Another large shipment of Straw Hats just received at Chas. R. Grieb's.

There are a number of suits pending throughout the State against preachers for marrying minors.

What a virtuous howl is raised in Great Britain because the French are trying to steal a little land in Africa.

A Straw Hat given away with every bill of goods at Chas. R. Grieb's.

General Grant appears upon the scene just in time to identify Grantism, Bossism and Primacy as one and the same thing.

All kinds of ready made shirts, at J. F. T. Stehle's.

Grant asked Garfield to give Crauer a warmer berth. Garfield promptly sent him to Berne. And now Grant kicks.

SPECIALTIES in woolsens at William Aland's Merchant Tailoring establishment and to be had elsewhere in the county.

There seems to be a break in the fasting lunacy, but the pedestrian idiosyncrasy goes forward with the same old wearisome persistency.

A SOLID Silver Case and a Genuine American Movement as low as $10, at E. GRIEB'S.

Messrs. G. E. Treadwell and W. J. Bannan, of New Castle, proprietors of the Evening News, of that place, paid our town a visit Monday.

WILLIAM ALAND, Merchant Tailor, has just opened the largest line of woolsens for men and boys ever offered in Butler.

The President forces me to commit murder or suicide; I choose murder, said Mr. Conkling, and then he turned around and brained poor little Platt.

The celebrated Elgheim shirt, with a bosom that cannot break or wrinkle, at J. F. T. Stehle's.

The sales of the Revised Testament last Monday exceeded 300,000 copies, and great fervency was shown by clergymen in particular to obtain them.

"Many things indicate," says the Inter-Ocean, "that Chicago is becoming a great money centre." That is decidedly better than being a great mortgage centre.

Decorative services will be observed at Centerville at 10 A. M., on the 30th of May. Col. John M. Thompson and Gen. Eckley will be present to address the people.

It was just like Mr. Conkling to make a great crisis out of a defeat for an office. He always took an intense interest in offices, and no interest at all in public affairs.

Puck: He had been telling her of himself, and had done a great amount of bragging; when he had finished she kissed him and murmured, "this is a kiss for a blow."

The latest name for the greatest show on earth is the "gigantic megalomaniac," with consolidated aggregations of aggregated under nineteen acres of canopied canvas tented fields.

Dr. Von Meyerhoff will give music lessons to beginners during vacation at reduced rates (50 cents a lesson). Lessons can be given at pupil's residence. [14may4]

The London Times says that the act of France in helping itself to Tunisian territory is contrary to ordinary rules of morality. Humpf! Opium war, Afghan war, Boer war. All too true.

The almost unanimous confirmation of Judge Robertson, and the rejoicing over the news in the York State Legislature, would seem to settle the question of Conkling's re-election in the negative.

When the Oil City Derrick man put on his last year's vest he found a roll of bills in one of the pockets amounting to about $120, which he had forgotten. P. S.—None of them were receipts.

It is an old question whether joy ever affluence in this country lately, when a homesick invalid, returning from the West Indies, and suddenly meeting his aged mother near his home, died in her arms.

Patent medicine advertisers, in their desire to be original, are sometimes amusing. The following is rather suggestive: "Toadies always kept a coffin in his house. Had he lived now he would have kept 'em."

The merchants who fail to lift their mercantile license from Treasurer Craig before July 1st will incur the penalty of the law. Mr. Craig has no option in the premises but to bring suit if licenses are not paid on or before that date.

Recital of classical music, vocal and instrumental, under the direction of Dr. Von Meyerhoff, Tuesday, May 31st, 8 P. M., at Butler Conservatory of Music (Baptist Church). Reserved chairs at Butler Savings Bank. For particulars see programmes.

Speaking of the last man who will be left on this earth a rather sentimental South Carolina paper says: "To what can we liken that solitary being between great earth and great sky? Well, you might liken him to a lone strawberry between two hunks of short-cake."

One thing has been discovered already, and that is that the Republican press stands by the President almost to a unit. In New York City alone the Times, Tribune, Post, Staats Zeitung and Journal of Commerce are outspoken in their denunciation of Conkling's course.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has kindly remembered the school teacher of the Commonwealth by passing a bill making it obligatory upon school directors to allow the teachers their time while attending the annual county institute, and $2 50 a day for expenses.

In the matter of the petition of the School Directors of Centerville, for voters to assess damages for property of C. Wilson, appropriated for school purposes, the Court appointed David McKee, S. H. Moore and David Marshall, viewers, and fixed Tuesday, June 7th, as the time for their meeting.

It is a matter of congratulation that Postmaster General James does not feel called upon to resign his place in the Cabinet because the President does not agree with him as to the desirability of a clerical in New York Collectorship. He has none of the Miss Nancy skittishness of the New York Senators.

Postmaster-General James, acting under the advice of Attorney General McVeagh, is about to enter upon a thorough effort to break up the whole system of transmitting lottery circulars, letters and money orders through the mails. His purpose is to make a clean sweep of this whole business. All good citizens will wish him success.

LETTER.—Rev. J. A. Danks, who was colonel of the Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, will deliver a lecture, entitled "War, its nature and remedy, or nine days and nights on the Gettysburg battle field," on Monday, May 30th, at 8 P. M., at the Court House, Butler, Pa. All are invited to come and hear this able, instructive and interesting lecture. Admission, 25 cents.

It appears that the hngman at the late execution of the Nihilists prind himself for his task with liquor—in other words this functionary of the gibbet presented himself for his official duties, and performed them, drunk. He was heavily fogged in payment for his official services, but the castigation of the bungling executioner did not add to the impression of the Nihilists, of a spectacle which raised the horror of those who witnessed it.

Judge Robertson was serenaded at Albany last Wednesday evening, and there was rejoicing over what was believed to be the end of the "boss" rule. The Conkling men at Albany are by no means confident of their ability to re-elect Messrs. Conkling and Platt. Members of the Legislature are beginning to hear from their constituents, with the effect of changing their minds. It is believed by Administration men that Mr. Conkling's defeat is assured.

The "Lincoln Club" of this place was not indeed by a hightoned affair, if among its members it numbers two reporters or "paid informers" of the Worcester Herald, and they must have paid the initiation fee of one of the editors of this paper, so that they could boast of his membership, as we did not, nor have we ever attended a meeting of this club. The club, judging from the actions of these two members, would seem to stand in need of a character, and so long as it does, we would suggest the propriety of dropping the name of Lincoln and adopting one more appropriate, "The Sneak Dog Club," for instance.

SINGULAR ESCAPE.—A young gentleman and four young ladies of this place, when returning from a drive in a two-horse carriage on Sunday evening last, about 9 o'clock, and while coming down the plank road on the hill south of town, the horses frightened and ran away, throwing the whole company against the fence of the lot of J. H. Negley, overturning the carriage, throwing them all out with great force, and yet strange to say none were injured. The horses became detached from the carriage and were caught near by. The only damage done was to the carriage. It is regarded as a very singular and fortunate escape.

A shrewd observer in Washington discloses a new vista in the great resignation remedy. The club judging from the actions of these two members, would seem to stand in need of a character, and so long as it does, we would suggest the propriety of dropping the name of Lincoln and adopting one more appropriate, "The Sneak Dog Club," for instance.

In an eastern journal we find the following lucid sentences:—"The polished culture of the metaphysical, the acute insight of the poet, perceives the inner truth of things, which the moralists and utilitarians fail to discover. The mistake of sacrificing the aesthetic atmosphere that should surround every woman is a fatal mistake in life. It is a social duty to please, and a woman whose unloveliness antagonizes all with whom she comes in contact, will lose all she might herself win and hence the most modest and modest happiness, but she injures all womanhood in her disregard of its fairest requirements." All of which, if it could be translated, would be perfectly correct and lovely; but it so happens that no woman who writes for the newspapers can cook codfish and superintend the week's washing without getting her ideas mixed.

Professor Balfour Stewart the English scientist, has recently pointed out what he believes to be one great cause of weather changes. These hot and cold spells he thinks are traceable to solar variations. It is well known that waves of high and low temperature are propagated from west to east after they have once been fully developed, and the variations in the diurnal declination of the magnet, constituting what Professor Stewart calls "magnetic weather," are also caused by solar variability, and it is suspected that, like atmospheric weather, the magnetic changes are propagated from west to east, though with much greater velocity. It would thus appear to be at least possible, says this eminent physicist, that the magnetic weather of today must be followed by corresponding meteorological weather five or six days hence, and preliminary investigation induces him to think that it may ultimately be possible to forecast great atmospheric disturbances by means of magnetic indications five or six days ahead.

Court News.

Crawford Jones vs. Wm. Leckie, settled.

T. Watson vs. E. G. Leithold, case withdrawn.

J. E. Grossman vs. S. P. Grossman, case settled.

Commonwealth of Penna., for use of J. H. Walter, vs. H. D. Thompson, verdict for plaintiff, for $294.65.

All other cases on the list were continued.

Senator Robertson's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate. The overwhelming majority in his favor, notwithstanding the resistance made by Senators Conkling and Platt, shows that the President was entirely justified in not asking the permission of those Senators before submitting the nomination to the Senate. A large majority of the Republican Senators sustain the President in this matter. Senator Conkling's insolent pretensions are rebuked most emphatically, both by the Senate and by the Senators of his own party. No one has ventured to deny that Senator Robertson is abundantly able and worthy. Only one member of the committee dissented from the report in his favor, and the opposition in the Senate faded away so completely that the friends of Mr. Conkling did not venture to expose their weakness by calling the roll. In view of this remarkable unanimity, Republicans in all parts of the country will ask what possible excuse Senator Conkling could have had for his persistent, unscrupulous and malignant opposition.

It is certainly rather a remarkable achievement that several hundred thousand copies of the revised New Testament should have been stored in New York for a month without any outsider having been able to get hold of a copy. Now that a sufficiently large edition has been printed abroad to supply the expected first demand, the seals are broken and the volumes turned loose upon the American public. In the absence of an international copyright law—which in the interest of the people who read books it is to be hoped we may not have put on us in a hurry—everybody who pleases is at liberty to reprint the work of the revisers, and no doubt many persons will avail themselves of this privilege. The result will be that the country will be flooded with cheap editions, and thousands of people will be led by curiosity to read more Scripture than they ever read before at any one time in the whole course of their lives. If they would only keep on at it a great amount of good would doubtless be accomplished.

General Grant has written a letter to Senator Jones. Had General Grant been in Washington instead of in the City of Mexico he would probably have chosen to have a letter of the kind promulgated at the present juncture.

The fact is that Grant, who was never so much a statesman or a politician as a military leader, unwisely wrote this letter, while there was no more serious complications between the Administration and the New York Senators, than that involved in the nomination of Robertson. But Mr. Grant is an adherent of Conkling and, as such, his hour has come. It is only a question of time as to how soon the warmest of Conkling's personal friends shall be sacrificed as a burnt offering upon the altar of that Senator's private ambition. General Grant's time has come and he is now, by the publication of a private letter, held up to the derision of the world, simply because such publication was deemed to add some real or fancied strength to Conkling's cause.

An English Journal, descending on the progress of prohibitory liquor legislation in the United States, declares that the satisfaction with which men regard the progress of the temperance movement across the Atlantic would be seriously impaired if it were found, as some assert, that opium gains all this alcohol loses. That of course is not sweeping a statement; but it is unfortunately too true that, side by side with the progress of the crusade against drink, the Americans have to show a rapid increase in the consumption of opium. The import of opium in 1876 into the United States showed an increase of 70 per cent. over that of 1867; but the import of 1880 was 140 per cent. in excess of that of 1876. Four years ago the American opium eaters were believed to number 200,000, but since then their numbers have doubled, and it is now calculated that they consume five million grains per annum. West of the Mississippi the Chinese have almost a monopoly of the drug, but in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky there are said to be three opium eaters to every 100 of population. Physicians, druggists and traders all report that the use of opium is alarmingly on the increase, and they attribute it chiefly not to the disease of intonoxants but to the increased use of the hypodermic syringe for injections of morphia. It is noteworthy that the women are said to supply four-fifths of the victims of opium.

The two-thirds vote necessary for the suspension of the rules of the House of Representatives, as well as the constitutional provision that a majority of the members elected to each House shall be required to pass any bill, are doubtless wise restrictions upon the action of the Legislature and necessary to the protection of the rights of minorities; but they are restrictions, nevertheless, which sometimes grievously thwart the progress of righteous legislation. It is more than probable that the Delinquent Tax bill, the Recorder's bill and more important legislation, with reference to pipe lines and telegraph companies may be defeated through a resolution of one-third of the members of the Legislature to obstruct progress by insisting upon the maintenance of the rules, or by the slow, cowardly process of absenting themselves at the decisive moment when the yeas and nays are called. There is no complete remedy in the hands of the people for this disregard of the popular will short of the day when new representatives are to be chosen. The Recorder's bill, with its unnecessary advertising patronage, may continue a year or two longer. The tax business will be turned over to the reforming hand of Mr. Hunter. The people of the State will get along next year, as they have for seven years past, with a fair writ Constitution, which has been ap-

A World of good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it every where. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not pleasant to taste as some other Bitters. It is not a whisky drink. It is more like the old fashioned bone set tea that had done a world of good. If you don't feel just right try Hop Bitters.—Munda News.

Yes, indeed, I do, said Mrs. Benjamin to her inquiring neighbor, and that too when we had foolishly paid eighty-five dollars in doctor's bills and prescriptions, and after he had been given up by his physicians to die. Now my husband feels as well as ever, entirely cured by this excellent Tonic! And many a sick man might be well in a week if they would only try it.
