PUBLIC NOTICE.

Two-thirds of the people of Paris use hydrant water for drinking purposes. The less water in Stoner the greater the probability of pollution. Do not use it extravagantly. It is better to sacrifice the beauty of the lawn or the fruitfulness of the garden than to chance a human life.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

"THE LAST DANCE."

—Youth and beauty predominated in the assembly that gathered at the Masonic Temple, (Elks' Hall) Friday night to participate in the pleasures of the last subscription dance of the season. These entertainments, which have been the most notable of any ever given by the younger society element of Paris, are now interrupted by the spectre of "school days," which will take most of the dancers back to book and studies.

The dance, which was promoted by Messrs. Ireland Davis and Lucien Arnsparger, was a dainty affair, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The hall was beautifully decorated in green, white and tango yellow, long ropes of Southern smilax draped from the chandeliers leading their tones to the color scheme. The famous Wright's Saxophone Trio from Columbus, O., stationed in the balcony, furnished dance music that couldn't be resisted, and from 9:30 to 4, with an intermission from 12 to 1, nimble feet went through the mazes of popular dances to the silent accompaniment of laughing eyes and happy hearts. At midnight a luncheon, consisting of old ham, chicken salad, beaten biscuits, cheese and nut sandwiches, pickles and coffee, was served.

Messrs. Davis and Arnsparger, now known as "Premier Dance Promoters," contributed largely to the pleasures and success of the event, as indeed, they have all others, and the guests of the evening were warm in their praise.
The following guests were present

Columbia Theatre To-day.

A Tragedy of the Orient, (Bronoho)—Miss Tsura Aoki and a company, made up for the most part of Japanese players, have done well in this two-reel with a story which has a distinctively Oriental flavor.

"Sealed Order" in two parts, is the tale of the other feature for to-day. J. Warren Kerrigan plays the leading part.

Columbia To-morrow.

Episode No. 8—The Wiles of a Woman—The conspirators determine to get rid of Norton, who is too active against them. They carry out several dastardly schemes all of which fail. Finally, in desperation, they decide to throw him through a man-hole and let him drown in the sewer. Their plan progresses successfully. He is thrown through the man-hole, but fate, playing his side of the battle, brings about his rescue after a terrible struggle for life in the darkness of the sewer. The Countess says he bears a charmed life. They decide that to estrange Florence and Norton, who are secretly engaged, will help them. Braine and the Countess form a shrewd plan which the Countess artfully carries out, whereby Florence is deceived into believing Norton false to her and she flees from the Countess' apartment in heart-broken grief.

SOME BOOTLEGER.

When Patrolman James Moreland searched Sherman Dupree, colored, whom he arrested yesterday on a charge bootlegging whisky in a local option precinct, the search revealed liquor in varying quantities, amounting in all to about six quarts cunningly concealed in various portions of Dupree's clothing. He was given $50 and costs and serve the county for a few months.

"POTASH & PERLMUTTER."

There is a laugh in every line of "Potash & Perlmutter," the famous comedy of the cloak and suit trade that manager A. H. Woods will present at the Paris Grand on Thursday, September 10th, direct from its second year at the Cohan Theatre, New York City. The three-act play is one long riot of humor—humor broken from time to time by pathos and suspense enough to form a strong dramatic contrast which holds the audience spell-bound until the very last word is spoken. Gregg's Imperial Orchestra of the Colonial Theatre, Lexington, will furnish the music.
