

THE BRITISH INCENSED

The Seizure of English Ships by Russia Condemned.

Warlike Tone of Such Papers as the Times, Standard, Morning Post and the Daily Telegraph Has Had Its Effect.

London, July 21.—A press representative Wednesday night interviewed several prominent persons connected in close touch with the government relative to the seizure of British vessels by the steamers of the Russian volunteer fleet in the Red Sea. As a result of these inquiries there is shown to be a remarkable hostile feeling against Russia of a strength and bitterness almost without precedent since the Crimean war. Even the most conservative who have been in the service of the government for many years, and who openly deplored the haste with which they thought Great Britain had plunged into the Transvaal war, Wednesday night frankly declared for a policy of reprisal against what is regarded here as Russia's violation of treaty and her piratical attack on British commerce.

The warlike tone of such papers as the Times, the Standard, the Morning Post and the Daily Telegraph, while in national crisis hitherto almost invariably advised caution, has had its inevitable effect. There has been stirred up a storm of indignation among all classes in the United Kingdom, and the strength of which the government itself can scarcely gauge.

Those who deplored the outbreak of the war between Japan and Russia are now among the most outspoken champions of a physical force that will prevent the repetition of the Malacca incident in the Red Sea.

Those few officials at the foreign office who are in full possession of all the details of Great Britain's desire to arrive at an entente with Russia are in despair. They realize that the policy so carefully fostered by King Edward and Foreign Minister Lansdowne will now be indignantly repudiated by all parties in the house of commons and involve with the public the downfall of any ministry advocating it.

Every nerve will be strained, however, by the foreign office, to secure from Russia an explanation that will pacify the aggrieved feelings of the British public, and no step will be taken officially that will tend to prejudice subsequent diplomatic negotiations looking to the settlement of all questions now outstanding between Russia and Great Britain.

However there is expressed at the foreign office and elsewhere almost poignant regret that Russia rightly or wrongly should have taken up the position evinced by the action of her volunteer cruisers in the Red Sea.

Special dispatches from Malta give alarmist accounts of the hurried departure from that port of the British cruiser and torpedo squadrons.

The captain of the Malacca asserts that the capture was made within the three mile limit.

The midshipman commanding this prize, which has set Europe by the ears and almost threatens consequences more serious than the actual war in the far east, ordered 400 tons of coal at Port Said, but the officials refused to supply the coal on the ground that the vessel had a supply sufficiently ample to take her to the Black Sea.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—The news that Great Britain has delivered to Russia a protest against the capture of the peninsular and Oriental steamer Malacca in terms which are believed to be almost tantamount to a demand for the immediate release of the vessel, as well as a general protest against the action of the Russian volunteer fleet steamers in stopping ships in the Red sea, was not generally known here Wednesday night, but Wednesday morning's editorial broadside from the London newspapers reprinted here Wednesday afternoon was a sufficient warning of the state of the British mind and the public became greatly excited.

In the hotels and restaurants the war was temporarily forgotten and nothing excepting the possibility of complications with Great Britain was talked of.

Provided a blunder has not been made by the captain of the St. Petersburg in mistaking British government stores for contraband of war, Russia will probably be prepared to maintain the justice of the seizure, but if a mistake has been made, the government doubtless will order the Malacca to be set at liberty and pay the bill for her illegal detention.

Another Volunteer Fleet.
London, July 21.—The correspondent at Odessa of the Standard telegraphing under date of July 20, says: "Another volunteer fleet steamer proceeded hence to-night to Sebastopol for coal and armament preparatory to leaving the Black sea."

Chatauquans Graduated.
Forestville, Ct., July 21.—Fifty Chatauquans were graduated at the "Recognition Day" exercises held at the summer camp ground here. The class is the largest ever graduated in Connecticut. Bishop John H. Vincent delivered the principal address.

Presidential Candidate Deposed.
St. Louis, July 21.—W. T. Scott, presidential candidate of the National Negro Liberty party, who is now serving a 20 days' sentence in the Belleville, Ill. jail charged with keeping a disorderly house, has been deposed.

LOST HIS LIFE IN THE SERF.

Judge Upton Muir, of Louisville, Ky., Drowned at Cape May.

Cape May, N. J., July 21.—Judge Upton Muir, of Louisville Ky., who was spending his vacation here, lost his life in the surf Wednesday while bathing. The judge entered the water directly in front of the Stockton hotel, and had been enjoying his bath for about a half hour before he was drowned. He was in the water about knee deep and at a point where there are no gullies. Several persons on the beach saw him fall face downward, and as he did not immediately get up some of the bathers went to his rescue. He was unconscious, and every effort was made to resuscitate him without success. Among the first to appear on the scene was Gen. J. Watts Kearney, who is a brother-in-law of the judge's widow, and with whom Judge and Mrs. Muir were staying. The general placed the body in charge of an undertaker and then went to the cottage and broke the news to Mrs. Muir. The body will be taken to Louisville Thursday. Besides the widow Judge Muir leaves two children. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning, believing that the judge probably was taken with cramps, as the water was quite cool, or that death was due to heart failure.

CHILD LABOR COMMITTEE.

A National Organization Has Been Formed in New York.

New York, July 21.—An organization to be known as "The National child labor committee" has been formed in this city, and at the first meeting to complete the organization and elect officers, it was announced that the committee has secured as the general secretary Samuel McCune Lindsay, commissioner of education in Porto Rico and professor of sociology in the University of Pennsylvania.

In speaking of the work of the commissioner Lindsay said: "The National Child Labor Committee desires, wherever its co-operation is requested, to investigate the conditions under which children are engaged in gainful occupations in all parts of the country and to help create a healthy public sentiment in favor of giving every child the best possible chance to make the most of its life."

RACE TRACK NEWS.

The Police Blocked It By Filing Messages After Each Race.

New York, July 20.—Police Inspector Brooks and 40 detectives went to the Brighton Beach track Tuesday afternoon and blocked all racing news sent over the Western Union wires by filing scores of messages after each race. Between 2 o'clock and 4 o'clock the police had filed over 400 telegrams and sent a similar number of telephone messages. The poolroom men were frantic over the situation and what little news they received had to be sent from outside wires and was very late. The service for newspapers was also delayed.

QUEEN WILHELMINA.

She Sends Telegram of Condolence to Kruger's Family.

Amsterdam, Holland, July 21.—Queen Wilhelmina has telegraphed her condolences to the late Mr. Kruger's family on the death of the former president of the Transvaal, adding: "May the grandeur of his character and his patriotism be vaulted anew everywhere and may you and your compatriots thus find consolation for your grievous loss."

A Colored Mob.

Cripple Creek, Col., July 20.—A mob of Negroes Tuesday compelled one of their race, named Edwards, to leave the district under their threats of hanging him if he remained. They were incensed over an exhibition in a group of moving pictures for which, they allege, Edwards posed. The pictures represented a supposed assault upon a white woman and a chase of the criminal by bloodhounds.

Bricklayers Strike.

Washington, July 20.—Twenty-eight bricklayers engaged in construction work at the Washington army barracks are on strike because a non-union colored bricklayer was given work there. The union will support the strikers.

World's Amateur Record.

Salt Lake, Utah, July 20.—Emil Agraz, a California amateur, Tuesday night clipped 17 seconds off the world's amateur five-mile bicycle record, made by Hurley on the Vallsburg track. Agraz rode the distance in 10:39.

Baltimore Shipping Wheat West.

Baltimore, July 20.—For the first time since 1877 Baltimore has been called upon to ship wheat to the west. Approximately 100,000 bushels of No. 2 southern red wheat have been forwarded to millers as far west as Cincinnati.

Silver Service Presented the Denver. Galveston, Tex., July 21.—The silver service from the citizens of Denver was formally presented to the cruiser Deaver at the Auditorium. Thousands of people witnessed the ceremony, which consisted of speech-making and music.

Ex-Congressman McBride Dead.

Spokane, Wash., July 21.—John McBride, ex-congressman of Oregon and widely known as a lawyer and newspaper writer, died suddenly from hemorrhage of the brain. He was a brother of ex-Senator McBride, of Oregon.

SHOUTED FOR TEDDY

SETH BULLOCK, OF DEADWOOD, THE PRESIDENT'S FRIEND.

A STRENUOUS WESTERNER

Typical of a Class That Roosevelt Likes—The New Western Cabinet Officers—Strenuousity Seems to Be the Thing.

Washington.—While the funny men of the newspapers may go to extremes in caricaturing the strenuousity of President Roosevelt, there can be no doubt of his "strenuousity." He simply has to "do things." He is not of the kind that can be waited upon effectively.

It is this desire to move that caused him to like the west, where his strenuousity found full sway. It is the same characteristic that caused him to make of western men his closest friends, and for the westerners to take to him.

No incident of the Chicago convention was more greatly enjoyed by the president than one in which one of these western friends played a prominent part. The friend in question was Seth Bullock. He was a delegate to the convention from the northwest, and his tall, spare frame loomed up on the horizon and emitted shouts for "Teddy" at every opportunity. But even his western ardor did not seem to dispel the frost in the atmosphere, and Bullock determined to demand eastern assistance. His style called for cheers, bands of music and action, and he could not understand why New York the state which claimed "Teddy" as its own, did not awake to the necessity of the occasion. The first day passed without a demonstration such as suited Bullock, and at its close he was disgusted, but determined that another should not pass in the same way. Taking with him that unmistakable air of the west, he walked over to the headquarters of the New York delegation and announced:

"I'm Seth Bullock from Deadwood. I'm for Teddy. I'm from the west. You fellows from New York are frosty—you're good only for iced tea. We've got mosquitoes in the Black Hills that have more blood in them than you fellows. Now you whoop her up tomorrow or I'll make trouble. Get action."

New York woke up the next day. It takes electoral votes to elect, and the eastern states have the votes, but Roosevelt would rather have the friendship of men like Bullock than of the magnates of Wall street.

The Story of Bullock.

Seth Bullock is well known among the politicians from the northwest who come to Washington. They know that he can get closer to Roosevelt than the majority of men who wear senatorial togas. Henry Barrett Chamberlain, the editor of the Voter, tells his story as follows:

Bullock was the first sheriff of Helena in the pioneer days and the first sheriff of Deadwood, when the Black Hills contained as picturesque a set of cut-throats as ever existed. Bullock is now the government's forest reserve representative of South Dakota, a man of means and calm.

He has the voice of a woman, the garb of a minister, the silence of a confidential clerk of Morgan or Rockefeller. Yet in the best of his days, when he represented the first law and order introduced to the mining camps of the Hills (where by the way most of the fortune of Mr. Hearst has come from) Bullock as a sheriff put, as I am told, some 25 men out of existence. He kept no notches on his gun nor do I know that he has ever talked of his past duties as a sheriff—but he got action.

I have been told by old residents of Deadwood who remember the days of '76 and '77 that when the citizens' committee called for Bullock to come to Deadwood that he arrived in the garb of a circuit riding minister—no pistols in sight, no display of leather breeches or bespangled sombrero. Wild Bill was at that time in his prime and it is said that Bullock asked him:

"I'd like you to be my chief deputy."

To which Wild Bill replied: "I can't do it, Seth, because I have friends on both sides. I'm neither for nor against you."

That afternoon Sheriff Bullock walked down the narrow way of the old gulch of Deadwood and had his coat and his boots spat upon by indignant stage robbers, gamblers and murderers, who resented his appearance. Still he remained calm. But when he started on his return trip through the gulch where now is a prosperous and law-abiding city they say he slipped his hands back of his clerical coat and began shooting, and when the calm of evening came upon the town there were five desperadoes out of existence. He deliberately hunted them up, told them what the law of Deadwood was to be, asked for their objections, and when these objections came enforced by a six-shooter he began shooting.

The next day, having information of the proposed hold-up of the Deadwood stage at Lone Tree by bandits, he visited the spot and put two or three ambitious freebooters out of existence. After that he was recognized as the sheriff of Deadwood. In a year's time he made the gulch a respector of the law. He killed only when it was necessary to uphold the law, and in all that time they tell me his voice never rose above the tone level of a woman's.

Strenuous Cabinet Officers.

Roosevelt's preference for the men who do things is well illustrated by his choice of new cabinet officers. Paul Morton, the new secretary of the navy, has been "doing things" effectively all the 47 years of his life. In his chosen field he made a success that might well be envied by any man. Without the assistance of prestige he began his railroad career as a clerk in the land office of the B. & M. railroad of the Burlington system at Burlington in 1872. An ability and desire to hustle soon promoted him above his fellows, and he was transferred from the land office to the freight department, where he soon became assistant general freight agent. From that again to the passenger department as general passenger agent of the Burlington system, and ending his career with the Burlington as general freight agent.

In 18 years from his beginning as an unknown clerk in a railroad office he rose to one of the most important official positions on the road, and to places of prominence in other large corporations as well. It was Morton's strenuousity that accomplished these results, and it was his strenuousity that attracted President Roosevelt to him when he was in need of a cabinet officer.

Victor H. Metcalf is another type of the strenuous westerner. Though of eastern birth he has been a resident of California so long that he has become thoroughly assimilated, and carries with him all the breezy hustle that is characteristic of that section.

An Interesting Character.

Many quaint and interesting characters are to be found among the specialists of the government department; men of unusual ability who have buried themselves in a bureau where they have for years followed without molestation the bent for which they were peculiarly adapted.

Adolph Linden-kohl, 71 years of age and a German by birth, though a naturalized citizen of this country since 1854, died recently. He was the senior draughtsman of the coast and geodetic survey, and had been connected with that department for 50 years.

He spent much of his leisure time in studying the vast physical problems relating to the earth, devoting himself especially to physical geography, oceanography and deep sea temperatures, densities and currents. Numerous articles upon these subjects were written by him and have been published as appendices to the coast and geodetic survey reports, in Poter-mann's Mitteilungen and in the American Journal of Science. He was always much interested in geographical exploration and spent a good deal of time in compiling maps from original sources, unofficially.

His ability was rewarded in the coast survey by promotion through all the grades of his profession until he became a recognized authority on chart publication. Being endowed with a remarkable memory for facts and dates, his intimate acquaintance with the chart work of the survey during the 50 years of his service was of very great value in all matters concerning the compilation of charts from the older records, and the numerous drawings compiled and made by him during the last half century are said to bear witness to the skill and fidelity which distinguished his career. During the civil war, from 1862 to '64, he was detailed to serve with the union army as topographer.

Mr. Linden-kohl was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Washington Academy of Science, the Philosophical Society of Washington and the National Geographic society.
