BE USEFUL.
THE PATHWAY TO SUCCESS LIES THROUGH LABOR.

Pursue an Avocation Diligently, and Become a Reliable Citizen—Brickmasons, Stone Cutters, Painters.

In pursuance of the intention of the Gazette to place before the young Americans launching out into the world with a view of earning an honest living, and in order to enable the Texas boys to become reliable citizens, a reporter continued his rounds among the mechanics last week with the following results:

BRICKLAYERS.
Mr. William Brice, who has spent seventeen years as a bricklayer, said: "Bricklayers serve three years. The first year the earnings are $6 per week, the second year $8 per week, the third year $10, and a full man makes 35 cents per hour. The bricklayers have a very strong union and stick together closely. In Texas they are able to work the greater part of the year; but inclement weather causes a great loss of time in the North. Boys who desire to learn a brickmasonry should apply to some contractor in the community and should stick to it until they become skilled workmen."

STONECUTTERS.
Mr. Brice, who knows the art of building in almost every line, also referred to stonecutters, stonecutters, carpenters. He said, in regard to stonecutters: "In order to become an expert stonecutter a boy should serve four years. The wages are $8 per week for the first year; $8 per week the second year; $10 per week the third year; $12 per week the fourth year, and fifty cents an hour for a full man. The stonecutters also have a strong union."

STONEMASONS.
A stonemason is the mechanic who lays the stone in a building after it has been prepared by the stonecutters. A strong, athletic boy will be three years learning the business, and the wages range in the same manner as bricklayers, viz: For the first year, $6 per week; for the second year, $8 per week; for the third year, $10 per week; for the fourth year, $12 per week. An accomplished workman makes fifty cents per hour.

CARPENTERS.
Carpenters have been mentioned in a previous article. They serve three years, and a full man makes from twenty-five cents to thirty-five cents per hour.

SHOEMAKERS.
Nicola Petta, shoemaker, states that a boy can become a shoemaker in six or seven months. Wages are paid by the piece and range from $15 per week to $25 per week. The factors, however, are rapidly removing the shoe shops and boys are now learning only factory work, which is diversified—some men putting on the soles, others making the uppers and others cobbling. The shoemaker, as a class, are given to too frequently touching the flowing bowl and often rove from town to town. As there are few factories in this state and the shoemakers are compelled to learn every department. The shoemakers have no union, but stick to the usual prices tentatively.

PAINTERS.
Painters are dividing into several classes—house painters, carriage painters and sign painters. Upon this trade the reporter interviewed A. Calvert, who has been in the business ten years and has the following to say: "House painters serve an apprenticeship of five years, and the pay depends upon the employer and the experience of the painter. The secret of the trade exists in the ability to mix the paints and secure the proper colors, and not in the rapidity with which the paint is thrown against the wall. A full man makes about $2.50 and $3 a day in Texas; but the most successful painters go to a small, growing town and locate permanently. A rolling stone gathers no moss, and it seems that the painters are the greatest rovers in the world. Carriage painters make about the same wages as house painters, but their work is in the shadow of a house and they possess talent, can make from $5 to $6 per day, and sometimes more. Very few painters can paint a sign, and it is a trade within itself. To become an expert sign painter a boy generally consumes seven or eight years. The painters have a union, but it is a weak institution and does not amount to much."

RETURNS TOO LATE.

An Old Man Hangs Himself on Learning That His Daughter is Leading a Life of Shame.

Special to the Gazette.
TABLEAU, I. T., April 25.—News of a sad suicide of an old gray-headed man of sixty years reached this place this morning from a few miles north of here in Arkansas. On April 10 an old man by the name of Duke came to the home of Silas Ingram and said he was on the lookout for his daughter, Annie Duke, whom he had not seen since her infancy. He said that he was married in Missouri in 1840, and his wife had trouble, which separated them and he went to Oregon. His wife still lived in Missouri, and died there a year or so ago. Last July Duke came back to Missouri to live with his only child, Annie, whom he had never seen since leaving his wife, three years after their marriage. The daughter was not to be found in Missouri, and, after searching some time, he heard that she was living in this country. He immediately left for Tallahassee. He inquired for his daughter, but could get no tidings of her. A few days later, however, he got information that she was in Fort Smith, Ark., and was living a life of shame. This report was verified by others, and the old man seemed heart-broken and desolate. On the evening of the day above mentioned he was found hanging in Mr. Ingram's barn, dead. He was about sixty-six years old, and said that he had a brother in Missouri and two in Oregon. He claimed to have sold goods in Ketsville, Mo., in 1850, being one of the first merchants of that place.

TRUSTEES' ASSOCIATION.

The Educators of Tarrant County Hold a Profitable Meeting.
A most interesting meeting of the Tarrant county school trustees' association was held in the Belknap street school building to-day. The attendance was not large, owing to the great press of work among the members of the county, but nearly every portion of the commonwealth of Tarrant was represented by trustees, and quite a number of teachers were also present and participated in the interesting sessions. The trustees were welcomed to the hospitalities of Fort Worth by that man who is doing so much for education, not only in this city, but for the entire county, viz: Superintendent James M. Carlisle. He is a great favorite with the trustees, and never fails to instruct and interest them by his earnest, practical and progressive ideas. The program as published in our Gazette last week was the main carried out, and much good will certainly resulted from this day's work.

The trustees of Tarrant county are doing a grand work in the cause of education, and the new schoolhouses, elegant furniture and apparatus, increased interest and better prepared teachers, which are now to be found in many of the high schools, are pleasing monuments to their fidelity and industry. The trustees to-day were greatly encouraged by an address by W. A. Hanger, Esq., on the "Relation of the People to the Public School." Professor W. H. Kimbrough told them in a most able paper, of the "Model Public School and How to Secure It." The speeches of Mr. John Moore, Professor Sargent, Mr. W. H. Hanger and others were full of interest. A vote of thanks was given for the use of the building. By invitation of the city superintendent, the trustees' association will hold its next session in the city high school building. By motion adjourned to meet again the fourth Saturday in August, 1891, at 10 a. m. LEA CHISMAN, President pro tem.

Lillian Lewis.

The "New Magdalen" will be presented at the opera house on Saturday, May 2 for the matinee bill and "Credit Lorraine" will be played in the evening. Miss Lillian Lewis, the famous Kentucky beauty, will appear as Mercy Merrick in the former and as Lenora in the latter play. The ladies and gentlemen engaged to support the play are the most charming entertainment to, and on Wednesday night next, at Greenwall's opera house he will speak to all thoughtful men and women on "Money and Guilt," his most charming entertainment, "The Money Devil." He will not only instruct but amuse, as his talk is said to be suited to all classes. While throwing out much that will furnish food for reflection, it is marked by the wit and the humor which distinguish the eloquent editor's writings and sends every one away delighted.

Henry Watterson's Lecture.

One of the brilliant men of the press whose bright mind and best thoughts and most earnest endeavors have always been given to the South is Henry Watterson, of Louisville. He is the most charming entertainer to, and on Wednesday night next, at Greenwall's opera house he will speak to all thoughtful men and women on "Money and Guilt," his most charming entertainment, "The Money Devil." He will not only instruct but amuse, as his talk is said to be suited to all classes. While throwing out much that will furnish food for reflection, it is marked by the wit and the humor which distinguish the eloquent editor's writings and sends every one away delighted.

The Spring Medicine.

The popularity which Hood's Sarsaparilla has gained as a spring medicine is wonderful. It possesses those elements of health-giving, blood-purifying and appetite-stimulating which seem to be needed at this season, so not to continue in a dull, tired, unsatisfactory condition when you may be so much benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, and makes the weak strong.
