at that season of the year which corresponds to the vernal equinox. Hence the Persians still exchange gifts of colored eggs at the new year festival, which they celebrate at this date. Among the Jews the egg entered into all the mysterious ceremonies called apocalyptic and occupied a prominent position on the household table during the paschal season. Christianity invested the paschal egg with a new significance—namely, that of the resurrection of Christ, and it was colored red in allusion to his blood shed for sinners on the cross.

A curious custom in medieval churches, for priests and chorists to join in a game of ball at Easter, took its rise from the Easter egg, which was thrown from one to the other of the chorists in the nave of the church while an anthem was being sung. As a missed egg meant a smashed egg, the more the ball was substituted. But the smashing of eggs continued as a form of outdoor sport. Survivals are to be found among all Teutonic and Anglo-Saxon people. A popular game in England and Germany consists in hitting one egg against another, the egg that survives uncracked winning for its owner the weaker antagonist, until an entire basket of eggs may have changed ownership. Another game is to trundle eggs down a hill or slope, those which reach the bottom uncracked being similarly victorious over the others.

Tale of a Frugal Bishop.

"There used to be a city in which I lived," said a Cleveland man, "a certain bishop who, while possessed of the highest principles and whose aims and ambitions in life were of the highest character, at the same time united with these a penuriousness in money matters that caused innumerable stories illustrative of this failing to be tacked upon him. One of these related to a certain church conference which the bishop and other dignitaries of the church at one time attended.

"At one of the meetings the bishop in endeavoring to open a letter neatly with his penknife was so unfortunate as to allow the latter to slip and to cut a finger severely. The injured member bled profusely, and a hasty search for a court plaster ensued. There being none forthcoming, a clergyman standing by fished out his cardcase and, extracting from it a 5 cent stamp, the smallest priced stamp he had, offered it to the bishop to use as a substitute for the much needed court plaster.

"The bishop accepted it gratefully and in his turn took out his own cardcase. In it he placed the 5 cent stamp and then, producing a 1 cent specimen of his own, he pasted it over the still bleeding wound."—New York Tribune.

Meeting Wagner.

Wagner when a young man wrote a sonata which had a fair success, but in after life he made every effort to suppress it. Going to the publisher, he said, "Give you any copies of that miserable thing still unsold?" "Yes," was the reply; "I have quite a number of them in stock." "Send them to me at once, with a bill," said the composer. A thousand copies were soon afterward delivered at his door. The bill was a big one, but it was a somewhat grudgingly, and Wagner thought he had done with the thing. What was his surprise, then, at receiving two or three months later on another consignment, this time of 500 copies. "I thought you had only a thousand of these things," he protested. "They were all I had in stock," explained the dealer, "but these have been returned by my agents, to whom I wrote that you wished to have the sonata suppressed." Wagner winced, but there was nothing for it but to pay the bill, and thereafter whenever business was dull with this crafty publisher a few hundred copies of the sonata would be struck off on shopwork paper and delivered at the composer's door, with a memorandum to the effect that they had just come back from remote places where they had been sent for sale.

John Allen's Pair.

When the house voted to prohibit liquor selling in army canteens, John Allen of Mississippi was not recorded. Some good women of Mississippi noted the fact that he did not vote and called on him for an explanation, knowing that Mr. Allen had been at one time quite active in the Congressional Temperance society. Mr. Allen replied that he was paired. "You see, ladies," he said, "the situation was this: My wife thinks very much as you do about this legislation in regard to the canteen. I have some doubts as to whether congress will really promote temperance among soldiers in this way. So I paired my judgment with my wife's conscience and decided not to vote."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Mislabeled Letter.

The transcription of letters in the same word sometimes produces the most ludicrous results. In "The Still Hour," which was written by Professor Phelps, is the fine line, "The stillness of the hour is the stillness of a dead calm at sea." A large number was printed and disposed of before it was discovered that "calm" had been printed for "calm."

A Heavyweight.

"And then," she said in telling of the romantic episode, "she sprang to his arms."

"She did?"

"Of course. Do you doubt it?"

"Oh, no," he replied, "but after seeing her I can't help thinking that it must have jarred him quite a bit."—Chicago Post.

The Fata Morgana.

The fata morgana is a singular aerial phenomenon akin to the mirage. It is seen in many parts of the world, but most frequently and in greatest perfection at the strait of Messina, between Sicily and Italy. So many conditions must coincide, however, that even there it is of comparatively rare occurrence. To allow of its production the sun must be at an angle of 45 degrees with the water, both sky and sea must be calm, and the tidal current sufficiently strong to cause the water in the center to rise higher than on the edges of the strait. When these conditions are fully met, the observer on the heights of Calabria, looking toward Messina, will behold a series of rapidly changing pictures, sometimes of most exquisite beauty.

Castles, colonnades, successions of beautiful arches, palaces, cities, with mountains, forests, groves, will appear and vanish, to be succeeded perhaps by fleets of ships, sometimes placidly sailing over the deep, sometimes inverted, while a halo like a rainbow surrounds every image. It is supposed that the images are due to the irregular refraction powers of the different layers of air above the sea, which magnify, repeat and distort the objects on the Sicilian shore beyond, but to the Italians these singular appearances are the castles of the Princess Morgana, and the view of them is supposed to bring good fortune to the beholder.

Skeleton in the Closet.

The original of the singular saying, "A skeleton in the closet," which is found in almost every language in Europe, is found in one of those curious collections of stories which the monks of the middle ages were fond of making both for their own amusement and for the instruction of youth. In one of these collections, compiled by an unknown hand about the middle of the tenth century, there is a story of a wealthy lady who, having a secret grief, confided it to a friend who was apparently a perfectly happy woman. She was the wife of a nobleman who lived in his castle. In the south of France. She and her husband were outwardly on the most loving terms. Not a care cloud seemed to cast a shadow on her path.

After hearing the story of her afflicted friend the noble lady took her by the hand and led her to a secret chamber adjoining her bedroom, there opened the door of a closet and exposed a skeleton. "Know, my friend," she said, "no one is happy. Every day I am forced by my husband to kiss this grinning death head, which is that of a gentleman who was my husband's rival and whom I would have married had not my parents willed otherwise."

A Simple, Bashful Maid.

"I am glad your name is Mary," said Mr. Slowcoach to his sweetheart, whom he had been courting for several weeks.

"Why so?"

"Because I was reading today and came across a line which said, 'Mary is the sweetest name that woman ever bore.'"

"That is poetically expressed. I've heard my father say it to my mother, whose name is Mary. It is from some poet, isn't it?"

"I believe so."

"But I have also heard my father say that there was even a sweeter name than Mary."

"I think he must have been mistaken," said the lover as he tenderly pressed his sweetheart's hand.

"No; I do not think he was mistaken."

What was the other name?

"A beautiful blush suffused the charming maiden's cheeks, the silken lashes fell and veiled the lovely eyes, and in a tone as soft as the whisperings of an Aeolian harp she murmured:

"Wife."

The cards are out—London Answers.

Nearly every bank of old establishment has on deposit sums of unclaimed money. The aggregate of all these sums, if it could be told, would astonish the world. These moneys in the Bank of England are estimated variously, some placing the aggregate amount at less than $500,000, and some at many times that sum. In the Bank of England, as in all banks in this country and in England, the total amount is made up of small sums. According to law, the Bank of England should give public access to the list of such lost moneys, whereas it never does anything of the sort. When challenged it invokes legal action, but no one cares for a legal contest with the Bank of England, so the question never is faced.

How do these unclaimed moneys accumulate? Largely through the omission of stockholders to claim dividends and through the fact that many people die without leaving behind them a strict account of their investments.

Forethought.

"Your letters to me," said his affianced bride one day, "are so cold and formal."

"Surely, my dear," exclaimed the literary celebrity, stung by her reproach, "when they are published after my death they will be found to be models of composition, breathing the most exalted sentiments and couched in absolutely correct English."—Chicago Tribune.
