SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION. First Session Held Last Night at the Baptist Church.

The Delegates Are Welcomed to Roanoke by Mayor Trout and Rev. Mr. Miller. An interesting Address by the President—Three Sessions Will be Held Daily—List of the Delegates and Where They Are Staying.

The fifth annual convention of the Virginia State Sunday-School Association of all the Protestant denominations, convened in the First Baptist Church in this city last night.

He spoke of the lofty nature of Sunday-schools which was, in his opinion, too often underestimated. He hoped that the delegates would carry away with them fond recollections of Roanoke.

Rev. Mr. Miller explained that he had lived in Roanoke but five weeks, but he could heartily extend to the delegates a Christian and a cordial welcome from the people of Roanoke.

He bade Sunday-school workers to keep courage; that although they frequently failed to see the good effect of their work yet God would in His own time bring about the harvest and they would march home bearing their sheaves with them.

President Reynolds responded to the address. He tendered thanks for the hearty welcome accorded them and hoped that good results would accrue from the work carried out during the convention.

Hon. Wm. Reynolds, ex-president of the International Sunday-School Union, next addressed the convention. He said the object of the convention was the improvement, morally, of this State.

The first session was then brought to a close by singing and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Flippo.

The following is a list of the delegates here and the places at which they are entertained during the convention:

- P. L. Terry—J. W. Grossdane, Marion; H. B. Hall, Marion; J. B. Greaver, Graham; W. J. Spracher, Tazewell. H. S. Trout—W. F. Richardson, Richmond; L. Thos. W. Miller—J. H. Gray, Petersburg; D. T. COL. W. P. CANADAY SUICIDES. He Was Ex-Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate.

The Colonel Had Been Indulging in Reckless Speculation and Was Financially Embarrassed—Accused By His Partner of Appropriating Some Money He Puts a Bullet Through His Brain—A Prominent Figure in Politics.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—[Special]—A climax to a decade of wild and adventurous speculation in projects of a hazardous kind, in the hope, always delusive, that each successive scheme would bring him large wealth, came some time between 6:30 and 7 o'clock this morning, in the suicide of Wm. P. Canaday, of North Carolina, formerly sergeant-at-arms of the United States Senate and known to politicians throughout the country for years as one of the leading Republicans in the South.

The suicide was as full of sensational preliminaries as any story alleged as the basis of fact for a dime novel. There was about it just enough of the element of uncertainty to suggest the theory, quickly dispelled on examination, of the commission of the deed by some other person than the dead man, or another theory that disbelieved in his story or having been robbed had driven him to kill himself.

Following this scene was another, in which J. Q. A. Houghton, captain of Hancock's staff during the war, and partner of Colonel Canaday's, told his partner that he did not believe his story, and would have it investigated by the police.

The third scene was that which was visible almost an hour later, when Captain Houghton returned with a policeman, who broke open the windows, the door having been locked by Colonel Canaday on the inside, and found the former sergeant-at-arms of the Senate lying in a bath of blood from effects of a pistol wound through the head, entirely from ear to ear.

Canaday had the entire first floor of 712 and 714 Tenth street and slept on a cot in one of the rooms. Captain Houghton claims to be Canaday's partner but his name does not appear on the signs. He seems to have been the man who furnished, last year, money for the enterprises of which Canaday was the promoter.

Yesterday evening the two men were together for a short time about 6 o'clock and went out together. Before leaving Captain Houghton says that he deposited $3,000 in the safe. The money, he says, was in notes of denomination of five, ten and twenty dollars.

After Colonel Canaday and his partner separated on the street the former paid a social call upon a young lady whom he knew in North Carolina. He took leave of her at 7:30 and returned to his quarters and retired early, as was his habit. About a quarter after 5 o'clock this morning Chas. H. Stevenson, an employe in the Fish Commission, who roomed on the second floor, just above Canaday's rear office room, came downstairs, having been alarmed by noises which he at first thought was nothing more than the noise of some drunken roysterer outside.

Col. Canaday was bound to the door with his hands behind him. There was no place to bind his feet to the door and the twine with which his wrists and forearms were bound was of very ordinary stuff such as is used to bind large parcels, so that a man of ordinary strength ought to have been able to break it with ease, as a reporter did this morning when similarly tied.

Canaday's story was that some time after 2 o'clock in the morning three burglars had forced an entrance through the rear window of the room in which he was sleeping and bound and gagged him at the point of a knife held over his heart and had then forced him to go across the hallway to the safe and open it. They had abstracted a great part of its contents and burned some papers, principally negotiable notes, had strewn others around the floor, and had departed after binding him in the manner in which he was found. Canaday

SAID NOTHING TO STEVENSON ABOUT HOUGHTON'S $2,000. Houghton was sent for and to him Mr. Canaday related the story, which his partner refused to believe.

He went to police headquarters for detectives and thence to the police station. Officers Hodges and Gilbert accompanied him on his return to the house. The servant girl told them that she thought Canaday had shot himself. The officers attempted to effect an entrance in the side of the house in which were Canaday's private office and sleeping room, but found the doors locked.

He had dressed himself after Capt. Houghton's departure and was lying on a cot as if resting, but his clothes and the sheet and pillow of the cot were covered with blood. A thirty-two caliber Smith & Wesson revolver was by his side. The desperate man had pointed it at his head just above the ear and had sent the bullet clear through his brain.

On the desk written on a large manilla envelope was the following note to Miss Moore, the young lady whom he visited last night: "MY DEAR FRIEND: I am not guilty of any wrong. You may trust in me. The people who are persecuting me are worse than I am. He is a villain of the very largest. God bless you always in the last prayer of your true friend, Canaday."

A note addressed to Houghton said that after Houghton's conduct this morning he (Canaday) had no further use for life.

STILL AT THE FRONT. A Letter Defending the Associated Press From Recent Charges Brought Against It.

ASSOCIATED PRESS, OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, NEW YORK, Sept. 27, 1892. TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES: In consequence of false and misleading reports which are being promulgated to injure the Associated Press, it has become necessary to make the following statement:

The Associated Press is an organization for the collection and dissemination of news. Its object is not to make money, but through co-operation to obtain the best news service possible for its members and clients. It is not a stock company. Each of the six New York dailies which constitute its board pays from $15,000 to $25,000 a year for the news it receives.

Owing to complications which have existed until recently the service has been allowed to become inferior to its standard, especially in New York city. To correct this Mr. Henry W. Odion, a journalist of reputation and ability, has been appointed as Eastern manager, and aided by a staff of trained assistants, will devote his time to strengthening the service of the Associated Press all along the line.

The Associated Press is stronger today than it ever was, and means to protect its interests and those of its clients. It has the earnest support of all papers making up its board in spite of efforts circulated to the contrary and the efforts of its enemies to do it injury by misrepresentation. It neither has nor expects to have litigations or disputes on its hands. It hopes to make amicable arrangements with such of its tributary associations whose contracts expire at the end of the year, but in any instance assures its clients and franchise holders that it has begun an aggressive campaign in news competition and will protect them under all conditions and at any expense.

THE NEW YORK HERALD, Chairman executive committee New York Associated Press. The Roanoke Times to any new address until January 1 for $1 25 IN ADVANCE.

Must Serve Out His Sentence. WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—[Special]—In the case of the application for restoration to citizenship of James Gilmore, of Virginia, convicted in 1886 of a violation of section 5469 of the revised statutes, the President has decided that he cannot act in the case until after the Federal sentence has been fully executed.

A Postmaster Appointed. WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—[Special]—The President has appointed Andrew S. Withers postmaster at Yorkville, S. C.

THEIR MEMORY DULY HONORED. Confederate Monument Unveiled at Greenville, S. C.

It Was Erected by the Ladies' Confederate Memorial Association—The Unveiling Was Witnessed by Several Thousand People—A Monster Parade One of the Features of the Occasion. Description of the Monument.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Sept. 27.—[Special]—The Confederate monument erected by the Ladies' Confederate Memorial Association was unveiled to-day in the presence of several thousand spectators. The parade was one of the largest ever seen in this city. The occasion was made a public holiday, and in the column were over a thousand pupils of the public schools, a regiment of State troops, 300 Confederate veterans, the city fire department, the mayor and aldermen of the city, the Ladies' Confederate Memorial Association and a number of distinguished visitors and citizens of the city and county.

The monument is erected at the head of Main street, a high point overlooking the city. The shaft is of marble, resting on a granite base, surmounted by a statue of a Confederate soldier, the whole being thirty feet high. The model for the statue is the present chief of police of Greenville City, Capt. J. B. Ligon, who was an officer in the Confederate army from this county. The ceremony of unveiling took place at noon. The platform was occupied by the Ladies' Memorial Association, the young ladies representing the Southern States and the little girls representing each company which went out from this county.

Lieutenant Governor W. L. Mauldin presided. After an invocation by Rev. Dr. J. A. Mundy, of the Baptist Church, Governor Mauldin introduced Judge J. S. Cottrah as the orator selected to take the place of General Capers, who was not able to be present. Judge Cottrah paid a tribute to General Capers for his heroic performance of duty during the war, and paused a moment. At a signal from the chairman the cords were pulled and the canvas dropped from the statue. For a moment there was a silence almost painful, followed by Confederate yells from 300 veterans' throats which was taken up by the military, firemen, and thousands of spectators.

An order was given by the Colonel commanding and the regiment fired a salute. As the smoke rolled up from the guns a large Confederate flag shot across the street on a suspended wire and floated just above the statue. Another wild yell and waving of handkerchiefs from the throng standing gazing at the conquered banner. Old grizzled soldiers wept like children as they recalled memories clustering about their battle flag, and then there was silence, as Judge Cottrah began to speak.

Col. Jas. A. Hoyt followed Judge Cottrah in an address. Both speeches breathed patriotic love of the country and admiration of the heroic deeds of their dead comrades. The young ladies and children representing the Confederate States and companies from the county sang the patriotic hymn, "My Country 'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty." The unveiling ceremonies closed with the benediction by Dr. Mundy. The monument is regarded as one of the finest in the South, the statue being of pure Italian marble of the finest texture. At the top of the drum the military formed and marched away slowly followed by the vast concourse of spectators. Many old soldiers remained gazing at their silent comrade. They, too, moved away, leaving the silent sentinel on guard.

Vilas' Demurrer Overthrown. MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 27.—[Special]—The supreme court in session at Madison rendered its decision this morning in the second gerrymander case. It holds that the court has jurisdiction in the case and overthrows the demurrer of Senator Vilas, based on the claim that the suit should have been brought by the attorney general instead of by Petitioner Lamb. It holds that Lamb is entitled to bring suit, and that the bill of the plaintiff contains sufficient ground for action. This is practically an overthrow of the last gerrymander. The defense is given until Friday to answer the bill of the plaintiff.
