

LAST SUMMER.

She was a country maiden, A city youth was I, Iling away each golden day, As the summer months went by, I thought there never was fairer...

beyond where we had seen the first Indian the attack was made, and it was a bold one. As we came opposite a valley running back into the ridges, a hundred or more mounted Indians came charging down on us.

OBEYING ORDERS.

How a Brave Soldier Won His Sergeant's Chevrons. TWENTY army wagons and their drivers—fifty cavalrymen from troop E—a pull of ninety miles across the Indian country.

And we had not marched an hour when Capt. White sent for me and said: "Corporal, you will act as a special guard over the third wagon."

"Very well, sir." "The colonel's wife is in that wagon, you probably know."

"In case the Indians are too strong for us they must not find her alive. That's all."

I rode back to the third wagon and placed my horse at the high forewheel and lifted my cap to the lady, who had been provided with a comfortable seat by herself.

"Corporal, do you think we shall be attacked?" "Quite likely, ma'am, but we may squeeze through."

"And if attacked, and you can't beat the Indians off, you—"

"I have the captain's orders, ma'am!" "Yes; very well."

"We shall be attacked," she queried, and closed up the train. To the left there was a succession of ridges and if there was any force of hostilities about they were hidden behind them.

"Be careful," whispered the clock as it ticked away on the marble mantel. But he did not heed. His arm was around her waist, and—"Be careful," she whispered.

But he knew that her mother was away at the club, so his cheek stole near to hers. "Be careful," said his good genius, "the first thing you know, young man, you'll be married."

Meeting her on Her Own Ground. Landlady—No, this room has no fire, but the last gentleman always left his door open and said it was well heated from the hall.

Room-lender—It won't do, then. I had a friend who once occupied a room heated from the hall, and it was so hot he got the brain fever.

A Dangerous Sign. Deacon Medders—Slipps, the cashier of the Oederdonk County bank, ran away last night. They say he has been robbing the bank for more than a year.

A Delightful Perfume. Miss Flynn—Mr. Colling, hasn't that cigarette a pleasant odor than those you generally smoke?

A Mysterious Case. The body of a man was taken from the water by a New York policeman. "Does anybody know anything about this man?" asked the policeman of someurchins who were present.

Why He Thought So. Tommy—Will your name be changed when you marry sister? Young Man—Oh, no; her name will be changed. What made you think that?

He Bounded Mysteriously. Peters—And then he unlocked the door and swore that everything in the place should be burned.

Evidence as to a Great Theory. "Do you believe in the transmigration of souls?" "I didn't, but I do now. There's my friend Jenkins who was a man two months ago, and since he's been in society he's been a donkey."

Cause for Happiness. She—Darling, am I the first girl you ever kissed? He—No, dearest, but you're the last one.

Warned. "Be careful," whispered the clock as it ticked away on the marble mantel. But he did not heed. His arm was around her waist, and—"Be careful," she whispered.

An Unnecessary Precaution. Chappy Niccelfo—A man must be dened careful these days oah he will get his clothes fearfully muddy.—Des Moines Argonaut.

Noted Physician—Do you know why it is that city people are straight, and walk with heads erect, while country people nearly always bend over?

A Mother's Description. "Your little girl has red hair, hasn't she, Mrs. Minks?" "No, indeed. Her hair is a rich auburn, tinged with light terra cotta."

Excusable Familiarity. He—That friend of yours is very familiar. He slapped me on the back and called me "old man."

A Mad Cat. Little Dot—Oh, mamma, I'm afraid the cat's got the hydrophobia. Mamma—Mercy me! Why? Little Dot—I threw some water on her, and she gave an awful yowl.—Good News.

Pursuing the Bandits. Gen. Wheaton Says They Will Be Caught If Hard Work Can Do It.

New Orleans, Jan. 4.—By the Picoyano San Antonio, Tex., special says: In an interview here Gen. Wheaton, commander of the Department of Texas, said, "The bandits on the border will probably prove troublesome, as they are fully acquainted with the country and can elude pursuit by concealing themselves in the dense chapparal. We have now in the field the third cavalry and a troop of the seventh cavalry from Fort Riley, Kan. There are camps established at various points along the border. Capt. Hardie is located at the Comitas Rancho and Capt. Jackson of the seventh cavalry is at Carrizo. Capt. Chase and Hunter of the third cavalry are patrolling the railroad between Pena and Laredo and Lieuts. West and Langhorn are in command of two troops from Fort Ringgold and a company of the twenty-third infantry at Rendado. There are smaller detachments at San Ignacio and other points along the border. The Rio Grande is effectively guarded from Laredo to Fort Kingold and Hidalgo.

Gen. Wheaton in his annual report recommended that cavalry be sent here, and, as a consequence, the three troops of the seventh cavalry were ordered to the field. If the troubles are prolonged it is very probably that additional troops will be sent here.
