The King Pin of the Duroc Breed

Do not take our word for it, just ask any one of the men from Union County who made the Boosters trip to Peacock and Hodge's sale at Cochran, Georgia, and look over the 1919 International Grand Champion. Ask them if the Patriot is not a better Boar than any they saw on the trip.

Superior Defender and Fred's Crimper and Junior Fancy Orion

Are in just as good class as any of them. We say it without fear of contradiction that Sardis Farm has the best equipment, the best hogs and as good management as you can find, and as for Herd Boars no farm can boast of any better.

ON TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th 1920

We will sell a bunch of as good Sows and Gilts and Boars as will be offered this fall and we are especially appealing to the farmers in this offering.

IF YOU HAD

Gone with us to Cochran and gone into the six acre cotton field where $1,000.00 worth of Arsenate of Lead had been used in spraying the plants and $225.00 spent for the spray machine and the work done at night, and seen cotton waist high with from three to ten bolls to the stalk and thousands of boll weevils, and hear the owner tell us that the poison seemed to fatten the weevils instead of kill them, you would not wonder why Peacock and Hodge had a $581.00 average on forty-two head sold. A local farmer bought five of the best sows in his sale, paying $1,350.00 for one.

All Competent Authorities Say

The boll weevil will come into Union County and destroy the cotton crop. It seems that "a word to the wise should be sufficient."

ACCEPTANCE SPEECH OF GOVERNOR COOLIDGE

North Hampton, Mass., July 27.—Rescue from the reaction of war was declared as the transcended need of the nation in the address which Governor Coolidge delivered here today in accepting formally the Republican nomination for vice president. "The chief task that lies before us," he said, "is to repossess the people of their government and their property."

Governor Coolidge found another source of gravest public concern to be "the reactionary tendency to substitute private will for the public will."

"The observance of the law," he said, "is the greatest solvent of the public ills."

The scene of the notification was Allen Field, the recreation ground of Smith College, a natural amphitheatre.

Governor Coolidge heard from Governor Edwin P. Morrow, of Kentucky, the formal announcement of his nomination "by the spontaneous wish of the party."

"The proposed league of nations without reservation as submitted by the president of the senate met with deserved opposition from Republican senators," said Governor Coolidge, "our party, by the record of its members in the senate and by the solemn declaration of its platform, by performance and by promise approves the principle of agreement among nations to preserve peace and pledges itself to the making of such an agreement, preserving American independence and rights, as will meet every duty America owes to humanity. This language is purposely broad, not exclusive but inclusive. The Republican party is not narrow enough to limit itself to one idea, but wise and broad enough to provide for the adoption of the best plan that can be devised at the time of action."

"Your presence thrills me, said Governor Coolidge in opening his address, "of a leader and a cause. A leader in Warren G. Harding, the united choice of a united party, a statement of ability, seasoned by experience, a fitting representative of the common aspirations of his fellow citizens, wise enough to seek counsel, great enough to recognize merit and in all things a stalwart American; the cause of our common country, as declared in the platform of the Republican party, the defense of our institutions from every assault, the restoration of constitutional government, the maintenance of law and order, the relief of economic distress, the encouragement of industry and agriculture, the upholding of humanitarian laws, the defense of the rights of our citizens everywhere, the rehabilitation of this nation in the estimation of all principles under an agreement meeting our every duty to preserve the peace of the world, always with unyielding Americanism—under such a leader, such a cause, I serve."

"No one in public life can be oblivious to the organized efforts to undermine the faith of our people in their government fomented, aggravated industrial strife, stifled production and ultimately stir up revolution—the first duty of the government is to repress them. American institutions can stand discussion and criticism only if those who know bear for them the testimony of truth."

"The greatest need of the nation at the present time is to be rescued from all the reaction of the war. The chief task that lies before us is to repossess the people of their government and their property. We want to return to a thoroughly peace basis because that is the fundamental American basis—if the great conflict has disturbed our political conditions it has caused an upheaval in our economic relations. The mounting prices of all sorts of commodities have put a well nigh unbearable burden on every home."

"The most obvious place to begin retrenchment is by eliminating the extravagance of the government itself, that great breeder of public and private extravagance, the excess profits tax, should be revised and recourse had to customs taxes on imports, one of the most wholesome of all means of raising revenue, for it is voluntary in effect and taxes consumption rather than production."

"A revision of taxation must be accompanied with a reduction of that private extravagance which the returns from luxury taxes reveal as surpassing all comprehension."

"There has been profiteering. It should be punished because it is wrong. But it is idle to look to such action for relief. This class profit by scarcity, but they do not cause it."

"As every one knows, the difficulty is caused by a scarcity of material, an abundance of money and insufficient production. The government must reduce the amount of money as fast as it can without curtailing necessary credits. Production must be increased.

"There must be a different public attitude toward industry, a larger comprehension for the interdependence of capital, management and labor and the better facilities for the prompt and reasonable adjustment of industrial disputes."

"The farmers need an enlarged power of organization whereby the original producer may profit to a larger degree by the high prices paid for his produce by the ultimate consumer, and at the same time decrease the cost of food."

"But all these difficulties descend for final solution on the character and moral force of the nation. Unless these forces abound and manifest themselves in work done, there is no real remedy."

"Whenever in the future this nation undertakes to assess its strength and resources, the largest item will be the roll of those who served in every patriotic capacity in the world war. Care of dependents, relief from distress, restoration from infirmity, provision for education, honorable preference in the public service, a helping hand everywhere, are the crisis, not as a favor but right."

"There is especially due to the colored race a more general recognition of their rights, tempted with disloyalty they remained loyal serving in the military forces with distinction, obedient to the draft to the extent of hundreds of thousands, investing $1 of every $5 they possessed in Liberty bonds; surely they hold the double title of citizenship, by birth and by conquest, to be relieved from all imposition to be defended from lynching and to be freely granted equal opportunities."

"Equal suffrage for which I have always voted, is coming. The party stands pledged to use its endeavors to hasten ratification."

"The destiny, the greatness of America lies around the heartstone. If thrift and industry are taught there and the example of self-sacrifice oft appears, if honor abide there and high ideals, if there, the building fortune be subordinated to the building of character, America will live in security, rejoicing in an abundant prosperity and good government at home, and in peace, respect and confidence abroad. If these virtues be absent there is no power that can supply these blessings, look well then to hearthstone; therein all hope of America lies."

The congregation of an English church doubled its minister's salary when he lifted a basket in each hand while standing in the pulpit, one basket containing 48 eggs, the other but two eggs, showing to what extent the purchasing power of a shilling had diminished in the last thirty-five years.
