

Aged 107 and Still Traveling.

[New York Evening Mail.]

A remarkable personage has arrived from Canada, Lator Poplegir by name. He is a Roumanian Hebrew, and has reached the patriarchal age of 107 years. He has the distinction of having lived in three centuries. His extraordinary vitality is shown by the fact that some time ago he determined to go to Canada to see his three sons who settled there years ago. The eldest of the three has passed his eighty-eighth year.

The old father, who shows wonderful mental and physical vigor, was accompanied from Canada by David Groiff, who, although sixty-six, is looked upon by the centenarian as quite a young man.

Groiff states that the patriarch stood the voyage very well, enjoying his meals and taking an interest in what was passing on the liner. Every day he appeared on deck, where he lay dosing in the sun.

After a short stay in London the old man will proceed to Jaffa, and thence to Jerusalem, in fulfillment of the ambition he has long cherished to end his days there.

Queer Coach Road Which Europe Boasts.

[Spare Moments.]

In the old days of canal voyaging captains of boats were not infrequently asked to give a wayfarer a lift. The man was asked if he was willing to work his passage. If he said "Yes" he was put to work driving the horses. In Europe, it seems, a similar custom is practiced on coach passengers.

In the Pyrenees there is a coach road between two villages, one on each side of a mountain 16,000 feet high. After the coach has proceeded a little distance and reached the steep part of the ascent, the conductor begs the passengers to get out, so as to ease the horses. They are even requested to push behind and help the poor animals to drag the huge vehicle uphill.

When at last the summit is reached, each traveler, wiping from his forehead drop of sweat as big as kidney beans, congratulates himself on the breezy ride down the steep slopes of the descent which awaits him.

There is where he makes a mistake, for the conductor, with a sweet smile, begs the gentlemen to be kind enough to hang on to the coach behind, and act the part of a Westinghouse air brake, or else the horses may be injured.

In this manner the terminus of the line is reached, the passengers having pushed the coach all the way up one side of the mountain, and held it back all the way down the other.

In spite of this there is a rush for places on the coach daily, as there has been for half a century.

It's a duty every loyal citizen owes to Paris and Bourbon to send their friends or relations at a distance a copy our history. Price 25 cents.

This May Be True.

Evidently mistaking hailstones for corn or some other kind of food, six valuable Pekin ducks belonging to Samuel Hodgson, of Florence, Col., ate heartily of them to-day and died soon afterward. When out open the fowls were found frozen inside. The life of another of Mr. Hodgson's ducks was saved by pouring hot water into its craw.

The ducks, which had remained in the shelter of a barn during a heavy hailstorm, rushed out when the storm was over, were seen by members of the Hodgson family rapidly eating the icy lumps.

Soon they began to stand on one foot and then on the other as on winter days. One after another they fell to the ground and died within a few minutes. Mr. Hodgson was at a loss to understand the cause of their death until he cut them open.
