

THE MAN OF FASHION.

How He Will Disport Himself in Now Style Bathing Garments.

What a Bathing Outfit Consists of and Costs—Some Marvelous Changes in Styles of Underwear—Shirts for Riding, Bicycling, Etc.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

Bathing suits will be worn shorter this year. This may appear startling to the fair sex, but as it is intended solely for the man of fashion, with whom I believe myself on "speaking terms," the shock in the first sentence must be forgiven, as it was altogether unintentional.

But in saying that bathing suits will be worn shorter I have reference only to the lower half. Last year they covered many an ungainly knee. This year they can be worn cut to just above the knee or just below, and the shape of a man's limbs will have much to do with his choice.

Bathing suits will be worn as tight as ever. This is another bit of agreeable information for the host of well-shaped men who enjoy the two or three months in the year during which they can disport themselves on the sands of Manhattan Beach, Long Branch, Newport, Atlantic City, in garments so close-fitting that every individual "disport" makes a multitude shut their eyes for fear of a break.

When you buy your bathing outfit this year be sure and do it properly. Buy them in one piece of worsted or silk, and if you are stout get vertical stripes, and if you are thin follow the Sing Sing design. That is very much in style this year, just as it was last year.

One of the finest bathing outfits ever prepared in New York was that which Lisenard Stewart took with him to Japan. It appears that he had heard of some excellent bathing in that country of little men and women, and so he gave his orders for a regular fashionable Ostend outfit which consists of ten one-piece bathing suits of the finest spun silk, each of which will show his figure off to perfection, and no two of which are exactly alike as to design.

There is evidently a persistent attempt to introduce more ornamentation into men's clothing all over, and the shirt will have to follow suit. I remember long ago when lace insertion was worn by the beau of the day and the frill was still in existence. To elderly men the latter was very becoming, but it became professional and went out of the running. You got to associate it with a bland manner and a tap of a gold snuff box.

The bath robe, also, is a growing feature in many houses. If a bedroom had a bathroom opening from it there would be no great need of a bathrobe, though even then it would be very useful and comfortable; but as such arrangements are rather scarce and people of all degrees of financial standing enjoy a bath, the robe is found to be almost a necessity.

I saw a very neat dressing gown in plain, dark green, rich buffalo, with a reverse of clouded scarlet. The roll collar and cuffs are in scarlet twill silk, quilted. Of course, no lining is required in connection with these cloths, and the set is thereby improved.

Destroy That Smell of Cabbage. A bit of charcoal put in the saucapan with cabbage destroys much of the disagreeable odor usually pervading the atmosphere at such times.

Twenty thousand dollars to loan on Roanoke real estate. SIMMONS & TINSLEY, No. 108 Jefferson street, Roanoke, Va.

Excursionists to Norfolk to see the launching of the "Texas" will do well to avoid the heat of the city and take a run down to Ocean View, where you can get a good bath or have a fish and get plenty of sea breeze, fare from Norfolk only 30 cents for the round trip, all street cars in Norfolk make connections with the trains which leave Norfolk at 3:30, 5:00, 6:30 and 9:00 p. m., leaving Ocean View at 4:10, 5:40, 8:10 and 10:00. Terms very reasonable.

Now is the time to paper your house. Call and see the large stock at the E. H. Stewart Furniture Company.

AN ODE TO PROF. GARNER. Being the Liquidation of a Debt Long Due the Distinguished Monophobe.

An article in the current number of the North American Review by Prof. R. L. Garner, entitled "What I Expect to Do in Africa," has inspired the writer to indulge in a little draft on the imagination in connection therewith, the facetiousness of which may be readily excused in the light of its harmlessness.

The poem, or "monkerel," as I have called it, assumes that the professor has sailed for Africa, reached its shores, explored the jungle, interviewed the anthropoid apes, familiarized himself with their speech and their society and as a natural consequence fallen in love with a simian or gorilla maiden. Secretly, these two beings have planned their departure for New York and our story in verse finds them at evening on the coast of Africa wrapped in the solitude of their originality and supposed security awaiting the coast steamer near Gaboon, West Africa.

In the midst of their thoughts of love a band of gorillas appear upon the scene and after demanding the return of their kinswoman are repulsed by the gallant professor and so the pair escape, but to our poem:

"T'WAS EVENING ON THE COAST OF AFRICA," A translation (in part) from the Simian tongue. BY E. A. PARSONS. Dedicated to Prof. R. L. Garner on the eve of his departure for Africa on his Zoophobic expedition.

As Sol sank low amid Atlantic's wave, A man and maiden arm in arm were seen; The man was goodly of proportion, brave; The maid was mild and of decorous mien.

The scene was lonely but for these two beings, Who seemed oblivious to surrounding gloom; It was an Eden at the south sea's edge; Affected not the hue of love's sweet bloom.

I grew absorbed in contemplative dreaming, And mused of other days, in which I too In love's sweet radiance for ever gleaming, Strolled in the park and visited the "Zoo."

The Zoo! What made me think of that I wonder; Ah, yes, the atmosphere no doubt, For April's had just been retit asunder, By zoologic exploration's rout.

But to my theme; and as my gaze was turning, Behold, the lovers were approaching near; The man crew tender, and his words were burning Deep into the maiden's heart and ear.

"My sweet," said he, "dost know where we are going? Said she, 'I care not if thou art ever present.'" "Then come," he said, "the moments fast are flowing, 'Tis night grows on and day is evanescent.

The twilight thickened, and at last the darkness spread the sky and earth and sea; The tropic suns were now wholly sparkless, And solitude seemed only there with me.

But suddenly there flashed from the heaven, A great white light, enveloping the earth, And lo! I saw from darkness risen, As wild a scene as light could ever give birth.

The man alone reemerged of the human kind, The maid, the girl, was resting on his side; But round them gathered well defined, A band of giant apes, and loud they cried:

"Give back our maid, thou spoiler of our home, 'Yield up our loved one and begone, 'Tis late thee to thy cage, leave us alone, 'But out your hated light, the day is done."

The clamor grew, and then the man Determined to assert his power and will, He cast his eye around to scan The possibilities of a general kill.

Then drew he forth his chemical revolver, And sprayed that throng with pungent odor, He looked, and as a scene dissolver, He felt great pride in his big muscle loader.

Then whispered low the maid, "My dearest R. L., We must make haste, escape to thy New York, For Pa will empty every barrel," Bankrupt our nation for this night's work.

"He might discover something counteracting, And render nugatory thy great science, And then the thought's too too distracting— He might tear me from this alliance."

"Be comforted, my dearest simian maid," Replied the manly zoologic charmer, "Of man's never was afraid, And monkeys cannot frighten Garner."

Then sped they on as you may well conjecture, Escaped the machinations of the apes, In "York" the maid attended to her leopards, Soon learned our language—and the use of canes.
