

THE JR. O. U. A. M. IN SESSION.

A Large Attendance at the State Council.

The First Day's Session Largely Taken Up in Hearing Reports Showing the Condition of the Order—Washington Likely to be the Place of the Next Meeting.

The State Council of Virginia, Jr. O. U. A. M., assembled in this city yesterday in their seventh annual session, and was called to order by State Councillor C. A. Rawson, of Richmond.

Nearly the whole delegation arrived Sunday evening from the East. Six of the Richmond delegates arrived at noon Sunday. The remainder came at 6 o'clock the same evening, together with the delegates from Norfolk, Petersburg, Portsmouth, Lynchburg and other towns.

The Washington delegation, consisting of twenty-one members, arrived at 6 o'clock the same evening on a special car over the Shenandoah Valley railroad.

The whole delegation was met by committees from the home councils, and piloted to the Ponce de Leon hotel, where quarters had been secured.

The Washington boys had their car decorated, and were themselves covered with a profusion of badges. They headed the march to the hotel and on arriving at that popular hostelry formed in a line. They had a leader and were well drilled for the occasion.

"Are you ready?" asked the leader. "We are," was the chorus of voices. "Then go."

Then every one began a vociferous chant:

"It is—It is—It is true, Wash—Wash—Wash—ing—ton In '90—'90—'92."

Then followed a loud cheer. The words were to signify that they wanted the next State council to meet in the capitol city. They are a gay set of fellows, wore Prince Albert coats, high silk hats and made a fine show.

The time of the session yesterday was consumed in hearing the reports of the various officers. When State Councillor Rawson called the body to order there were present: C. A. Rawson, State councillor, Richmond; George E. Howard, State vice councillor, Washington, D. C.; W. M. Lipscomb, State past councillor, Manchester; Thos. B. Ivey, State council secretary, Petersburg; G. M. Rawson, State council treasurer, Richmond; O. J. Coffman, State council conductor, Norfolk; J. J. David, State council inside sentinel, pro tem., and H. N. Engleke, State council outside sentinel, pro tem., Roanoke.

The committee on credentials, E. T. Keeton, Edgar Lyles and W. E. Thomas, reported soon after the session had been called about new delegates who were admitted and obligated.

The report of the State councillor consisted of a statement of his appointment as deputy State councillor, official visits, dispensations granted to councils for various purposes, dispensations refused, by-laws and amendments and the following is a list of new councils:

Richlands, No. 36, at Richlands; Southwest, No. 37, at Roanoke; Advance, No. 38, at Newport News; Graham, No. 40, at Graham; Constellation, No. 39, at Washington; Natural Bridge, No. 41, at Buena Vista; Friendship, No. 42, at Lynchburg; Excelsior, No. 43, at Washington; Vinton, No. 44, at Vinton; Hampton, No. 45, at Hampton; Reno, No. 46, at Tennallytown, D. C., and Hermonie, No. 47, at Washington.

The report further states that three councils became defunct during the year, No. 21 at Shenandoah, and No. 36 at Richlands. It was also currently reported that Pulaski council was defunct and that several more were following in the same channel.

The report of the State council secretary was next made. It showed a membership of 2,971 last June. Forty councils were represented, and twelve had been instituted during the past year. The report further stated that the order was in good condition and growing right along.

The committee on arrangements invited the State council to go through the Roanoke Machine Works, which they accepted and will fulfill to-day. It was decided to hold the election of officers at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, after which the council adjourned till after dinner.

TO VISIT KENOVA.

General Manager Sands and President Kimball on Their Way.

General Manager Sands, of the Norfolk and Western, left for Philadelphia Sunday night to meet President Kimball. The two left yesterday for Columbus, and will go from there to Kenova, where the big railroad bridge is being built across the Ohio river.

The iron work on two spans of the bridge were finished yesterday and it is expected to have the bridge completed and ready for trains by the middle of November. Mr. Sands will be gone about one week and when he returns will probably be accompanied by Chief Engineer Coe, who has been in Kenova for over a month. Mr. Kimball will not come to Roanoke just yet, but will go direct to Philadelphia from Kenova, visiting Roanoke later.

ASSAULTED BY A NEGRO.

Ed. Oppenheim Has an Exciting Experience on Commerce Street.

Edward Oppenheim, known as "the bantam," was assaulted by an unknown colored man on Commerce and Church streets Sunday night about half-past nine. He was walking up Commerce street, and when opposite the long shed erected in front of the Lutheran Church being built on that street, a negro man sprang at him and grabbed him by the cheek. Mr. Oppenheim struck the negro a blow in the mouth, and in so doing struck the latter's teeth, cutting two of Mr. Oppenheim's fingers. He pulled himself loose from the negro's grasp and the assailant ran into the shed and disappeared. Mr. Oppenheim is unable to identify the man, further than that he wore a dark flannel shirt, was above medium height and rather black.

WORK IN TINKER CREEK

Ceased on Account of the Weather.—$3,000 Expended.

City Engineer Dunlap expects to take his force of men off of Tinker creek to-day and will not do any more work there until spring, as the men object to working in the cold water. The work done so far on the creek has cost about $3,000, and as there was $4,000 appropriated this leaves $1,000 to be used when work is resumed. Mr. Dunlap thinks it is policy to suspend work now and see what the floods will do this winter.
