STREET FAIR

America's Great Street Fair Promoter Visits Norfolk.

To Confer With Board of Trade and B. M. A. on Subject of Opening Season Here—Richmond, Lynchburg and Danville Want Fairs.

Some correspondence has recently passed between the Norfolk Board of Trade and Business Men's Association and Mr. Frank W. Gaskill, of Canton, Ohio, on the subject of a street fair for Norfolk.

For several years past many of Norfolk's leading business men have considered the desirability of having some great attraction in this city each year to draw hither thousands of people from all of our great tributary section as well as to advertise this city widely throughout the country.

But for unforeseen circumstances Norfolk would have had a grand "Miscellaneous celebration," with its varied interesting and attractive features. The street fairs that have so rapidly become popular seem to accomplish this end and appear, as a rule, to be self-sustaining.

As a result of the correspondence referred to, Mr. Gaskill, manager of the Canton Carnival Company, of Canton, Ohio, reached Norfolk yesterday and had a lengthy conference yesterday afternoon with Secretary Dawes, of the Board of Trade and Business Men's Association.

Mr. Gaskill stated that, in order to secure a street fair for Norfolk next summer, arrangements for fairs at several other cities in Virginia would be necessary on account of the large expense involved in transporting the great amount of street fair paraphernalia, midway attractions, trained animals, &c.

The Lynchburg Board of Trade is said to be favorably inclined toward a street fair, and it is understood that Danville is anxious to have one. Mr. Gaskill has also received a number of encouraging letters from Richmond, so matters may be arranged to have four big street fairs in Virginia, opening at Norfolk.

It is understood that Baltimore will also have a street fair. Mr. Gaskill left for Baltimore last night, and will return Wednesday for a further conference here.

The Canton Carnival Company and Mr. Gaskill are the originators of the continuous street fairs and carnivals that last summer gained such great favor, and were, as a rule, brilliant successes financially.

The object of street fairs is to attract great numbers of people to the cities where they are held and stimulate local trade as well as to advertise the city and its resources.

Very similar fairs have been held for many years in Germany, Russia, France and England, but America has neglected them and their attractive features.

Mr. Gaskill's company is the one that made such notable successes last year at Columbus, O.; Rochester, N. Y.; Atlanta, Ga.; Dayton, O.; Springfield, O., and other leading cities. The Canton Carnival Company began the season of 1899 on May 29th, at Chillicothe, O., and closed at Savannah, Ga. If satisfactory arrangements can be made they will open the season for 1900 at Norfolk late in April or early in May.

Their street fairs for 1900 are expected to be superior to those of last year, as much of their equipment is new. Mr. Dawes will bring the matter before the Board of Trade and Business Men's Association for consideration.

Prof. H. M. Hamill Coming. Prof. Hamill, the international field secretary of the International Sunday School Association, will speak in the First Baptist Church Wednesday next at 8:30 p. m., and in the evening at 8 o'clock in Epworth Methodist Church.

It is to be hoped that all the Protestant churches of the city will unite in these meetings. Epworth Church will seat 1,200 people. It would be an inspiration to the Sunday school workers of the city to have this spacious church filled. A lecture from Prof. Hamill will do much to inspire with new life those who hear him.

SKY SCRAPER FOR NORFOLK.

BIG BUILDING MAY BE ERECTED ON GRANBY STREET.

It is reported, on what is considered good authority, that a number of Norfolk capitalists are preparing to erect a big store and office building at the corner of Granby and Plume streets, on the site where the old Newton home-stand now stands.

The building will, it is said, be at least eight stories high, and may be ten stories. The Board of Trade and Business Men's Association has been approached on the subject of removing its quarters to the proposed building, and the proposition meets with some favor, as the trend of business seems to be in that direction, and the location is convenient. There would also be no finer point in Norfolk than the roof of such a building as the one proposed for visitors to get a comprehensive view of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Berkley, Norfolk harbor and all of our environs.

While it cannot at present be stated as a fact that the building will be erected, it is understood that the probabilities are that it will, and that it will be one of the finest office buildings in the South, thoroughly modern in every respect and architecturally beautiful.

Theatrical Stock Companies.

A representative of The Virginian-Pilot had a very pleasant chat with Mr. J. W. Albaugh, Jr., at the Monticello Hotel yesterday. Few men are better qualified to talk upon the subject of theatrical stock companies than Mr. Albaugh, who has been engaged for eleven years in the development of a company which has reached a degree of excellence that Baltimoreans are justly very proud of. This company enjoys a record of having successfully performed about ninety plays. Speaking of the merits of the stock company as a factor in the elevation of the stage and in the artistic development of the dramatic profession, Mr. Albaugh said that in a company like his young actors and actresses are afforded an opportunity of ascertaining the line of work best suited to their talents, as the great variety of roles to which they are assigned during a year furnish a severe test to their capabilities, and sooner or later the actor discovers his specialty or that he has none. It is a school of dramatic art, the students of which are required to study hard, and work hard, or get out, as the presentation of a new play each week cannot be accomplished unless each individual member does full duty. The members of a stock company are not Bohemians, but live and enjoy their circle of friends like other citizens of their city. They are therefore free from many of the contaminating influences that the members of many travelling companies are subjected to. Mr. Albaugh mentioned the fact that nearly all of the greatest exponents of the drama were the products of the stock companies in the days of limited transportation facilities, when nearly every city had its stock company as its bright and particular centre of amusement.

A Casting Record.

The Aetna Iron Works, of this city, are at work on what is said to be the biggest job of the kind ever undertaken in Norfolk.

This is the casting of from seventy to eighty enormous iron columns for the new block Captain Wm. Taylor is building on Main street, opposite the Confederate monument, which structure will be the new home of Miller-Rhoads & Co.

These columns are eleven inches in diameter and twenty feet long. The iron shell of the columns is two inches thick. They will have an aggregate weight of eighty to ninety tons.

The successful production of such work is a matter of congratulation and shows that Norfolk is well equipped to handle casting jobs of considerable size and importance.

Mass Meeting of Epworth League

A mass meeting of the Seaside Union of Epworth Leagues was held at Epworth M. E. Church at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Owing to the very inclement weather the attendance was not large, but the meeting was a very interesting one.

The exercises were presided over by the president, Mr. James F. Kegebein, and after singing by the choir and congregation, prayer was offered by Rev. A. Coke Smith, D. D.

Addresses on the work of Epworth Leagues as an important auxiliary to the church were made by Rev. Daniel T. Merritt, Rev. George W. Jones and Rev. S. C. Hatcher. The meeting was one of peculiar interest to leagues. There are between 800 and 1,000 members in this vicinity.

Had His Leg Broken.

In endeavoring to avoid a collision with a trolley car on York street Saturday afternoon two carts, passing in an opposite direction, collided with great force, knocking Frank Jones, one of the drivers, from his seat. He fell under the wheels of his own vehicle, which passed over and broke one of his legs. He was removed to the Norfolk Hospital for treatment. He was hauling oyster shells from Atlantic City Ward to Brambleton when the accident occurred, and the horse he was driving was quite a spirited animal.

A Runaway Accident.

While Mr. McFarland, a former member of the City Councils, was driving up Church street in an open vehicle about 11:40 a. m. yesterday, his horse became frightened and ran away, throwing him out of the buggy in front of the undertaking establishment of J. L. Morris & Co., No. 527 Church street. He received painful injuries about the head. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken into Morris & Co.'s place of business, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. L. R. Chiles. Subsequently the injured man was removed to his home.

"DARKER NORFOLK"

Sermon by Rev. L. R. Christie at Spurgeon Memorial Church.

Text: Prov. 29, 2. "When the Righteous are in Authority the People Rejoice, but When the Wicked Beareth Rule the People Mourn."

The announcement that Rev. L. R. Christie would tell of "Darker Norfolk" in Spurgeon Memorial Baptist Church Sunday night filled the edifice to overflowing with eager listeners, and numbers had to be turned away, being unable to gain admittance.

At the close of the sermon Mr. Christie asked who would help to make Norfolk a better city, and in response the whole congregation stood on their feet.

Text, Prov. 29, 2. "When the Righteous are in Authority the People Rejoice, but When the Wicked Beareth Rule the People Mourn."

Mr. Christie said: "I confess it is with some trepidation that I have ventured to speak to-night in this connection, not because I fear the multitude, but because it may have upon its face the appearance of cheap sensationalism. It has not been my purpose to take this stand for any such sinister purpose, but in the interest of virtue and righteousness in the community."

"Before proceeding it may be well to discuss briefly how far the churches are divinely authorized to go in this direction. There is one extreme which asserts that the churches have nothing whatever to do with the administration of government, and that its end can be properly subserved only by maintaining absolute silence regarding it. There is the other extreme which advocates such a union of the State and the Church as will make them patrons of each other. One of these extremes is as faulty as the other. One fails to measure up to the proper standard as much as the other oversteps it. The ideal citizenship and the province of the church lies between these two radical extremes."

"The churches are in the world for the discovery and the correction of the evil very largely. If a Herod sits upon the throne, we need a John the Baptist to denounce his iniquities."

"The fact deserves to be noticed that the churches and the State alike deal with individuals. The same individuals that compose the churches compose the State. No one would deny the duty of the churches to exhort their members to honesty and purity in home life, in private life, in business, in politics. As it is the duty of the church to commend this virtue, it is equally its duty to condemn the corresponding one of vice; and in our discussion to-night should we make any criticism, the criticism will be directed against the official individuals. This, it seems to me, the province of the Church."

"It has been said that the duty of the Church is to work out reformation by changing the morals of the individuals. This is our purpose, yet we shall do this by seeking to remove these immoral surroundings—in a word, by acting as well as speaking."

"I have been still further assured that no decisive steps along this line will be taken until the existing facts are laid bare before the public. If the actual condition of things was generally known, it would create a sentiment of determination that would completely de-vour the adversary. If the good women of this city knew of the terrible vices that are estranging them and destroying their husbands, brothers and sons, they would rise up Phoenix-like and demand a revolution."

"With this conviction, I determined to take a glimpse at 'Darker Norfolk' and, consequently, after the services of last Sunday night, I made a change in my wardrobe and started on a tour of inspection through the city."

"Going down Queen street, our first objective point was the bar adjoining the Ballentine Arcade on Church street. We reached a position of intelligent observation by going up the dark lane in the rear of this place of business. Of course, the bar was closed. Upstairs, however, was a crowd of contemptive whites and blacks, whose movements could be clearly distinguished through the windows slightly raised. It was a motley crowd of gamblers. Their oaths and filthy cries made the night hideous; and, let me declare here, my hearers, that a gambler is a thief at heart, because he fleches from another that for which he makes no honest return."

"Who runs this place? Do you know? I will not call his name. He is the big Fourth Ward politician. Now you know him. An official sometime ago, in discussing the political problem, said that this man carried the Fourth Ward in his pockets. When he takes snuff the Fourth Ward sneezes. There are some good people in the Fourth Ward. Most of those who have not moved away are dead. The balance ought to move away or die like they are going to permit a man like this to put a ring in their nose and lead them around whenever he wills. Yet all his hee-lers are not in that particular section. Nearly all the office-holders in this city are under obligations to this man. The Police Department is his steadfast friend."

"The Chief ventured to champion his cause enough in talking with me, in the presence of the Mayor sometime ago, to say that he never gave the Police Department any trouble. I don't wonder at it. They don't want any trouble. There is not likely to be any trouble as long as they permit him to perpetrate his lawlessness unchallenged."

"The next place discovered was at the corner of Queen and Church streets. The upstairs was resonant with the voices of the dusky populace, which gave evidence that Norfolk's popular game was in full blast. As we were not in pursuit of information for the benefit of the Police Department, moral evidence was quite as satisfactory for our purpose as 'ocular demonstration.'"

"Further down Queen street we found two or three other gambling dens, in connection with bars, that were occupied with these petty gamblers—a mixture of 'white trash and niggers.' At the corner of St. Paul and Queen streets is a licensed bar-room with the name of Ed. Bright on the sign. Everything was quiet and I was beginning to wonder if there was one man in this section running a den that respected the law.

"We walked around the corner down St. Paul street and found there was a wooden shed adjoining the building, which gave the appearance of being lighted. We could also hear voices from the place that would sound very familiar to your boys. Upon examination we discovered a little narrow walkway between the buildings. Creeping along in we found a glass in the door, through which we looked and found others gambling."

"We then went through Bank to Washington street, which was resonant with the music of wasted lives and blasted hopes. As I walked through the street and saw the grating faces—painted to hide the growing traces of despair and remorse—I could not help thinking these are some mother's children."

"Once she was as pure as the morning dew. As she knelt at her mother's knee; No face was so fair, no heart more true, And none was so sweet as she."

"We give them over to the licentious and ungodly, to be sneered at as they pass along the streets; but we don't know anything about their past. Back yonder in the country there may be a poor old mother, wrinkled and grey, kneeling with uplifted eyes and hands, pleading with God for her wayward child. But her damnation is welligh sealed. She is sought after by the wicked, neglected and left alone by the Christian people. She has forsaken the guide of her youth and abandoned the covenant of her God."

"Every shop and dive house in this section was thoroughly alive. Our next point was Talbot street. Sunday is a big day here. One bar, bearing the metropolitan name of 'Metropole,' which has an ordinary license and doing business in an 'ordinary way.' Their business was in no way cloaked, and I regard this as being the best place we visited. You could walk along the sidewalk and see all that was done, from eating a cold sandwich to washing it down with intoxicants."

"On reaching Church street we were not deceived regarding its unsavory reputation. Crap joints and baggins and barrooms were in full blast. From the sidewalks at the corner of Church and Water streets we looked in a window and saw through a door ajar two bar clerks behind the counters busy dealing out drinks to a noisy crowd of customers. The proprietor of this establishment has published a card, stating that his place was not open that night. Then he ought to have some one arrested for breaking open his place at night. I will go on the witness stand and swear that he was open and doing business. There was a policeman near by, but, of course, he never saw it. Let a policeman in this city begin doing his duty in this respect and he will be 'spotted.' An edict will go out from headquarters and some charge will be preferred against him and the Police Commissioners will promptly deal with him."

"In short, nearly all the barrooms in the city do a thrifty business on Sunday. The Chief of Police admitted this to me."

"After making the rounds we went to the station-house, and to our surprise and deep mortification found officers playing a game of cards Sunday night, and officers pledged to uphold and maintain the law desecrating God's holy day by playing cards. It was a fitting climax to the devilry we had been witnessing."

"I am not expecting anything from that crowd. I am credibly informed that the 'big barkeeper' had an officer upon one occasion in his gambling room 'right in it with his boys.' This is the Chief's own admission. He told me that policeman had to be taken from this class who frequent these places, so they would be familiar with them. This may be his policy, but I don't believe you can ever make the vicious anxious to arrest vice. There may be good men on the force, but they are in the minority."

"I spoke to the Commonwealth's Attorney and he said that it would be a good thing to teach all boys to gamble, and confidently referred to himself as being a shining evidence of his theory."

"These people when you speak of reformation point you to the failures of the last reform movement. They did fail in not giving the people all they needed, but their failures were an infinite blessing when compared with the present administration. May God and the good people of Norfolk give us a change in our condition."
