DRAFT DRAWING COMPLETED

Work of Selecting Bourbon County Boys Who Must Appear Before Board of Examination Completed.

First 278 in this List Will Be First Called, From Which 139 Will Be Chosen as Bourbon's Quota.

The final assignment of drafting numbers that will call a certain percent of the flower of Bourbon county youth to war was made Friday and the returns completed Saturday morning. The change in numbers at Washington created considerable confusion, but after the matter had been straightened out it was comparatively easy for the boys to find out where they "are at." By taking the numbers as sent in from Washington and going over registration lists in County Clerk's and the County Judge's offices THE NEWS is enabled to give its readers this morning a complete list as compiled from those records.

There seems to be an impression that the colored men registered were not to go in this call, but this is not a fact, as we are informed by the local board that they are included just the same as the others.

Exemption Board May Begin Duties Within Ten Days—Cards Notify All in Quota.

"Wat next?" is the question now most vital to the man who was selected in the drawing for the new army.

If he is physically able, and is not situated, either by reason of dependents or the nature of his employment that the government will not accept him, and is willing to serve where his country calls, there is nothing now to do but to await the summons beneath the flag.

The various exemption boards are not yet prepared for the process of weeding out those who ultimately will represent Bourbon county in the legions to give much, perhaps all, that the world "may be safe for democracy."

As soon as they receive the necessary blank affidavits and so on, and are fortified with the final instructions for their procedure, the boards will meet and begin the work. It is expected that ten days will elapse before the official lists of those drafted in the first allotment are received by the respective district exemption boards.

As soon as these are received each man who has been selected in the double quota will receive a card notifying him officially of his selection and fixing the date of his appearance before the board, although a mere posting of the names of those drafted constitutes sufficient notification under the law. The man so notified then must appear before the board on the date named and be physically examined.

This examination will follow the general lines of the new physical requirements for the regular army. Two doctors, acting independently and without knowledge of the other's findings, must concur in the opinion that the subject is physically disqualified. The government may appeal this decision at any time and have regular army doctors pass on the case. Two doctors acting only in case there is as many as 80 per day.

How Order Comes.

If the man is found physically fit and qualified and the man is not discharged or exempted for other reasons, his name later will be posted as one of those accepted for military service, and when the call to colors comes he must report at the specified mobilization camp.

In the case of Kentucky men this will be at Camp Taylor. If the man has a claim for exemption or discharge he must file that with the District Board seven days after the date of the notice that called him for physical examination, not seven days after the date upon the notice. He then has ten days in which to file affidavits supporting his claim, the blanks to be furnished by the board. The board will endeavor to pass upon each case three days after the affidavits are received. If the claim is allowed the man is given a certificate of exemption or discharge, but this becomes inoperative whenever the conditions upon which it was granted cease to apply.

If his claim for exemption is not supported, he is posted as one qualified for service and the man then has three days in which to appeal to the district exemption board. If that body does not allow his appeal he can appeal to the President and if the President turns him down, he has nothing to do then but kiss his relatives good-bye.

Claims for either discharge or exemption can be filed either by the man himself or by another person, affected by his being called, such as his wife or mother.

139 Drafted From Bourbon County. To relieve a persistent misapprehension, it may be pertinent to repeat that only 139 men will be drafted from Bourbon county.

Double these numbers (278) will be called to appear before the boards of exemptions. The man whose number first was drawn at Washington will be the first examined by the board and the others in the order of drawing.

The county may be taken as an example of every military district in the United States. Those in the first 139 whose claims to exemption are sustained will leave that many vacancies to be supplied from the reserve 139. As soon as the total quota of 139 accepted men is full, all having numbers further down the list are automatically exempt—just as is the man at the foot of the list. The man who stands last in the roll of 278 could not be called unless more than one hundred per cent. above should be exempted. On the other hand, if more than 278 should prove immune to service, the examiners will fill vacancies from the below 278.

The number registered from Bourbon county to select the quota from this county is composed of Sheriff W. F. Talbott, County Clerk Pearce Paton and Dr. Silas Evans.

"SCRAMBLE FOR PROFIT DISGRACE TO COUNTRY."

"If an army of civilian patriots be not organized to stand behind the President and fight for business honor, while our boys in khaki are fighting in the trenches, this country will be disgraced at home by a despicable scramble for illegitimate profits on steel, coal, munitions and food," declared Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carl Vrooman in a statement containing a bitter attack on those business men who, he says, are seeking extortionate profits from the war situation. He declares that excessive profit seekers are virtually allies of Germany.
