A Mine Disaster.
There was a gas explosion at the Berwin-White shaft, at the eastern limit of Du Bois, Monday night, and 14 miners were killed. It is a new mine which the company has been opening up and working crews in Du Bois to work in the morning, and in directions for big work later on. Eighteen men went on at 1 o'clock that morning, 14 going into the north heading and four into the south heading. About 10 o'clock the four were sensible of a shock and a few minutes later the mine boss came to them and told them something had happened and that they should get out as soon as they could.
When the party, then consisting of five, reached the foot of the shaft they were immediately surrounded by gas, and were hurriedly taken up in the cage. Assistance was immediately summoned, practical miners from the shaft were sent down to rescue the men immediately volunteered their services, and the work of rescue proceeded. It was discovered that the gas was in the north heading was so terrific that some of the bodies were incalculably inflated, and that those who had not yet been found could not possibly have escaped violent death.
