THE MODERN GIRL AT HOME

Dainty and Pretty, and All That, But Their Ways Would Shock Their Grandmothers.

The two girls had written, asking the woman to tea. They wanted to meet her, to see how she looked and behaved, for some reason or other. When she arrived she found a beautiful studio furnished in exquisite style, for one of the girls was an interior decorator. She found the two girls of much daintiness and prettiness and exceedingly modest and lovely, so much so that she was half afraid to breathe in their presence, afraid she might say or do something to shock them, having lived for some years in a Bohemian set. She drank the tea they gave her and talked on different topics which she thought would interest young girls. Finally one of the girls, pointing to a cigarette stub in an ash tray on the window sill, said apologetically:

"I suppose that shocks you awfully, doesn't it? It belongs to Stella. She will smoke now and then."

The woman took heart. "It doesn't shock me so very much," said she. "I'd like one."

Stella hastened to find the box of cigarettes.

"That was why I left home," she said. "My father told me I had either to leave home or quit smoking."

The other girl, in the beautiful and dainty white lawn, with small pink roses in it, arose and going to the drawer of her desk brought out a box. She opened it and took out a small perfumed cigar.

"These," said she, "suit me better. Cigarettes are too mild."

High Title Denied Washington.

A friend calls attention to the fact that Washington, although commander in chief during the Revolution and again in 1798 during the French war, which did not really happen, did not bear the title of full general. On July 2, 1798, President Adams nominated him "to be lieutenant-general and commander in chief." This was followed by the act of March 3, 1798, of which the ninth section read "that a commander of the army of the United States shall be appointed, and commissioned by the style of 'general of the armies of the United States,' and that the present office and title of lieutenant-general shall thereafter be abolished." President Adams, jealous for the executive prerogative as commander in chief, made no appointment under this act and Washington died as lieutenant-general.

LIVED UP TO IT.

She—What a finely chiseled mouth you have! It ought to be on a girl's face.

He—Well, I seldom miss an opportunity.

His Last Call.

The cuckoo clock had announced the hour when graveyards yawn and specters white hold carnival, and still he lingered.

"My dear girl," he whispered, reaching for his hat and cane. "I am dreadfully shy of that bulldog. Would you mind seeing me to the door?"

"With the greatest of pleasure," exclaimed the weary girl, "with the greatest of pleasure."

And never again did he darken that doorway.

Works Both Ways.

"Think twice before you speak," is a Good rule, and so is this: "Sometimes 'tis well to think a time Or two before you listen."

Discouraging.

"Goodheart is having a serious time with his humanitarian tenements."

"How's that?"

"He's giving the tenants bathtubs in $6-a-month suites and now they want him to furnish the soap."

COMFORTING.

Farmer—Yes, I want a boy. Can you jump well?

Boy—Jump? Yes, zurr.

Farmer—Could you jump a five-bar gate?

Boy—Um—Yes. I s'pose so, zurr.

Farmer—Well, I think you'll do, then. You see, some of our bulls are a trifle wild at times!

FOUND TIME FOR LITERATURE

English Literary Man Astonished to Find Accurate Scholarship Among Americans.

An English literary man, who visited this country some years ago to lecture, frankly declared that he came not expecting to find accurate scholarship among Americans, especially on purely literary subjects, adding affably:

"You have been too busy and useful a nation in practical matters to give much time to the arts and graces of learning."

During the dinner at which he made this remark he criticized Shakespeare, sharply declaring that his metaphors often were absurd, "as, for example," he said, "Sleep that knits up the ravined sleeve of care." How ridiculous to figure sleep as knitting up a torn sleeve of a coat!

A young American sitting near him said modestly: "I think the word is not sleeve, but slave, the thin fluff of a damaged web. It is a technical expression among weavers."

"In the United States probably," retorted the critic irritably. "Shakespeare never could have heard it. He meant sleeve."

"I believe," persisted the American, "the word is printed sleeve in all the old editions. It is not an American word, but has been used for centuries by weavers in Scotland and the north of England."

The visitor frowned and then with English frankness said, laughing: "Thank you. I was mistaken. Perhaps I am mistaken about other things and will be corrected before I leave your shores."

To Drive Dull Care Away.

What! dull, when you do not know what gives its loveliness of form to the lily, its depth of color to the violet, its fragrance to the rose; when you do not know in what consists the venom of the adder, any more than you can imitate the glad movements of the dove. What! dull, when earth, air and water are all alike mysteries to you, and when as you stretch out your hand you do not touch anything the properties of which you have mastered; while all the time nature is inviting you to talk earnestly with her, to subdue her and to be blessed by her! Go away, man; learn something, do something, understand something, and let me hear no more of your dullness!—Sir Arthur Helps.

CONSIDERATE.

Father (calling downstairs)—Mary, just ask your young man if he doesn't think it's pretty near bedtime.

Mary—Yes, papa, and George says if you're sleepy, go to bed, by all means.

Information Wanted.

"Johnny," said the teacher to an incorrigible pupil, "you may go over there in the corner and stand for the present."

Ten minutes later the little fellow began to cry.

"Well, what's the matter, now?" queried the teacher.

"How long do I have to stand here before I get the p-present?" sobbed Johnny.
