What Jay Says About It. Special to the Gazette. New York, Sept. 26.—The following interview with Jay Gould was published this morning in the Stockholder: The Missouri Pacific has passed through three pretty lean years, and has paid its dividends. I see nothing in the future of that or of any of the properties in which I am interested.

FULL LINE OF PIANOS AND ORGANS.

The National Museum. Probably the articles which attract most attention from the average visitor to the national museum in Washington are the Washington relics and the many aviators and other presents made to General Grant during his trip around the world. In a large case are the veritable coats and other articles of clothing worn by the first president during the war of the Revolution and on state occasions.

Reaction in Goodness. Quite too little is made of the law of action and reaction in the study of human nature. The very best efforts that can be put forth for virtue lead to enfeeblement and exhaustion, and so the chances are that the reaction will be in the opposite direction.

Salmon P. Chase was commonly called "Old Greenback" during the war, when he was secretary of the treasury, because he established our present system of national currency. Daniel W. Voorhees, the noted United States senator, is often called "The Tall Sycamore of the Waabash," because his tall figure and long limbs are strongly characteristic of the tall sycamore tree, which is common to his home in the Waabash. James G. Blaine is admirably called "The Plumed Knight." Colonel Ingersoll gave him the name in his great speech in the Republican convention of 1876.

Italian Waiters in London. There are over 2,000 Italian waiters in London, not one of whom is paid any salary by his employers. As a rule, indeed, the Italian waiter has to pay a fine varying from two to three shillings a day to the proprietor of the restaurant in which he waits. In the case of one large and well known foreign restaurant, the waiters in some of the rooms have to pay four shillings a day to the proprietor.—London Times.

THE HOMES. Eccentric Diners in Paris Restaurants. The Paris restaurants have a wealth of stories about eccentric diners. Prince Soltykoff, according to the gossip, was accustomed to consult the menus at two of the most celebrated houses, choosing the dishes from his favorite dishes. After dining well he used to give the waiter instructions to wake him in a couple of hours, whereupon he would drop into a sound sleep, and hardly move until his time was up.
