Have You Seen Him;

Did you ever meet the man who uses all his pleasing manners in the store or office and reserves his growls and snarls for the family at home? So have we. We have been in his place of business when the phone rang. He took down the receiver, placed it to his ear and in tones that would turn a saint green with envy, said "Hello" with the rising inflection. And when he learned the party at the other end of the wire was "only his wife" he dropped an octave or two and said, "Whadda ya want?" If the intruder in an apologetic tone explained that he should bring home some meat in order that she might prepare his dinner, he grunted and banged the innocent receiver back in place. And we can picture that fellow when he carries home the provisions for the table. He throws it down as if he really deserved a lot of credit for the act. And if the steak is not cooked to suit his epicurean taste—more frowns. After the meal his twelve-cent cigar is lighted and he grabs the evening paper, while the other half clears the table, shakes the cloth and washes and wipes the dishes. If, when she comes into the living room, she hands him a bill of some kind, he frowns and wonders why in the dickens a woman can't exercise a little economy—and he lights another twelve-center.

We think that fellow ought to be forced to take that woman's place just one day, at least. Let him stand over a range and fry buck-wheat cakes and serve them to the others "while they're hot." Let him sit down and eat a couple of cold ones. Then after washing the dishes he can sweep and dust. Then it will be time to start on the noon meal. Dishes again. He may have time to shave and then clean up a little. Have we missed anything, ladies? Sure we have. But we have laid out enough to keep that grouch busy for a while. If he only knew how easy it is to smile.

It Is Life!

We met her on Pleasant street one of those clear, cool days a few weeks ago. She was the picture of health, although she had changed in the years that had passed since I had last seen her. Her roughish, brown eyes still danced and her face was unlined, but the years had laid the frost upon her hair, which peeped in ringlets of white beneath the rather youthful hat.

We knew her at once, for we had been schoolmates. "And it is really you?" we asked as we shook hands. "Yes," she answered, "and I have not walked the streets of Paris for many years. I had to come within fifty miles of the old home town and I just felt that I must come back and see the folks I knew when I was a girl. But, oh, how changed everything is. You who have lived here do not realize it. I had been here an hour before I found someone I had known. I passed many people on the street, but they were strangers. I wondered if you realize how many of my old friends and yours, too, have taken the long journey since I went away? For years I have read THE BOURBON NEWS and dreamed of the day when I would come back. I have longed to walk the old familiar streets once more. My wish has been gratified and now I'm going back. But oh, so sad and lonely. Few people remember me, and you have all changed."

Then she passed on. Probably we never shall see her again. And so it is in this ever-changing existence we call life. Many a prosperous man has dreamed of the time when he should go back and walk the village streets where he walked barefoot. At last he finds the time for the pilgrimage and when he arrives he finds that the old home town has forgotten him. The streets are filled with strangers; the old swimming hole is dried up; the boys we knew are scattered and asleep on the hill. And this is what we call life and which many people take so very seriously.

America Will Not Forget.

President Wilson in a statement published in Right About, the official publication of Debarcation Hospital No. 3, of New York City, declared that America would not forget the sacrifices that American soldiers wounded in France had made and that their wounds "are the noblest badges of honor any man has ever worn." The statement was sent to the magazine just after the President had delivered his opera house address. "I could tell you," he wrote, "what the sacrifices you have made have means to the world. I could tell you what history for all time to come will say of you and the sufferings you have experienced on your great crusade. But these things other men will tell you.

"I prefer to remind you that the wounds you bear are the noblest badges of honor any man has ever worn; that they exalt you to a supreme place in the minds and hearts of your countrymen and of all the world. I prefer to assure you that America realizes that she has no more solemn obligations, no more patriotic duty than to express in practical terms the gratitude that every American—man, woman and child—feels for everyone of you.

CULL THE SLACKER.

The slacker in a pen of poultry can be picked out. A simple method of culling the farm flock will be demonstrated in over half of the counties in Kentucky this summer and autumn by the poultry specialists of the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture. The exact dates are July 14th to November 5th. During this time four men will be visiting farm flocks so that a neighborhood gathering may understand how to pick out the slacker hen. About three days will be spent in each county and 6 demonstrations will be held each day.

Vacation time is swimming time. American Red Cross life-saving instruction in the schools and gymnasiums will reduce the number of deaths by drowning this summer.

THE TEST OF MERIT

Paris People Are Given Convincing Proof.

No better test of any article can be made than the test of time and this is particularly true of a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills have stood this test, and stood it well. What better proof of the merits of this remedy could you demand, than the statement of a Paris resident who used it successfully and tells of lasting results. Read the following: Geo. McCandless, Second street, says: "My kidneys were inactive and I had backaches. Doan's Kidney Pills put a stop to all the troubles and they gave me complete relief." (Statement given January 17, 1912.)

NO TROUBLE SINCE

Over four years later, on November 9, 1916, Mr. McCandless said: "I haven't had any need of a kidney remedy since I last endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. I consider myself permanently cured."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. McCandless had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. (adv)
