

The Best Guaranty of Merit Is Open Publicity.

Every bottle of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., has printed upon its wrapper all the ingredients entering into its composition.

The further fact that neither Dr. Pierce's golden Medical Discovery, the great stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart regulator and blood purifier, nor his "Favorite Prescription" for weak, overworked, broken-down, nervous women, contains any alcohol, also entitles them to a place all by themselves.

Neither of the above medicines contains alcohol, or any harmful, habit-forming drug, as will be seen from a glance at the formula printed on each bottle wrapper. They are safe to use and patent to cure.

Not only do physicians prescribe the above, non-secret medicines largely, but the most intelligent people employ them—people who would not think of using the ordinary patent, or secret medicines.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good." Easy to take as candy.

The Ban Removed.

The board of Curators of Kentucky University held its semi-annual meeting at Lexington Saturday. It was formally decided to remove the ban from inter-collegiate athletics, which has been in force for the past year. The executive committee of the board and the faculty of the University will prescribe regulations controlling the athletic contests, but these regulations will in no way interfere with inter-collegiate games.

Salvation Army Women Exempt.

The city ordinance prohibiting women other than members of the proprietors' families from entering Lexington saloons went into effect Friday, and Mrs. Jones, a Salvation Army leader, incurred of Mayor if she was included in the prohibition. She said that the woman of the Salvation Army secure a considerable part of the Army's funds by soliciting in the saloons. The Mayor told her he did not think the ordinance would be enforced against women who enter saloons on such errands.

Letter Written by Geo. Washington to a Masonic Grand Lodge.

Mrs. Kelley Priest Moore, of North Middletown, this county, has in her possession, an original letter written by George Washington to the Grand Lodge of Masons of Pennsylvania in 1786. The letter came into her possession through her father, the late Rev. J. R. McGinn, who during his younger days was a member of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge. The letter was written, it is supposed, after Washington, while President had been invited to attend some meeting of the Grand Lodge.

Several times members of the Masonic order have tried to obtain possession of the letter from Mrs. Moore, but because the letter is written in Washington's own hand, Mrs. Moore has continually refused to part with the relic. The letter is written on white, crisp paper, and considering its age, is remarkably well preserved. The paper has remained white and the ink has not faded, so that but for the signature and the date one would never know that the letter was not written recently.

Mrs. Moore keeps the letter in an album with many clippings and other relics left to her by her father. The letter is pasted to one of the leaves of the scrap-book and has not been touched for years. Naturally it is highly prized.

Court Day.

There was a fair crowd in town yesterday. M. J. Murphy reports about 100 cattle on the market. Hibber Bros. sold to F. J. Millet 36 head 800-pound cattle at $36 per head. C. F. Judge Hargis on the Stage.

Judge Hargis, the great feudist of Breathitt county, is to be staged. A dispatch from Lexington states that a noted playwright from New York is making a study of the Hargis-Cockrell feud, and will shortly have the Hargis, Callahan, etc., crowd before the footlights. When this play is put on, the "James Boys in Missouri" will probably take a back seat, and Kentucky will once more be advertised to the world as the home of the cut-throat and assassin.

ATLANTA'S EXPERIENCE WITH LOCAL OPTION.

for the sale of liquor in Fulton County for the year 1887. Within the last week five new distilleries have registered and begun operation. Three have doubled their producing capacity from 20 bushels of grain per day to 40 bushels per day. Four have double by increasing from 10 to 20 bushels of grain per day. I have noticed that five more grain distilleries will register and begin operations the last of the month. There are more than twice as many distilleries in operation now than before prohibition went into effect. The production of corn liquor in Georgia during the month of October, 1887, was three times as much as was produced in the corresponding month of October, 1885. My collections for the tax year beginning July 1, 1886, and ending June 30, 1887, were $32,000 in excess of the corresponding year ending June 30, 1885. My collections for the current tax year will be $75,000 greater than for the last year. My collections are almost entirely from liquor. The liquor produced at the grain distilleries finds ready sale as fast as made. At least 95 per cent. of the liquor made in my district is sold in Georgia. Many of the grain distilleries are in dry counties. Respectfully,

THOS. C. CRNSHAW, JR., Collector Internal Revenue, State of Georgia. "The truth of the matter is that the prohibition law is a fraud and it cannot be enforced. That this is true the subjoined statement of the sales of liquor in Atlanta during October, 1887, amply demonstrates: From Griffin, Ga., 3,974 packages containing from one gallon to a barrel. In four days one house shipped 1,400 packages. Madison, Ga., shipped about 550 packages. Augusta, Ga., shipped 150 cases liquor, wine and beer. Lawrenceville, Ga., over 200. Gainesville, Ga., over 250. Chattanooga, Tenn., 10 barrels of whiskey and 15 cases of wine, beer and liquor, besides 800 packages in smaller quantities. Macon, one house, L. Cohen & Co., sold in Atlanta, $4,000 worth of liquor during the month of October, and three more houses also shipped to this place nearly an equal quantity. I am unable to find out the exact amount. Louisville shipped 25 barrels. Cincinnati shipped 15 barrels whisky and four car loads beer. Charleston shipped three car loads of beer. Milwaukee shipped one car load beer. Griffin, Ga., two car loads of beer. Evansville, Ind., one car load of beer. The total expenditures of the city for wine, beer and whisky for the single month of October, 1887, was $272,000. Astonishing as are the above figures, I have something else which will astonish you still more; I, myself, am astonished. There are fifty-seven places in prohibition Atlanta where you can get a drink. These places pay no taxes to the city." At the election held in November, 1 1887, local option was repealed by enormous majority, every district in the city and county going for license prosperity has returned and Atlanta today is one of the most prosperous and progressive cities in the South.

It would have been easy, at that time, for a person in search of such information to have gone to many of the advocates of local-option in Atlanta—as he can go to many of the people of Carlisle today—and found many of them to say that "business has improved and local option is a good thing;" in the face, however, of vacant houses, diminished property values and the records of the criminal courts, such statements would hardly have been convincing. Mere assertion is one thing, argument another. If the advocates of local option wish to convince the intelligent people of this place of its merits, they must prove by facts and figures, based on the experience of other cities—which alone are convincing—that local option will not only decrease intemperance but benefit both the moral and material interests of the City of Paris.

It is admitted by all that conditions are better now than ever before in this city. The laws are strictly enforced; saloons are closed on Sunday; minors cannot obtain liquor in them and public gambling has entirely ceased. The officials entrusted with the enforcement of the law have still three years to serve and there is not even a possibility of any change in their policy. Then why strive after the unattainable? The coming of the millennium cannot be hastened by law, not even by a local option law.

It is again suggested that, as mere matter of public policy, it is "Better to endure those ills we have Than to fly to others that we know not of."

Horse Shoes And Bad Luck.

Chitto Harjo was pleading in Washington for the Indians' right to roam in nomad fashion like their fathers. "They tell us to trust to fortune," Chitto Harjo said, and when we'll get our rights. But we are tired of trusting to fortune. Fortune has used us Indians as it used the paleface instructress at the Indian school in 97." Chitto Harjo smiled and went on: "This instructress found a horseshoe and to get good fortune put it under her pillow along with her false teeth. In the morning in the hurry of dressing she substituted the shoe for the teeth and did not discover her mistake till her affianced husband asked her in tones of horror at breakfast what was the matter with her mouth."
