DIFFICULT TO INCREASE CHURCH ATTENDANCE

The average man will go to a circus, or a show, or a ball game, and consider the money well spent. He will imbibe a certain amount of information of some value, but generally it is soon forgotten.

Nevertheless, he is ever ready and anxious to go again.

He could spend an hour or so at church on Sunday, drop a few nickels in the collection box, and receive more real and lasting benefit than would be derived from a dozen shows or ball games.

Yet it is difficult to get him there. Sometimes we wonder if it would not be easier to fill a church by charging a stiff admission at the door.

We seem to place a higher value on things that cost us the most, regardless of their worth.

Or we might stage a dog fight as an attraction. That would bring 'em running.

Another thing. Home brewed stuff is bad for the home brood.

Public highways cannot be paved with good intentions alone.

MYSTERY MIXED WITH GASOLINE AND AUTOMOBILE

An abandoned automobile, deserted and alone, with its rear wheels projecting dejectedly into the air, furnished considerable speculation Saturday morning for passers-by on the Maysville pike, a few miles below Paris. The machine, a Ford sedan, had skidded to one side of the road and landed in the roadside ditch, with the rear wheels up in the air, and the radiator buried in the mud.

The license tags had been removed from the machine, and no one could be found who had witnessed the accident or who knew anything that would throw light on the mystery of how the machine came there. Some time later in the day the machine was removed, but no one knew who did that or when it was done.
