Unique Storage Vault.

A Berlin storage vault, designed especially for tracing drawing, consists of earthenware pipes a few inches in diameter imbedded in a mass of concrete. The tubes are closed with covers of stamped steel, and these have space for numbers or other marks for indexing the contents. To avoid accumulation of water from the extinction of fire or any other cause, the tubes are slightly inclined toward the opening. This vault was put to use about four years ago, and the tracings that have been stored ever since have been not only kept in safety, but have been preserved in a perfect condition that is attributed to the even temperature.

Plague Among Plants.

Phylloxera, which have often laid waste to the vines of France, etc., has appeared among the vines in the South of the Province of Buenos Ayres, and the Ministry of Agriculture is requested to open a disinfecting station at Blanca for plants, seeds, etc., as it is surmised that this plague must have been imported from Europe, as the vineyards in Argentina have hitherto been perfectly free from same.

Chile Rich in Gold.

Within the last ten years gold has been mined in every Chilean province.

Beards Were Sacred.

Beards were regarded as a sacred possession by the ancient races. The Jews were proud of the beards and wore them through the days of their Egyptian bondage, although the Egyptians shaved. The Greeks and Romans of the ancient days mostly shaved, and the term "barbarous" (beard wearing) was applied for a long period to people who were regarded as out of the pale of polite society. Beards have been taxed occasionally, as in Russia by Peter the Great, and at an earlier date in England.

WARM SLOP BEST FOR HOGS

Helps to Break Down Feed Better and it Induces Better Circulation of Animal's Blood.

Whether intended for breeding hogs or for fattening hogs, it is better at this time of the year to mix the slop up with hot instead of cold water. Fattening hogs handle large quantities of feed and considerable energy is given off in the process of digestion which is eaten without much waste, and yet even fattening hogs do better if their slop is warmed.

A great many of our best feeders, says the Farm, Stock and Home, now make it a practice to feed slop or at least considerable water up until the very last of the feeding process, and the majority of them warm the water they use. Warm water helps to break down the feed better, and it induces a better circulation of blood, to the digestive tract than does cold water. Breeding stock that gets less feed has no surplus energy to spend in warming water, and if it is given cold slop, it must use energy that might be put to far better use to warm it. In other words, it is cheaper to use natural fuel than to use the fuel inside of the pig's body by the breaking down of food nutrients.

One of the great difficulties always encountered with breeding sows during the winter is to get them to drink sufficient water. They should drink a great deal of it, not alone because they need it for body functions, but also that they will be kept satisfied without eating so much dry feed as to make them overfat. Water fills without furnishing many nutrients.

Under ordinary conditions, as soon as water begins to get real cold, hogs refuse to drink much of it, and so they require a larger ration of other feed before they are satisfied. If on the other hand the water is warmed and is mixed in sufficient quantity with their feed they will take it into their systems without the slightest objections and will be much better off for it.

The feed bill will also be smaller at the same time. Whether the slop is warmed for fattening stock or not, we would certainly advise that it be for the breeding stock. Where the herd is small, it is often feasible to warm the water for slop in the house, but in case of a large herd one of the various feed cookers on the market would no doubt best be procured.

Generous Meal.

Possibly the most generous meal in the world is at a railroad halt between St. Petersburg and Moscow. About midnight you walk into a huge hall spread with hot and cold meats, tea, vegetables, fish of all kinds to be sampled, vodka at hand. Everybody walks around and takes what he wishes at that moment. The train sounds the departing note. The passengers walk out and say at the door what they have eaten and drunk, and pay. Russia is said to be a dishonest country but this system pays. The Russian won't cheat the people who provide the super.

Mysterious People.

Albanians are a mysterious people. What was their origin? "Perhaps," hazards W. A. Moore, "they were the Palasians who have puzzled the Greek historians; and possibly they were the Myrmidons whom Achilles brought to Troy. They have kept their blood and their own strange language, and the civilization of Europe has rolled on and left them in the mountains. Every man guards his own and fears his neighbor unless he is a sure friend. There are no villages only houses dotted at intervals high up roud wide valleys. And every house is a fortress. The walls are of immense thickness, and their only openings are loop holes.

Theory Exaggerated

Long ago the phenomenal power of the stomach of the ostrich was immortalized in the idiom of all the world's great languages. To have the "stomach of an ostrich" is the synonym of incomparable digestive power. "Yet," says a writer, "the whole thing from beginning to end is nature faking, pure and simple. As a matter of fact, the ostrich, if not a confirmed dyspeptic, has a most delicate digestion. The successful feeding of ostriches in captivity requires constant care.

Norwegian Product.

A product of Norway is wood flour, which is made from sawdust and comes from clean spruce or pine logs which are first freed from any particle of bark. This Norwegian wood flour is a different article from the wood pulp which is used in the various manufacturers of dynamite and linoleum. Most of the flour which is made is exported, and the principal markets are England and Germany, though the United States takes a small amount.

"All is Well That Ends Well"

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness, sleeplessness and general ill health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be assimilated and carried to the blood. On the other hand, the blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion. In turn, the nerves are not fed on good, red blood and we see those symptoms of nervous breakdown. It is not head work that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip—bronchitis—consumption. Fortify the body now with
