The Damage To Crops.

In his monthly report Agricultural Commissioner Rankin tells something about the damage to Kentucky crops as a result of the severe weather in April. The Commissioner says he has had advices from nearly every county in the State. He summarizes these in the statement that the frosts of April 22, 24 and 25 were "very destructive to wheat, fruit, corn, potatoes and all kinds of garden truck."

Going into some details of the damage Mr. Rankin says the wheat crop of the State probably will be only 75 per cent of an average crop. In fact he thinks the full amount of damage will not be known until the crop is threshed. A great deal of corn was planted in March and April—more, the Commissioner says, than for many years, but "much of it will have to be planted over again as that which has not been entirely killed has turned yellow and is very much weakened." The acreage of corn is "greater than ever before known in Kentucky."

Early in the spring prospects were favorable for a bumper production of potatoes. The planting was earlier than for many years, but "in nearly every instance the heavy frosts have almost completely killed the whole crop." There are reports from many counties of damage to tobacco plants, but the acreage will not be affected, owing to the fact that an unusual number of beds has been sown. The condition for plants in the whole State is 90; in the dark tobacco districts it is 88, owing to the heavy snows last month.

There is sad news for fruit lovers in the Commissioner's report. Advices indicate that the fruit crop generally "has been killed or injured so that nearly all of it will fall off the trees."

Grapes and small fruits, such as strawberries and blackberries, were "almost entirely killed."

There are reported few instances of damage to oats and the crop "holds fair to be a good one." Rye and clover have been damaged. Alfalfa is looking well and the same is said of grasses in general.

Taking it all in all it is rather hard to find much that is encouraging, either to producers or consumers, in Mr. Rankin's April report. One hopeful feature of the situation is that farm work is well advanced all over the State. Much of it will have to be done over, which means double trouble for a vast number of farmers and truck growers. There is time enough yet to raise bumper crops of tobacco and corn and to get good results from the garden. It is to be hoped that a part of the fruit crop has been spared, despite the pessimistic assertions of the Commissioner.

Companies Settle Fire Losses.

The cases growing out of the night rider troubles at Princeton in the fall of 1907, when the warehouse of the Imperial Tobacco Company was burned, have been settled by the insurance companies which were defendants in suits filed by the company to recover the amount lost. The compromise was merely nominal, however, the companies paying an amount said to be less than $1,000.

The outcome of the cases is regarded by the insurance companies as a great victory, because the "riot clause" of the policies, which provide that in the event of fire being due to riot or insurrection or other similar outbreaks the companies are not liable for the loss, was upheld by the Court of Appeals. This establishes the law in Kentucky, and apparently sets a precedent which has been regarded elsewhere, as a Federal Court in California recently held the same way in cases involving much the same principle.

The reason the compromise was made was because of cases sent to the Court of Appeals on a question of law alone. Having established the principal point at issue, the companies were unwilling to continue the fight, which would have to be carried through all the courts over again, involving great expense, and so agreed to settle with the Imperial.

Insurance men generally believe that there will be no further night rider troubles, and risks are being accepted on tobacco on a normal basis.

Chinn Gets $2,000.

At Frankfort the case of the Foster-Milburn Company against Jack P. Chinn, from Mercer, was affirmed and the patent medicine company will have to pay Col. Jack the sum of $20,000 for using his picture as an advertisement or their medicine. This is the second trial of the case. On the first trial the jury gave a verdict for $2,500, and on the second trial $2,000. The appeal was prosecuted from the order of court refusing to quash the summons, but no appeal was taken from the verdict of $2,000, so they will not have to pay it.

McCreary Will Run if Nominated

Senator James B. McCreary is not seeking the nomination as the Democratic candidate for Governor of Kentucky, according to the Richmond Climax, but if the honor is conferred upon him he will accept and make the race for the Governorship. The Climax says: "Senator James B. McCreary arrived home last week from New York and has been warmly welcomed by his many friends here. A Climax reporter asked Senator McCreary if he would yield to the wishes of his many admirers and become a candidate for Governor. He stated that the Democracy of Kentucky had been exceedingly kind to him and had bestowed honors for which he was very grateful and for this reason he could not ask more from his party."

"We feel safe in saying that while he will not seek the nomination, he will not reject a call from the Democratic party to be its standard bearer in the coming gubernatorial race. Senator McCreary is receiving letters from all parts of the Commonwealth urging him to announce his candidacy. We predict that in due time he will be heard from and the Democracy will understand that he will hoist its banner if desired."

Kentucky Bank Tax Law Upheld.

The United States Supreme Court, Justice White dissenting, affirmed with costs the case of the Commonwealth of Kentucky for the use and benefit of Boyle county against the Citizens' National Bank of Danville. It was argued March 10 by John W. Yerkes for the State and Robert T. Quisenberry for the bank.

The case involved the constitutionality of the law taxing shares of bank stock. The Citizens' Bank held that this law is repugnant to the Fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, but the Kentucky Court of Appeals did not sustain this. The Supreme Court upheld the Kentucky court and the constitutionality of the Kentucky law.

Boyle county sought taxes on the stock of the Citizens' Bank for the years 1892, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898 and 1899. M. J. Farris, President, and J. A. Quisenberry, cashier, were named as defendants in the action. This decision affects the bank tax law of many States.

The opinion handed down by Justice Lurton makes the point that the liability has been imposed in this case exclusively upon shareholders domiciled in the State and not upon any living outside Kentucky. The bank, says Justice Lurton has herefore neither been deprived of any rights nor compelled to bear any burden in conflict with the statute upon which it relies for protection.

"The liability of the bank is that of the shareholder" reads the opinion "and its reimbursement must come from those who held the shares at the time the law was enforced."

The arguments of the bank concerning non-resident shareholders an reimbursement are the only two dealt with by the court.
