

IMPORTANCE OF HEALTHY KIDNEYS

Paris Readers Should Learn to Keep the Kidneys Well.

The kidneys have a big work to do. All the blood in the body is coursing through the kidneys constantly to be fed of poisonous matter. It is a heavy enough task when the kidneys are well, but a cold, chill fever or some thoughtless exposure is likely to irritate, inflame and congest the kidneys and interrupt the purifying work.

Then the aching frequently begins and is often accompanied by some irregularity of the urine—too frequent passages sediment or retention. Thousands testify to the wonderful merit of Doan's Pills, a remedy for the kidneys only, that has been used in kidney troubles 50 years: You will make no mistake in following this Paris citizen's advice:

Mrs. Ida Huffman, 115 Main Street, Paris, Ky., says: "We think Doan's Pills are just fine. We willingly confirm the tatemt we gave some years ago recommending them. I suffered from pains across the small of my back. Seeing Doan's Pills advertised I got a supply at Wilson's Drug Store and gave them a trial. I was very much pleased with the results."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Huffman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

HONOR PAST HISTORY

Warsaw, Ill., Erects Monument to Commemorate Ft. Edwards.

Was the Farthest Western Outpost During the Second War With Great Britain—Commands View of Mississippi.

Warsaw, Illinois.—Historic days of a century ago have been honored at Warsaw, Illinois, in the erection there of a monument in commemoration of Fort Edwards, the farthest western outpost during the second war with Great Britain. In 1814 Zachary Taylor, then a major in the United States army, selected the high bluffs overlooking the Mississippi river at Warsaw as the most advantageous point available for a frontier stockade, commanding as they did a sweeping view for miles to north and west. Today the point where the monument stands is said to afford the most beautiful river view along the Mississippi.

On September 29 and 30 and October 1 the monument will be dedicated by the state of Illinois in connection with a centennial jubilee, and the principal speakers at that time will be Governor Edward F. Dunne and the representatives of the state in congress.

For ten years after its erection Fort Edwards was the headquarters of United States troops. It was of particular value to the government in dealing with the Indians, among whom English agents continually were endeavoring to create trouble. At that time the protection of settlers in that region was not concerning the government in that they had not begun to arrive. Not long after the fort was built, though, people working toward the West began to locate in the neighborhood of Fort Edwards, and for years it housed many families who took advantage of its shelter until they were able to secure locations of their own.

In Zachary Taylor's time the region was heavily wooded. Directly across the Mississippi is the boundary line between Iowa and Missouri. At that time all of Iowa was in the Sac and Fox Indian reservation, and each spring, after the ice went out, the Indians came down the Des Moines river, which empties into the Mississippi across from Warsaw, and there met traders from St. Louis. That in itself was one reason for Zachary Taylor's selection of the Illinois bluffs at Warsaw as a point of vantage for Fort Edwards.

Gradually civilization changed the nature of the country, but the years have not lessened the grandeur of its river scenes. Progress has marked the points where the red men met the traders from the south. Today from Fort Edwards point the great Keokuk power dam may be seen one mile to the north as a monument to the advance of a once desolate region.

Fort Edwards was named after the first governor of Illinois, Ninian W. Edwards. Toward the erection of the monument in its memory the state of Illinois appropriated $2,500.

The old stockade did not achieve any particular notoriety as a scene of battle. But it was a landmark in the civilization of the great Mississippi valley, and as such deserves the honor that Illinois now pays it.

Among other things Warsaw is noted historically as the boyhood home of John Hay, and the house where his father and mother lived and died still stands, within two blocks of Fort Edwards point.

The new monument is built of Barre granite, and is fifty feet in height. On the sides will be placed bronze tablets of Zachary Taylor, the fort, and of Governor Edwards.

THE BOURBON BAR PASSES RESOLUTIONS

In Respect to the Memory of Clifton Arnsparger.

At a meeting of the Bourbon Bar Association held at the Court House on Thursday morning, out of respect to the memory of Clifton Arnsparger, Hon. E. M. Dickson, Judge Denis Dundon and Judge Harmon Stitt were appointed a Committee to draft resolutions. At a subsequent meeting, Judge Stitt, on behalf of the Committee, presented the following, which were unanimously adopted: PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS. Clifton Arnsparger was admitted to the Bourbon Bar on October 18, 1886.

In 1892 he was elected County Attorney and served eight years with great credit to himself and eminent satisfaction to that portion of the public that believes in the impartial enforcement of law and order.

For nearly thirty years he was in active practice. In relation to his clients he was faithful, painstaking, indefatigable, true and honest. In his daily intercourse with his fellow attorneys he was courteous, kindly, sincere in his agreements and insistent upon the ethics of the profession.

He was not a great lawyer, but he accomplished the purpose of his employment by perseverance and patience.

He was not an orator, but he possessed the rare faculty of expressing his thoughts in terse, well chosen words, with an earnestness that bore the impress of sincerity.

He was a man of affairs. He took interest in all public movements, and he gave financial backing to public enterprises. He contributed largely to movements that undertook public betterment. He devoted time, labor and money to the Church, the Y. M. C. A. and missions; and as a member of the Board of Education, the good he accomplished is known and appreciated by his associates.

He had faith in Paris, as shown by his investments in realty, in her banks, her Building Association, her Opera House, her Fair and Telephone Companies, and many other utilities for the common weal.

On all moral questions at issue it was never necessary to inquire where he stood. Without question of material gain or loss; unheeding social advancement or decline, he stood for what in his estimation was for the betterment of mankind.

Therefore, be it Resolved:

That in the death of Clifton Arnsparger the Bourbon Bar has lost an earnest, conscientious, upright member, the community a worthy citizen and his family a faithful husband and loving father.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be spread at length upon the Circuit Court records, and that an attested copy be presented to the family.

RESOLVED, That the Circuit Court be requested to adjourn for one day during the November term, out of respect to his memory.

GREAT EXCITEMENT.

(From Barbourville Advocate, whose Editor is some writer.)

Down at John Smith's not long ago just as the sunbeams of lovely day were kissing the hilltops of the eastern horizon, that a terrible commotion began, at the same time, the sweet sunset was darkened by a great black cloud. It came nearer and nearer as it made its way across the sky. The stars that had just begun to twinkle in their places hid their faces behind this great black cloud from which the orbed lightning hissed in forked streaks and loud peals of thunder broke the rest of both man and beast. John retired to his couch but sleep had left him as well as his wife and children and they tried to settle the matter among themselves, and wondered what it was all about. The house cat was on the alert, she knew there was trouble somewhere and old Tige, who had always watched while his master slept, howled a mournful howl, the cows came in from the pasture and kept up a constant bawl, the horse began to neigh, the mules began to bray and not an eye closed for sleep or rest all night. The next morning his wife began anew to find out the trouble and ascertained that John's subscription to the Mountain Advocate had expired. He came to town, renewed his subscription and got a copy of all the missing numbers since his paper had been stopped, and when he arrived home there was a general rejoicing with both man and beast, and now everything about John's place is sunshine and gladness. Try it yourself.

WHY MEATS ARE HIGH

(Washington Post.)

"It is not to be wondered at that cattle are selling for $11 a hundred-weight in Chicago," said E. F. Hudson, a stockman of Montana, at the Raleigh. "I shall be surprised if the price doesn't go a great deal higher. There probably is good reason for the consumer to blame the packer for high prices of beef, and the middleman doubtless deserves a large part of the blame, while the dealer unquestionably shares the responsibility. All contribute to the increased price of meats. But back of all is the fact that the cattle supply of the country has been steadily decreasing. There is no more room for cattle east of the Rockies. This year has been so dry that farmers are having to bring in their cattle from the range much earlier than usual. All the pasturage is dry.

"While this is a condition that is not favorable, it does not work so great a hardship as it would if the hay and alfalfa crops were poor. Nature even up matters. This season hay and alfalfa have been particularly favored. Nearly every farmer has plenty of forage to last through the winter. Many of them are making a point of getting enough to last through two years.
