on, and I may say we have no reason now to complain of our success. Instead of having only two layrights, we now have over thirty that I know of—all men who follow play-writing as a profession and make money by their labor. Some, indeed, have become rich."

"Are there not too many playwrights now?" someone asked. "Oh, dear, no," came the quick reply. "There is a positive demand for good plays to-day. What is lacking, if anything, is originality, but that will come, too, and we shall have better plays by and by, as new men come into the work. There is a fine chance now for any one who can write good plays. Managers are looking for them, and the public is waiting eagerly."

"You have high hopes of the American drama?" "Yes, indeed. American dramatists have already done very well. In time they will do better. We are just beginning now, but the foundation is secure, and there need be no fear of the future."

"Then Sydney Rosenfeld, Clay Greene, Edward Kelder and Bill Nye, all successful playwrights, smiled a broad and robust smile as they applauded what Mr. Howard had said."

"But what shall I do?" once said a young man to Joseph Pulitzer, after telling the editor of the World how well he would be able to do for him. Mr. Pulitzer's answer always struck me as a good one.

"I do not need writers," he said. "Writers are plentiful enough. They can be found anywhere. What I need is something good and original, and ideas that will boom the circulation of my paper—young men of progress who can see ahead and who can make their own way up in the world, and who are not afraid to do it."

SEVENTEEN KILLED. The Anaconda Mine Crushes the Life Out of 17 Miners. HURLED DOWN THE SHAFT. Just as Nineteen Men are Going to Work in the Cage a Rope Breaks.

Death Came Instantly to All but Two of the Poor Fellows, and They Will Die Too—Narrow Escape of Men in the Mine.

Seven Miners Killed. BETTIE GRAY, MONT., Nov. 4.—Seventeen miners coming up in a cage were killed this morning in the Anaconda mines.

When midnight, the time to shift the gears of men, had come, and the cage full of miners returning from work stepped out into the open air, their places were at once taken by the nineteen men who were to take up the work they had just abandoned, and the cage was started toward the depths below. The rope had been unbound and a couple of times from the slowly revolving winch when there was a sudden snap missing some of the rope from the shaft in which the cage had but a moment before disappeared. The rope had broken, and the cage with its nineteen inmates was precipitated to the bottom of the mine.

It was some little time before any assistance could be sent to them. The shaft down which they had plunged to death was useless, and the two who were getting at the place where they had fallen were round about. Fortunately there was some help for the dead and dying in the mine itself, and the two who were getting at the place where they had fallen were round about. Fortunately there was some help for the dead and dying in the mine itself, and the two who were getting at the place where they had fallen were round about.

The Anaconda is the biggest mine in the state, employing 400 men, and was put into operation, closing on October 1, 1891.

Special to the Gazette. WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The reason why the Republicans elected their representative in congress from the Fifth Michigan district, yet why they were defeated in the Postmaster-General Don M. Dickinson.

The vote was divided between the Republican candidate and two Democratic ones. The vote of the strength of the straight Democrat and of the industrial candidate was very much larger than the vote by which the Republican was elected in the national campaign, and the vote will go to the Democratic candidate.

"Of course," he said, "every one who was associated with Cleveland's administration must rejoice over the result in New York, Massachusetts and Iowa. Campbell made a glorious fight in Ohio and deserves great credit for it. I regret he is not to serve another term as governor, but McKinley's election is not much of a victory for the Republicans.

"I do not think the silver question will figure in the campaign. I think there will be legislation of a tentative character on that subject by the Fifty-second congress. I doubt it being possible to get a free-coinage bill through the senate. The margin is very narrow, and in the last session the free-bill fight had a great deal to do with the vote. But if a free-coinage bill should be passed by both houses of congress, the probabilities are that it would probably lead to some experimental, perhaps temporary, financial legislation which will carry the whole question over until after the national election."

Dickinson said he thought the result of Tuesday's vote made things look bright for Cleveland.

The New York Vote. NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The election figures show that the total vote cast this year was $8,400 less than in 1890. A notable feature in this city is that the Democrats have lost most in districts which in 1890 gave Hill a large plurality. In the districts where Fassett lost close to McKinley's close followers ran far behind the figures of Hill.
