Outside Comment.

Whether or not the U. S. Senate will admit Mr. S. Quay as a member is discussed by the N. Y. Sun, as follows:

The State Constitution of Pennsylvania does not contain any provision for the appointment of a United States Senator by the Governor, no matter how the vacancy arises, after the expiration of his term of office.

Apparently the intention of the framers of the Pennsylvania Constitution was that there should be no temporary appointment of United States Senator by the Governor in any case of vacancy in the Senate.

The next regular session of the Pennsylvania Legislature will not occur until the first Tuesday of January, 1901. Therefore, if Governor Stone failed to call an extra session on or before that date, the Governor would be unable to call an extra session on or before that date.

Whether Governor Stone will call an extra session on or before that date is a question which will be decided by the Governor.

Here the Governor runs into the venerable controversy respecting the meaning of the word "appoint" in the Pennsylvania Constitution.

As to the power of a Governor to fill a temporary vacancy in the Senate, there is absolutely no doubt. He may fill such a vacancy at any time.

As to the power of a Governor to fill a permanent vacancy in the Senate, there is a question.

Middletown Notes.

Mrs. R. W. McGrath of Allegheny City, is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. H. Marshall.

There is every indication of an abundant crop of fruit this season, peach excepted.

Our young people expect to give an entertainment in Concord church on the evening of Decoration Day.

Shows are becoming numerous in this locality. No less than two have exhibited in this burg within the week.

Jack Bryan, one of our most progressive farmers, has as the display of stock as may be seen anywhere.

Miss Laura Alexander, of Butler, is a visitor to her former home in this place.

Our mechanics are busy and all of them seem to be over-crowded with work.

Miss Ernie Armstrong, who has been away on a protracted visit, returned on last Thursday evening to the home of her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Thompson.

About two o'clock last Friday morning James Thompson and wife were awakened by a loud and vigorous rapping at a front door.

They opened the door and found a man looking through a window, who was holding a pistol in his hand.

The man, who was dressed in a suit and a hat, stepped into the room and closed the door behind him.

He then proceeded to the window and looked out, and then returned to the door.

How Can We Have Good Fruit on the Farm?

First, we must learn the nature of each kind of fruit trees. Learn under what conditions they thrive best.

Plant in proper time; take proper care of them when set out and use proper fertilizers.

One great reason why the majority of farmers do not succeed with fruit is because they treat all kinds of fruit trees alike.

They plant, prune, fertilize and care for the apple, pear, peach, quince and cherry the same.

Now we will give you a few general rules that apply to all kinds of fruit trees.

I propose (if the fruit trees are not set out in the best place) that you should have a good soil.

Every farmer should learn how to graft and, if possible, how to propagate his own fruit trees.

It is better to have a few good trees than a large number of poor ones.
