NO DINNER FOR BRUIN

BEAR'S ANTICIPATED FEAST DID NOT MATERIALIZE.

Eagles Assumed They Had Prior Claim on Sturgeon, and in the Language of Modern Small Boy, "Made Good."

An Oregon bear who wanted a fish dinner felt that his desire was in a fair way to be satisfied when he found a large sturgeon washed up on the bank of the Columbia river. Two eagles had claimed the prize by right of discovery, but the bear at once tried to dispossess them. The results of his effort were disappointing to him.

One of the eagles had flown to her nest with pieces of the fish and the other was picking away at the remnants when the bear came tearing through the brush. Bruin walked straight up to the feast, but the eagle was not to be scared away. He flapped his wings and stood on the defensive. The bear paused a moment and then rushed at the eagle. The bird eluded him and soared into the air, screaming for his mate. She came swooping down from the nest and joined forces in an attack on the bear, which was so busy tearing the sturgeon that he paid no attention to the royal birds until they sank their talons in his flesh.

The howl of rage which bruin let out then showed that he had been "both pained and hurt." He reared up on his haunches and clawed savagely at the birds, which whirled easily about him. One would make a dash at his face and eyes, while the other would hit him in the back of the neck like a bolt from a catapult. For ten minutes or more the bear stood up to the scratch, but by that time he had had scratching enough and began to evince signs of wanting to get away.

As soon as he was on all fours the eagles were upon him, and he had to get on his haunches again to use his paws effectively. The blood was streaming down his face and showing in great spots all over his glossy hide, but the object of the eagles appeared to be to get at his eyes, and he seemed fully aware of it. He was very anxious to get back to the cover of the brush, and the eagles were just as anxious to prevent him. Every time he turned toward the bushes they would plump down on his head and try to sink their talons in his eyes, and drum his ear with their strong pinions.

It was nearly half an hour from the time the bear came out of the brush before he was able to drag himself back under its friendly cover, and he was the most dilapidated-looking bear imaginable.

The eagles flew to a tree and smoothed their ruffed feathers. Then, as their young were calling for more food, they resumed their work of carving and serving the sturgeon.

It Happens Often.

Have you ever tried to take a message on a telephone when cars are passing with a great rumble in the street outside?

"Can I take the message?"
 "Would you kindly tell Jack that his mother is dying—rumble—when he is through—"
 "Is dying when he is through?"
 "No! She is—(rumble)—to see—(rumble)—his work."
 "She is to see his work? All right."
 "Wait! I say his mother is dying to—(rumble)—work."
 "Do you want me to tell him that?"
 "Yes, please. And also to come home as soon as—(rumble)—he is doing."
 "Doing what?"
 "No matter what he is doing! Do you—(rumble)—that?"
 "No, I don't get that."
 "I say, do you get that?"
 "Oh, almost."
 "All right; be sure and tell him."
 And you proceed to tell Jack that his mother is dying, but would rather work, so he had better call her up—Harvard Lampon.

Fields' Shaft of Real Wit.

Charles A. Bigelow, the comedian, who died a few weeks ago, was made to order for the wags of the old Weber and Fields company, says a Chicago writer. He knew it, but he couldn't defend himself and was hopped on pretty regularly by Collier, Dailey and Fields. Bigelow's appearance led to one of the best impromptu lines ever put over. One show presented him as a Spanish grandee who was giving a garden party for his daughter (Lillian Russell). Bigelow's lean calves were in white stockings and his bald head was partly covered with a bull fighter's hat, worn rakishly. Fields, looking him over, asked the significance of the attire, and Bigelow replied that he was dressed that way out of compliment to his daughter. All through the rehearsal period Fields fished for a line to fit in here, and it came the opening night when he said: "I should hate to see you dressed as an insult."

Rich, But—

Wilbur Wright, at a tea in Dayton, was talking about a daredevil French airman.

"Is he very successful?" a banker's daughter asked.

Mr. Wright smiled his faint, sardonic smile as he replied: "Very successful! Indeed he is very successful! Why, his false arm is crusted with diamonds, his artificial skull is made of platinum—platinum is fourteen times dearer than gold, you know—and both his wooden legs are gold-mounted and full-jeweled."

DID HIS WORK THOROUGHLY

Central African Explorer Well Equipped to Make Lasting Record of His Journey.

To make an accurate description of the route taken through an unknown country requires an amount of hard and incessant labor of which few persons have any conception. An instance in point may be taken from the explorations of William Junker in Central Africa.

This man, a Russian by birth, spent five years endeavoring to trace the course of the River Welle, which lies between the headwaters of the Nile and the Congo, with a view to determine the position of the watershed between the two rivers.

When actually on the march he wore a coat designed by himself, having numerous large and small pockets especially arranged for the handy use of his watch, compass, aneroid, thermometer and note books. From one of its buttons hung three pencils: one red for marking his route, another blue for noting the rivers and streams, the third black for recording the times of starting and halting, together with all the more notable incidents of the day's march.

In a little notebook, ruled for the purpose, the exact time of starting was put down, thereafter, at the end of every five minutes the direction in which he was proceeding was determined by a glance at the compass and carefully noted, while occasionally the readings of the aneroid and the thermometer were taken.

A brook crosses the path. With the blue pencil it is instantly designated, as well as the direction of its current and its estimated breadth and depth. Every change in the character of the country is entered, as from wooded to grass lands, or from desert to fertile soil. The prominent objects encountered on the way, with their apparent height and distance, are all indicated. So also are the names of the tribes, and any local information that may have been obtained.

The time and duration of every halt is carefully kept, as it is necessary to know the actual marching time in order to calculate the distance gone. Doctor Junker's uniform rate was a little over three miles an hour.

When the night camp was reached the first duty of the explorer, after supper, was to copy all the notes made during the day into a large book; one page generally, though sometimes two, being used to record a day's march. If the night were clear the traveler's work would end with an observation for determining the position of the camp. This done, he felt that he had earned his right to rest.

In this manner Junker traveled on foot 4,000 miles through a country a large part of which had never before been visited by a white man.—Harper's Weekly.

Found Bones of Soldiers.

During the recent excavations in the historic ground of Abbey lane, Athlone, Ireland, for the commonplace purpose of constructing a sewer, some remarkable finds were made by the excavating party. Not far beneath the soil they came in contact with a large quantity of human remains. There were no symptoms of coffins, but several skulls and bones were thrown up. Evidences of a very substantial foundation which were also unearthed, four feet under the surface, and the human remains buried apparently in a trench in the immediate vicinity, gave rise to the supposition that the skeletons were those of the Irish soldiers who fought in the sieges near the famous old bridge of Athlone. The Abbey was founded by Cistercian monks the same year that the site of the castle was taken over by King John, with other lands adjoining, which belonged to the monks; and in exchange the king gave to the monastery the lands known today as Monksland, on the borders of the town. A holy water fount was also unearthed.

Hogs Loose and on Rampage.

The sleeping citizens on a certain street in Rochester, N. Y., were awakened the other morning before daylight by an unusual noise. What the awakened people saw was a strange sight when they shivered their ways to the windows and looked into the street. The roadway was filled with a drove of hogs, whose grunting and squealings had joined to cause the disturbance. A short time before they had been snugly packed in live stock cars on the railroad. But there had been a wreck and thousands of hogs were released from their prisons. They invaded the town and started immediately on the chief business of their existence, the acquirement and disposal of food. Some householders sought the morning paper only to find a disconsolate hog sitting on the doorstep, but many others were startled from time to time by noisy visits to the garbage pails in the alley. And the garbage collectors' wagons were the leaders of processions. It was well into the day before the swine had been rounded up and again put into strong captivity.

Here is a Real Wit.

The town council held a big banquet. One of the councilors came arrayed in a tartan waistcoat. He was subjected to a great number of curious looks. At length one of his brother councilors, unable to restrain his curiosity, remarked: "I say, what possessed you to come in a tartan waistcoat?" "Well," came the witty answer, "I'm not like some of you. Always when I dine I like to keep a check over my stomach."

ACTUAL STARVATION.

Facts About Indigestion and its and its Relief that Should Interest You.

Although indigestion and dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good looking, good smelling and good tasting food because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to fit yourself to digest any good food.

We believe we can relieve dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to every one who will use it who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely nothing could be fairer.

We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want everyone troubled with indigestion or dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to soothe the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect and healthy digestion and assimilation.

A 25c package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases a longer treatment of course is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases we have two larger sizes, which sell for 50c and $1. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, G. S. Varden & Son.

Nordica at Lexington.

One of the world's greatest singers, Mme. Lillian Nordica, a queen of the operatic stage and the greatest Wagnerian singer in the world, will appear at the Lexington Opera House in concert on Monday, April 15, 1912.

Lillian Nordica has a place all her own in the hearts of the American public and she has even succeeded in conquering the narrowness and prejudices of [the European capital, for there as here, she has been claimed as one of the world's greatest singers.

It can be indisputably said that Nordica is the most popular of all prima donnas. To the student of music her singing is ever an inspiration, while to the casual musiclover and general public it is an unending source of delight.

In days to come, never to have heard Nordica will be considered as great a loss of opportunity as it is looked upon in this generation never to have heard Johnny Lind or Adeline Patti.

At her concert not only will we hear Nordica, but the program will have an additional attraction, in fact, two, in Myron, Whitney, the eminent American basso, and Romayne Simmons, the great accompanist.

The sale of seats will open Tuesday, April 9, all orders accompanied by a remittance will receive prompt attention. The prices will be lower floor, $2; balcony, $1, $1.50 and $2; gallery 50 cents.

Society is like a sleeping bag—all right when you're in but not much to look at from the outside.—Chicago Record-Herald.

You will look a good while before you find medicine that is better for coughs and colds than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It not only gives relief—it cures. Try it when you have a cough or cold and you are certain to be pleased with the prompt cure which it will effect. For sale by all dealers.

In Desperate Mood.

"That prima donna has a voice like an angel's." "You think so," responded the impresario, resentfully. "Well, I don't know how an angel talks when things don't go to suit her. But if I thought they all sounded like this prima donna, I'd think twice before wanting to go to heaven."

Why He Was Late.

"What made you so late?" "I met Smithson." "Well, that is no reason why you should be an hour late getting home to supper." "I know, but I asked him how he was feeling, and he insisted upon telling me about his stomach trouble." "Did you tell him to take Chamberlain's Tablets?" "Sure, that is what he needs." "Sold by all dealers."
