SWIFT & CO.'S WEEKLY PRODUCE MARKET REVIEW

The production of butter is heavier than a year ago; storage stocks are heavy, considering the probable outlet, and as dealers have about discontinued storing domestic production, more butter has been forced on the market, causing a drop during the week in the selling price of butter and a corresponding decline in the price of butterfat in the producing sections. Production of eggs is somewhat lighter and some eggs are being withdrawn from storage to make up the deficiency. There has been very little change in the price situation during the week. Withdrawals of storage stocks probably will check any tendency to advance prices for the present. Receipts of live fowl have been lighter and higher prices are prevailing in consuming centers, which is reflected in producing territories. The volume of live springs moving this week is much heavier and this has caused a decline in prices throughout the producing territories.

SEND EGGS TO MARKET

During the hot weather, eggs should be marketed daily, or at least every other day, as this lessens the possibility of their spoiling. The poultry department, College of Agriculture, recommends that eggs should not be placed in a large box during hot weather, as their own heat will, in many cases, cause damage. This can very largely be offset, however, if the eggs can be marketed every day or two.

CANTRELL WILL BE UNOPPOSED FOR CONGRESS

When Secretary of State Vaughn returned Friday night from Paintsville to Frankfort, he found a letter on his desk from L. L. Bristow, of Georgetown, withdrawing from the race for the Republican nomination for Congress. The letter was written Friday, but Vaughn, not being there, did not receive it until Monday. It will be entered in the files as of Friday night, and as a result Congressman J. Campbell Cantrell will be no opposition.

GOVERNOR COX'S ACCEPTANCE SPEECH FINE EFFORT.

Cincinnati Enquirer.) The speech of Governor James M. Cox, accepting the Democratic nomination for President of the United States, is a straightforward declaration of principles. There is no evasion, no playing with words of double interpretation, no beating about the bush on any of the issues of the day. He speaks with the frankness that has characterized all his political utterances, just as those who know him expected him to do. Each declaration rings with an honesty of purpose that must commend him to the country, and which gives assurance of a sincere consideration for the nation's interests as the dominant aim of his administration if he is elected.

His attitude on the treaty issue is squarely for ratification with such interpretative reservations as are suggested by the San Francisco platform. His utterances indicate that the result of his conference with the President was not submission to him, but that the President has submitted to the party decree. He answers the expressed fears of the opposition that Article X as it stands makes possible our being drawn into entangling wars by the statement that no treaty can override the constitution, and that Congress only can declare war. He denounces the Republican position as tending to provincialism, and points to "the breaking of the fetters of boundary lines" by President McKinley to carry freedom to Cuba and American idealism to the Philippines.

He is equally emphatic in declaring for membership in the League of Nations—to stand by our allies in the great war rather than to declare a separate peace with Germany. And he does not fail to direct attention to the fact that the league already is in operation, with a membership of 29 nations, confronting a continental turmoil that is encouraged by the aloofness of the United States, for which he places responsibility on the Republican Senatorial cabal.

On both these questions he leaves no doubt of where he stands or of his readiness to meet the Republicans on those issues, and he expresses his faith in the mind of the people of the country to so declare in the election.

On domestic problems he is in line with general business sentiment in declaring for a repeal of oppressive war taxes and for greater economy in Government. With his characteristic courage he does not hesitate to offer a substitute for the excess profits tax of a levy of one to one and a half per cent on the total business of every going concern. In this also he is sustained by a widespread public sentiment.

His reference to law enforcement is sufficient to cover any issue of the campaign, including the aftermath of the Eighteenth Amendment. He specifically points out that Congress, as the legislative body, is subject to the rule of the majority, under constitutional limitations, and says "any public official who fails to enforce the law is an enemy both to the constitution and to the American principle of majority rule." He unflinchingly accepts this "Executive obligation."

He pledges himself to lay a heavy hand on profiteering and anti-Americanism, but he would assist honest business, and would encourage measures for the full assimilation of foreigners seeking asylum here.

He favors "collective bargaining" on the part of labor as an offset to the concentration of capital in large units, and he places himself beyond partisan criticism when he says no man's right either to labor or to quit his employment should be abridged, and that "neither capital nor labor should at any time or in any circumstances take action that would put in jeopardy the public welfare."

He has what some may criticize as a far vision of "peace smiling on the Mexican border" as a result of a realization by those people that the United States has no lust of conquest nor a disposition to disturb their sovereign rights. He is wise in refraining from any threat of armed invasion which only could further agitate that eruptive country.

Answering Senator Harding's argument for government by parties he properly places the people above party, and gives assurance that if elected no pretext of party responsibility will draw him from his obligation to the people.

At a meeting of the Burley Tobacco Growers held in Lexington, Kentucky, August 4, 1920, with a representation of 29 counties in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, it was voted that the Secretary communicate with the Burley counties of the entire district of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia and insist that a mass meeting be held in each county on August 14, at 1:30 p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to send to Lexington, Ky., August 18, 1920.

Why High Noon Weddings.

All of us frequently use expressions of which we do not really know the meaning. Did you, for example, know that noon is the traditional hour for a wedding ceremony because in the olden days in England the bridegroom could not be relied upon to be sober any later in the day than this hour?

KENTUCKY YEARLING FIGURE IN SARATOGA SALES.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 12.—The scene at Fasig-Tipton's sales mart Friday night at the sale of yearlings, comprising consignments from A. B. Hancock's Kentucky Claiborne and Virginia Ellerslie Studs, Captain P. M. Walker's Paige Brook Stud, Admiral Carey T. Grayson, Charlton Stud, of Bourbon County, Ky., and H. Flippen, rivaled the most notable social affair for the foremost leaders in American society arrayed in costly evening gowns comprised a goodly portion of the gallery.

Prizes realized for the youngsters, while not up to the mark of last season, however, was satisfactory and showed the juvenile market still holding up. The thirty-three youngsters that A. B. Hancock consigned realized the handsome total of $97,850, an average of $2,965. The star of the lot, as well as the highest priced one of the entire sale, was the brown colt by Rockview—Gold, which went to W. R. Midgely, acting for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, on a bid of $14,000. The same purchaser also secured the chestnut Colt—Net Work filly for $12,500.

The sale of the Jim Gaffney—Alice Dudley colt came only after a spirited tilt between Commander J. K. L. Ross and J. S. Cosden, Commander Ross finally securing the youngster on his bid of $12,600. There were forty-eight yearlings sold for a grand total of $128,950, a grand average of $2,686.45. Ten of the youngsters consigned by Captain Walker went for $11,100, an average of $1,110. The two colts consigned by Admiral Carey T. Grayson realized $3,800, an average of $1,900.

The two colts consigned by Charlton Stud, of Paris, Ky., which embrace the Jim Gaffney—Alice Dudley colt, totaled $14,400, an average of $7,200.

By comparison with last year's sale of Hancock yearlings there was a noticeable slump, but the master of Claiborne and Ellerslie Studs expressed satisfaction.

FEED CHICKENS SOUR MILK

Sour milk or buttermilk will make eggs very fast and is one of the cheapest egg producing feeds on the market. Make an effort to buy some of this feed for your chickens, if you do not have the milk at home—perhaps a neighbor will sell you some cheap.

The accomplishment of a great task seems to but result in pointing out greater ones yet unsolved.
