AMUSEMENTS.

"IN OLD KENTUCKY" FRIDAY.

—It may be that love of a horse is deep bred in the heart of every man, or it may be one of several other qualities that is responsible for the continued success of "In Old Kentucky" as a matter of fact, the play combines a number of elements of popularity, of this success there can be no doubt. There is scarcely a play on the boards to-day with the record of "In Old Kentucky." In the last ten years the American stage has not revealed as remarkable and phenomenal an artistic and financial success as this sterling Southern drama, that has been breaking all theatrical records for big receipts all over the country since 1892. It is announced for this city, at the Grand, on next Friday night, and will undoubtedly attract the same large audience that always greets it on its presentation here.

This will be the tenth season of "In Old Kentucky" and a big company and splendid new scenic outfit has been provided for this year's tour. In fact, the piece will go into New York, Chicago and Boston for long engagements again before the end of the season. "In Old Kentucky" is the best example of an American melodrama produced in a decade. As is universally known, it deals with an interesting phase of Kentucky life and is a symmetrical and well-proportioned dramatic work, characterized by a poetic fervor and keen and forcible phraseology. Its main strength lies in its simplicity and picturesqueness. It is full of exciting situations and dramatic episodes and contains some admirable character types drawn from life in the bluegrass and mountainous sections of Kentucky.

"In Old Kentucky" is sure of a warm welcome at the hand of theatre goers of this city. It is a charming play, always well acted and leaves the spectator with a pleasant taste in his mouth. Prices 25 cents to $1. Seats at Boardland's Wednesday morning.

Put His Foot in It.

Mrs. Ferguson reached over, took a long, dark hair off her husband's shoulder, and held it up for his inspection.

"That," he said, angry at her implied suspicion, "is from the horse's mane. I have just been currying him."

"What made you suppose," she asked, haughtily, "that I thought it was anything else?"

At which he shrank back behind his newspaper again, feeling as if he had kicked hard at something and missed it.
