ANOTHER FREAK SUIT IN COUNTY OF NICHOLAS

Our sister county of Nicholas is getting quite a reputation for freak suits. Recently hundreds of dollars were expended in litigation to decide the ownership of a barrel of corn but it was compromised. Recently two Nicholas farmers, P. H. Harney and Frank Teel, became involved in a controversy over the ownership of about one-sixteenth of an acre of land, said to be worth not more than $1. The case was decided by the court, which established a line at a different place than either party claimed. The sum of $150 has been expended so far and it is likely that the case will be carried to the Court of Appeals.

Major W. N. McKelvey, of Chicago, now owns the sword of Balboa.

LOW STAGE OF STONER REVEALS OLD DAM

The present low stage of Stoner creek, which is at the lowest stage in thirty years, reveals an old dam which crosses the stream at a point below the cleaning plant of E. F. Spears & Son. Many citizens are taking advantage of the opportunity to view the remains of the ancient structure, which only once before in almost a century has been visible.

The dam was constructed of timbers and stones, and was the first built to furnish a water power for running a mill which was built on a nearby site in spite of the fact that the timbers have been constantly buried beneath the volume of water. Many of them are in a perfect state of preservation. One timber roughly hewn from a coffee bean tree, shows not the slightest indication of decay, although nearly a century has passed since it was first put in its position. Mr. Chas. Foote, one of the oldest citizens of Paris, whose recollection of the dam is very clear, was one of the interested spectators Sunday afternoon, and with an axe chopped several chips from the log, a difficult task, owing to the hardened condition of the wood.
