You see, an immortal steed is an everlasting nag, so there you are!" - Stray Stories.

NO WORD OF SHACKLETON

Probably at the Ross Sea Base—Rescue Ship Is Badly Damaged

CANNOT RELIEVE PARTY FOR MONTHS

The Great Question Is Whether the Stores the Men Possess Will Be Sufficient to Sustain the Life of the Party for a Year.

LONDON, March 28.—Reports received here state that the auxiliary ship Aurora of the Shackleton Antarctic expedition, which was damaged in the ice and is now proceeding to New Zealand for repairs, is not in distress or in need of assistance. The latest message indicates that the Aurora is proceeding under her own steam. Reuter's Melbourne correspondent telegraphs that if necessary a relief ship will be dispatched from New Zealand to meet the Aurora. A New Zealand wireless station is in communication with her. Sir Douglas Mawson, the Antarctic explorer, expresses the opinion that there is no cause for undue alarm. The Aurora at the time the first message was sent was in the far South Pacific. The wireless said the steamer had been damaged and was proceeding to New Zealand for repairs. The fate of Lieut. Sir Ernest Shackleton and the party with him which set out to cross the South Pole, is not known. Apparently attempts had been made to send the wireless for several months, but it had only just been received at the New Zealand station which forwarded it to England. The message was sent by a member of the staff of the Aurora, which was sent from Australia to Ross sea at the end of 1914 for the purpose of bringing back Shackleton's party when they had crossed the South Polar continent. It was not known that the Aurora had a wireless on board and the despatch was delivered to an office of the expedition which had been closed for some time. The news received in London leaves the world completely in the dark as to the doings or whereabouts of Lieutenant Shackleton and his immediate party. If they have carried out their program they are now presumably at the Ross sea base, but without the expected ship to take them off. Even if Shackleton has been unsuccessful in the attempt to cross the pole and has had to retrace his steps to the Weddell sea base, thence to return to Buenos Aires, the relief expedition will have to be reorganized to effect the rescue of Lieutenant Aeneas Mackintosh, R. N. R., in command of the Aurora, and a number of his companions who were left on shore at Ross sea when the Aurora broke from her moorings. The great question is whether the stores which these men possessed will be sufficient to sustain the lives of the party for a year. The information contained in the message received at London was at once communicated to King George, who presented Lieutenant Shackleton with a flag to carry during his march and who has taken great interest in Shackleton's task. The news caused great concern among the relatives and friends of the explorers. Until the Aurora arrives at some port and a full story of her adventures is available, the extent of the loss sustained by the party cannot be definitely known. The full text of the wireless message received in London contained about 400 words. It said that the Aurora had reached her destination later in January 1915, and landed two parties under Lieutenant Mackintosh and also a considerable quantity of stores. Meanwhile the Aurora lay at her moorings off Cape Evans. Several attempts were made to find a safe harbor, but these all failed owing to the extremely bad season. A blizzard on May 6 drove the Aurora from her moorings. The vessel became lodged in pack ice, which carried her northward toward Cape Adare. She lost her rudder and suffered a severe strain to her hull in the ice about July 21, when ninety miles south of Coulman Island. The breaking away of the Aurora and her subsequent inability to pick up the members of the Shackleton expedition on their arrival at the Ross sea side of the Antarctic was almost the only contingency that had not been foreseen.

SAY GRIEF BLEW HERSELF UP.

Germans Assert Ship Fought Three British Cruisers Single Handed.

LONDON, March 28.—Later details of the North Sea battle between the German raiding vessel Greif and the British armed merchant steamer Alcantara, in which both were lost, tell how when the Greif was challenged by the Alcantara she replied "I am a peaceful merchantman flying the Norwegian flag." When a boat was lowered from the Alcantara, however, the Greif threw off her disguise and fired three torpedoes at the British vessel, two of which found their mark. Before these could be effective, though, the Alcantara's guns raked the German raider with such an effect that the attacked and the attacker sank almost simultaneously.

A supplementary statement issued at Berlin by the German admiralty said the Greif blew herself up after she had been struck by a torpedo shot "by a great British cruiser of some 15,000 tons," by which undoubtedly the Alcantara is meant. The German official version calls the Greif "an auxiliary cruiser" and says she fought single handed three British cruisers and one destroyer. In British naval circles particular indignation is expressed over the fact that a German officer, after being rescued and resuscitated with brandy, provided with warm blankets and with dry, clean and pressed clothes, asked indignantly: "Are the English so short of clothing that they were obliged to steal my necktie?"

TO BREED A UTILITY DOG.

New Club Devoted to Animals for Armies and the Police.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 28.—The Army and Police Dog Club of the United States of America has been organized at Englewood to encourage and promote the breeding, training, and use of dogs suitable for armies, Red Cross societies, police departments, farms, ranches and country estates. It is the hope of the founders that working along lines of preparedness, dog lovers may center their affections on those breeds or types of animals which in time of need may prove of great use to the country. They will develop the working qualities and try to produce the best dog for army and police duty, irrespective of breed. The organization is being perfected by the Rev. Robert Davis, Albert J. Ditman, Harry Heatherby, Sheppard Homan, Douglas Thompson, Morrell Birwhistle, and others.

LOST JEWELRY IS RETURNED.

Finder of $5,000 Package Keeps Identity a Secret.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 28.—Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Powell of Englewood, who lost a package containing $5,000 worth of jewels, while on their way home from New York in an automobile a week ago, have received the lost jewels. They were returned to Mrs. Powell by special delivery, but without any evidence as to who returned them. Just prior to this the empty bag was sent to Mr. Powell at the Importers and Traders bank, where he is cashier, and all hopes were then lost of ever recovering the property.

PEACE CALL FOR LABOR.

Gompers Asks Union in All Countries to Send Delegates.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—A call has been issued to the organized labor unions of all countries to send delegates to a Labor's World Peace Congress, to be held simultaneously with the peace congress that the nations now at war will ultimately hold, and in the same city. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is issuing the call. The labor congress, according to the plan, will formulate demands to be served upon the peace representatives, demands which will assure organized labor fuller rights in all the nations. Experiments have shown that fish are strongly attracted by musical sounds.

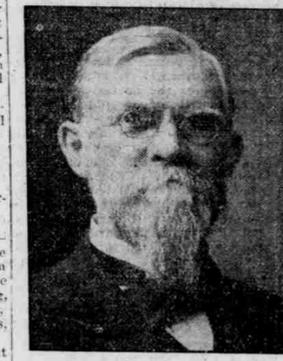

HOPES TO BE COMMANDER

Capt. H. C. Streeter Probably Will Be Candidate at G. A. R. Encampment

SAYS HE WILL NOT ENTER CONTEST

Assured of Support from Prominent Grand Army Men of State - Was Captain of Cavalry and Twice Wounded—Trustee of Soldiers' Home

Assured of the support of Sedgwick post, G. A. R., of Brattleboro and of several prominent members of the Grand Army posts of Vermont it is probable that Capt. Henry C. Streeter of Brattleboro, a past commander of Sedgwick post, president of the Windham County Veterans' association and president of the First Vermont Cavalry association, will be a candidate for department commander of Vermont.

CAPT. HENRY C. STREETER.

The 49th annual encampment of the Department of Vermont, G. A. R., will be held in Burlington Tuesday and Wednesday, April 18 and 19, at which Commander-in-chief E. R. Monfort and other high officials will be present.

The delegates from Sedgwick post, Jonathan C. Howe, H. P. Hunter and Col. Kithridge Haskins, by vote of Sedgwick post in its last meeting, are to support the candidacy of Capt. Streeter. Col. Thoms Hannon of Bennington, formerly of Brattleboro, with in a few days urged Capt. Streeter to be a candidate, pledging him the support of Bennington county. Gen. T. S. Peck of Burlington, who served for several months in the same company with Capt. Streeter, a year ago pledged his support to him at the coming encampment. Department Commander George P. Martin of Montpelier, who will retire this year, is a supporter of Capt. Streeter and there are others of prominence in G. A. R. circles in the state who have given him unsolicited assurances of their support.

Capt. Streeter says he does not care to enter a contest for the honor and has hesitancy about permitting his name to go before the encampment as a candidate, for he appreciates the many duties involved and considers some of them arduous, but his friends declare that he will be the unopposed candidate and will accept the election.

Capt. Streeter enlisted in Company F, First Vermont cavalry, in Brattleboro and served as a private, until promoted to a sergeant in July, 1864. As a sergeant he was wounded twice at the same time in the battle near Charlestown in the Shenandoah valley Aug. 24, 1864, once in the abdomen and again in the left arm. He recovered sufficiently in three months to rejoin his command. He was promoted by the regular stages until he was made captain Feb. 2, 1865. He is a native of Chesterfield, N. H., and was born Jan. 27, 1841. He has been pension agent here over 10 years and conducts a real estate business. He is a trustee of the Soldiers' Home in Bennington and very well known to Grand Army men throughout the state.

FRED M. SPAULDING DEAD. Prominent Merchant of Claremont Was Former Brattleboro Man. Fred M. Spaulding, a prominent merchant in Claremont, N. H., who was a resident of Brattleboro a number of years, died suddenly in his home early yesterday morning. He had been in ill health several months. In 1891 Mr. Spaulding and Julius Timson went from this town to Claremont, where they opened a furniture and undertaking establishment. Mr. Timson retired from the business two years later, and since then it had been conducted successfully by Mr. Spaulding. Mr. Spaulding was born in Springfield, Vt., and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Spaulding. Surviving relatives include his mother, living in Charlestown; his wife, Nellie Ellison Spaulding; a brother, Morton M. Spaulding of North Adams, Mass.; and two sons, Francis and Morton. The Claremont Daily Eagle says: "Of the sterling character and attractive personality of Mr. Spaulding it is needless to say much. During his quarter of a century's residence here he had made countless friends, both in business circles and in social and fraternal life, and his sympathetic and kindly nature had made him particularly fitted for both branches of his work. His death will be mourned by many who have come into occasional contact with him, as well as by those to whom he was near and dear. "Mr. Spaulding was particularly prominent in the lodges of the town, his name appearing on the membership lists of the Foresters of America, Masons, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Pythias, A. O. U. W., Royal Arcanum, Knights of Malta, Elks and Moose."

BUY IMPORTED SHORTHORN BULL. W. S. Pratt of this Town Part Owner of One of England's Best. W. S. Pratt of this town and W. Arthur Simpson of Lyndonville have recently bought the four-year-old imported Shorthorn bull, Robin, considered by competent judges to be the best specimen of milking shorthorn ever bred in England. This bull is now at Mr. Pratt's farm in Brattleboro, having arrived from Canada last week. Robin was imported from England by Professor Barton of MacDonalld college, Montreal. At a recent consignment sale a yearling calf by this bull brought $1,375. L. D. May of Granville Center, Pa., a veteran breeder of Shorthorns, was a guest at the Pratt farm over Sunday and said he considered Robin the finest type of Shorthorn male he had ever seen.
