deperate criminal. His are today would be just about that of Almy. At the time of his escape he was serving out a sentence of fifteen years, having been convicted on nine different indictments for larceny and embezzlement, to which he pleaded guilty in January, 1881. When Abbott was arrested in 1881 he was the ringleader of a gang of burglars who operated in towns up and down the Connecticut river.

A DECIDUOUS MAN.

He Shows His Skin and Gets a New Outfit.
Special to the Gazette.
At a recent meeting of the Chicago Medical society Dr. J. Frank reported a case where a man every July shed his skin. He was taken with feverish tremors, increasing almost to paroxysms. He undressed, lay down, and within a few minutes the skin of the chest began to turn red. The redness rapidly extended over the entire skin, and the feverish tremors continued uninterrupted for about twelve hours. Then he arose, dressed and walked about in perfect health. The skin now commenced to peel, and ten hours later it began to come off in great patches. From the arms and legs it could be pulled off exactly like gloves or stockings. As the old skin came away a new epidermis, soft and pink as a baby's, was revealed. This new skin was very sensitive; the patient had to wear softened gloves and moccasins for about a week. After the old cuticle had been entirely removed the finger and toe nails began to drop off—new nails literally crowding them out. Finally the change was complete, the man had a new skin and a new outfit of nails, and was ready to return to the mines. The shedding began in his first year and recurred every July thereafter. The New York Medical Record is quoted as authority for the foregoing.

Seaside Visitors and Damp Beds.
Special to the Gazette.
The mischief wrought by damp beds unfortunately does not usually stop with the headless originator. The sole sufferer is the luckless occupant who buries himself within the chill of half dried bedclothes. An instance in which the injured party appealed successfully to the law for damages is related by the English Lancet, which says: The plaintiff, who had for several days occupied a room at a seaside resort, was told that the apartment was let and he must accept another. Here the trouble began. Illness with its expenses followed, and the final cost to the too unceremonious host was considerable. An action so unusual and a verdict so consonant with sanitary principles deserve to be kept in remembrance. However, the maxim which indicates prevention is still the best. Not even a money fine will always atone for the injury done by avoidable illness. Let the traveler, however weary and inclined to sleep, first be careful that his bed is dry. In any case of doubt a change of bedding should be insisted on, and the further precaution of sleeping between blankets, or than sheets is in such cases only rational."

The Gastric Juice.
A physician is authority for the following statements in regard to the action of the gastric juice on microbes: "The empty stomach of a healthy man contains innumerable organisms, the maximum which microbe properties. The microbes take no active part in digestion. Persons who, on account of some affections, secrete little hydrochloric acid, are easily intoxicated by means of the micro-organisms in the stomach. Therefore the stomach should not remain in an empty condition for any length of time, and during an epidemic food should be taken at frequent intervals, and, if possible, sterilized."

A DAY IN AN ENGLISH HOUSEHOLD.

The Ideal of Comfort Is Good Service.
Even if the Table Be Less Splendid.
In an article on the English middle classes Harper's Bazar gives some very entertaining details about the manners and daily customs of an English household of the "upper" middle class, among them the following:

An American woman wonders when she learns how many servants are needed to run such a household. The cook must have her one or more kitchen maids, there must be a couple of footmen and a parlor maid, two or three chambermaids and a lady's maid, and in large houses this would seem a small staff.

At 5 o'clock tea is served. It is brought up to the drawing room on a tray, and is the most informal and delightful of all English meals. This slice of bread and butter and cake—homemade, if possible—are eaten with it, and on a day "at home" it is answered as an excellent substitute for conversation. After tea it is time to dress for 7, 7:30 or 8 o'clock dinner.

Dinner, the master of the house now faring at home, is a very formal affair, far more so than it is with us. The manner in which it is served is of more account than the dishes which it contains. Our stand by, soup, you need never expect to get very good, if you get it at all. Upon the inevitable joint and the no less inevitable turkey can be surely counted. With dinner the day is over, and the evening is spent in conversation, amusement, whether that means sitting around the fire in the embarrassed silence, broken by spasmodic "aahs" that in English are called "talking, or going to the piano, where state company are usually filled by the wealthy "upper" middle class.
