Revolution Imminent.

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the Kidneys and Bowels, stimulate the Liver, and clarify the blood. Run down systems benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it don't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist.

The Razor Crank.

"A man may be quite rational and reasonable in all ordinary affairs and yet be quite daffy on the subject of razors," said the barber. "I have one customer, for instance, who keeps six razors here—one for every day in the week that a man is supposed to get shaved—and pays me to hone them every week. Some mornings I have to try them all on him before he stops grumbling and even then may have to use one of my own razors. At other times he will order me to use the same razor for a week or two. I can't fool him by changing it either. "Another customer who comes in only for an occasional shave talked to me for six months about the fine razor he had at home. I told him that as we seemed to have none in the shop to suit him I should be obliged if he would bring it around for me to look at. He did. Well, sir, it was a meat ax. I would as soon think of shaving a man with a carving knife. But I shaved him with it, and he never peeped."—New York Press.

"By and By" and "By the Bye."

Johnson's definition of "by and by," now generally written "by and bye," is "in a short time," corresponding to the French tout a l'heure, and Shakespeare uses it to express the immediate as distinguished from the more remote future:

Now a sensible man, by and by a fool and presently a beast.—Othello.

If we knew how "by" came to be indicative of the present the second "by" might be assumed to signify beyond.

"By the bye" was in Johnson's time used in a different, almost opposite, sense to that in which we now employ it as an equivalent to the French a propos, not as expressive of something apposite, but, on the contrary, as, according to Johnson, "something not the direct and immediate object of regard." In neither case is the employment of "by" in these two familiar expressions accounted for.—Notes and Queries.

The Mohammedan Judgment Day.

The Koran, sura 81, has this to say concerning the general "Judgment day," which nearly all religions teach in common: "When the sun shall be folded up, and when the stars shall fall, and when the mountain shall be made to pass away, and when the wild beasts shall be gathered together, and when the seas shall boil, and when souls shall again be joined to their bodies, and when the girl who hath been buried alive shall ask for what crime she was put to death, and when the books shall be laid open, and when the heavens shall be removed, and when hell shall burn fiercely, and when paradise shall be brought near, then shall every soul know what it hath wrought."

Consecrating Church Bells.

The custom of consecrating church bells was once common to nearly all denominations, but it is now confined principally to the Roman Catholics. The old form was to wash the bell with holy water, anoint it with oil and mark it with the sign of the cross, and to some extent this form is still used. At the time of the reformation in England the prejudice against Roman Catholic ceremonies was so strong that instead of being blessed new bells were occasionally turned up and filled with punch, which then was drunk by the participants in the occasion.—London Chronicle.
