JUNE WEATHER.

TWO MORE SEVERE STORMS FOR THIS MONTH.

Lientenant Finley's Hot Air Theory of the Cause of Tornadoes is Discussed and Criticised.

St. Joseph. Mo., June 13.—In my last letter I gave forecasts of the storm wave due to cross the continent from the 13th to the 17th, which then gave promise of being the most destructive storm of the month. The next will be due to leave the Pacific coast about the 18th, cross the Rocky-Alleghany valley from the 19th to 21st and reach the Atlantic coast about the 22nd. I annot say what this storm will amount to except that it belongs to a period of great storms and its force will depend on the storm preceding it. If the storm from 13th to the 17th proves to be of very great force as expected, then the storm wave of 19th to 22nd will be the mildest storm of the month. But the stored up electrical energy may be divided equally between two storms, in which case each of them will be severe. Following this last mentioned storm wave another will be due to leave the Pacific coast about the 25th, cross the Rocky-Alle ghany valley from the 26th to the 28th and ach the Atlantic coast about the 29th. his storm promises to be equal to any of the month and it will spend its principal force east of the Mississippi valley. It will probably develop tornadoes and cause considerable rainfall with more cloudy and foggy weather than usual for is June. This storm will be of special interest to the Eastern states, while moderate rains may by expected from it in the South.

When we have experienced these June storms we will be better able to determine the nature of the weather in store for us during the twelve months to follow, for if these June storms show an increased force over the ordinary June weather, it will be strong evidence in support of my forecasts of a year of great storms. The equinox of Saturn will only have begun to have its influence in June and will not reach its maximum force till O-tober, while the in-fluence of Jupiter's equinox will not be felt till after September. Their combined in-fluence will be greatest in March, 1892. With the close of the June storms the rain belts in many places will change their loca-tions, and where the rains have been exces-sive they will generally become deficient while in many places where rains have been oo light, they will largely licrease. In hose localities where excessive rains have allen the effect of every storm wave has been noted and the securacy of my forecasts has been appreciated, but when the rain belts change localities the effects of the storm waves will not be so noticeable where the rainfall becomes deficient, and this will lead some to conclude that my forecasts are less accurate. But if they will take a broader view they will see that the storm waves are just as regular as before and that the change is only in the rain belts. Where the weather has been dry and by the change more rain occurs, then my forecasts will appear to be more accurate than before

In his book Lieut, Finley says: "The invariable accompaniment of a fornado is the nail storm which precedes and succeeds its irst and last appearance." This statement loes not appear consistent with Mr. Finy's theory that heat is the cause of torn; that wind-air in motion-is one of forces of the storm, but I do deny that ted air is the cause of the wind's great velocity and power. On the other hand I affirm that electricity is the moving force of every wind current that belongs to an organized storm, and that in some cases electricity alone is the force, while wind alone can never attain to this great force. Mr. Finley says that heated air from every direction rushes into the tornado's vortex and then rises with such great rapidity and force as to cause a suction with force suf-licient to accomplish the wonderful things recorded of tornadoes. If sufficient heat ushes into the storm center from all direc rushes into the storm center from an inves-tions to develop this wonderful force, would not this heat prevent the formation of these hail storms which Mr. Finley correctly de-scribes us occurring all around the torna-

the tornadoes in the Northern states occur in April and May. Those are not hot months in the Northern states, and the changes from cold to warm are not more changes from cold to warm are not more rapid than in other parts of the year. Hot winds and columns of heated air are not common in those localities during the months mentioned. Then why should one-half of all the tornadoes of the Northern states occur in these months of only average warmth, if hot air is the cause of tornadoes? Evidently the hot air is absent in this case, while, according to the elecin this case, while, according to the elec-trical theory, the earth having passed through its equinoctial electrical disturb-ance, breaking up its electrical equilib-rium, the tornadoes occur most frequently while its electrical forces are rearranging themselves during the two following

Forty years ago the great Faraday said:

cial to the Gazette. PARIS. TEX. June 14 -It is now evident that H. B. Wright of Clarksville was thor-oughly and naturally an unprincipled man, and not the victim of unfortunate ventures. Mention has heretofore been made of a suspicion that Wright had a crooked career before his advent in Clarksville, the cause therefor being that in 1883 the firm of Bur-dette & Connor, attorneys here, received a letter from a firm in Petersburg, Va., stat-ing that in the Fort Worth Gazette they JACKSON, N. C., June 4, 1891.

C. W. Worley, Esq., Attorney-at-Law
MY DEAR SIR.—Your letter of May 25, asking for a "description of Samuel J. Wright, where he came from and when he left your county," has been received. Samuel J. Wright is a small man, has fair complexion, sorter fair hair, shaves closely except on the upper lip, has tolerably large feet for a man of his small size, and eyes slightly (I think) hazel. He is now about thirty-three (33) years old. I suppose He was born, raised and lived in Northampton county, North Carolina, till the spring of 1883 (I think it was 1883) when he field to parts in known to any except his most intimate friends and relatives. He married Miss Alice Weaver, the daughter of Mr. James A. Weaver, Mr. Weaver was a school-mate of mine, and has been a friend from boyhood. He is a good and inoffensive man. He has my warmest sympathy. I hope Wright has not involved him. Will you let me know if he has? In haste for the mall. W. W. Permiss. you let me know if he has? In haste for th mail. Yours truly, W.
