SUFFERING POOR.

There Are Many Such in Roanoke.

THE TIMES FOOD AND FUEL FUND

Contributions Solicited to Relieve the Needy.

The Ministers of Roanoke Talk About the Destitution and Misery that Exists Here—The Churches and Local Charitable Institutions Doing All in Their Power to Relieve the Suffering—Outside Help Needed—The Times Will Receive Contributions—Clothing, Food and Fuel Also Needed—The Ministers All Favor the Plan—They Will Do All in Their Power to Aid It—Contributions Will Be Acknowledged Daily.

That there is need of immediate co-operation by the public for the relief of the poor was impressed upon the mind of a Times reporter yesterday when visiting the clergymen of the city. It was his object to find out the wants of the poorer classes during this unprecedented weather, and by what means they were surviving the extreme cold, when out-of-doors labor had been shut off almost entirely, and also to gain the assistance of the church in organizing a food and fuel popular subscription fund for their support which is to be worked upon the following basis:

Subscriptions from the public in any amounts will be received at THE TIMES office, such contributions to be held subject to the order of the ministers of the city until they can meet and appoint a committee to dispose of them among the worthy poor of the city. The city to be divided into sections, and the donations to be made according to the amount of poverty in the district and in the shape of orders upon grocery and provision stores and upon the coal and wood yards. Outside of the financial benefits for the poor, there is another and equally useful charity. Every man and woman of position in Roanoke can certainly spare something from their clothes press. Anything in the way of clothing will be acceptable. In fact any and all kinds of contributions will be thankfully received, such as groceries, provisions, coal, wood, or any useful article for the poor. All contributions to be addressed "Food and Fuel Fund, Times Office." Every morning an acknowledgment of the receipts of the previous day will be made in THE TIMES.

In speaking of the present charities many of the preachers said that the poor of the city were loath to apply for assistance either to the city, the churches or the aid societies and that it was actually necessary to hunt out the cases of destitution, their inborn pride preventing the poor making their wants known.

Rev. J. W. Lynch, of St. Andrew's, said to a reporter that it was absolutely necessary in a number of cases to seek out the poor who really know that they had only to ask to be aided.

All of the churches in the city are doing wonderful work, not only for the poor of their congregations, but also with such outside suffering as comes to their notice, and the same applies to the work of the mayor and the aid societies, but still there is absolute want going on in Roanoke, and particularly in the eastern portion of the city. The preachers in that district summarized a number of cases, which even while they were engaged in dispensing aid came to their ears only by accident.

Rev. W. H. Meade, rector of St. John's Church, said: "Such an unusual spell of hard weather as we have been passing through calls for unusual methods to meet and relieve the suffering poor in our city. Among such methods is THE TIMES fund of which I wish to express my thankful appreciation. This effort will reach many cheerful givers whom the churches cannot reach, and its proposed management will secure a judicious distribution among the deserving poor."

O. F. Pippo, of the First Baptist Church, said: "All honor to THE TIMES for the gracious prompting. There is a power of Christianity in such a charity fund. It can be raised and it is needed. There is much destitution in Roanoke, but our people are responsible to every call for the relief of human suffering. The method of distribution insures the prompt and proper apportionment of every dime contributed where it is most needed. Let every one hear and heed the cry of the poor. I am on my way now to an afflicted home with funds from the church of which I am pastor."

W. F. Hammer, pastor of Greene Memorial Church: "THE TIMES food and fuel effort for the poor is a noble effort, in a good cause and I most heartily approve of it. The churches and benevolent societies are making commendable efforts to supply the suffering poor, but the situation is extraordinary, little short of perilous, and calls for special effort. I sincerely hope that our characteristically charitable people will co-operate with your excellent plan."

Father Lynch, of St. Andrew's Catholic Church, in conversation with the reporter, said: "You can put me down as saying that I will do everything in my power. I have been out to-day on the same errand and I am satisfied that with systematic work the object can be made of great benefit to the needy of our city, and I will work heart and soul to further it."

Wm. H. Groves, pastor of the Bothany Presbyterian Church, said: "I most heartily approve of the plan. There is much destitution in Roanoke. Appeals for help come from every quarter. While much has been done in the way of relief, still there are many who need immediate assistance. I have no doubt the plan proposed will meet with a generous response. No one should refuse to help in this hour of need."

Rev. S. G. Ferguson, Trinity M. E. Church: "I have found some needy families in my congregation who have been relieved by contributions from the church. I think a general fund for the relief of the poor would prove a great blessing to many homes. If the cold continues the number of needy will be greatly increased. It will be wise to take timely action."

G. T. D. Collins, pastor of St. James' M. E. Church: "From what I know of the enterprise it must be a worthy undertaking. The suffering of the poor and needy in some quarters of the city is on the increase, and if this cold weather continues there will be much more suffering yet. We trust there may be a hearty response to the call of those who have this popular fund in hand."

Rev. Henry Collins, of St. Paul M. E. Church (colored) was enthusiastic in the matter and after detailing the suffering in his immediate neighborhood said: "The object is a worthy one. I thoroughly approve of the 'Food and Fuel' fund and will do everything in my power for the cause, as I know from experience that there is considerable want distributed among the worthy throughout the city. I will certainly give it my earnest attention from the pulpit of the St. Paul M. E. Church on Sunday next and as long as want continues, for that is my mission on earth."

R. R. Jones, pastor of the First Baptist Colored Church said: "I think it is very badly needed. There are a number of people suffering in the city and if the weather continues there will be an increase in the number. I subscribe $5 to the fund and will use every endeavor to further the noble purpose."

A number of other ministers of the gospel were visited, and in every case they heartily approved the cause, although in most of the churches on the west side of the city want is unknown, but in those churches they are doing noble work, and constant calls are made upon the congregations to furnish money for the support of every worthy case of poverty in the city that may come under their notice. In two or three cases they spoke of bringing the Food and Fuel Fund before the ministers' meeting on Monday next; others will make it the subject of their discourse on next Sunday.

Mr. Tucker and the Cabinet.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 19.—Hon. John Randolph Tucker, after an absence of five days, returned to-day from his visit to New York, where he delivered an address to the Patria Society and was entertained by the Reform Club. He speaks in the highest terms of his reception and was much pleased with his visit. He was called upon in New York by Hons. William M. Everts and David Dudley Field. Letters have been received here by parties interested in Mr. Tucker's appointment as Attorney General denying that Mr. Gray, of Delaware, is a candidate for the position, but on the contrary, that Mr. Gray has manifested his desire to Mr. Cleveland that Mr. Tucker be appointed. He has been advocating Mr. Tucker's claims from the beginning. It looks now as if Mr. Tucker has a clear field and that Virginia will be represented in the Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The executive mansion and all government buildings in this city were draped in mourning to-day and flags are flying at half mast in honor of ex-President Hayes. The mourning will be maintained for thirty days in accordance with the order of the President. Change in the Comet.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 19.—What was suspected to be Bella's comet when seen on January 12 was barely visible in the great 26-inch telescope of the Leander McCormick Observatory, at the University of Virginia, when next observed. Monday night, however, Mr. Lovett found it to have suddenly become quite a bright object, appearing very much like a star seen through a fog, showing that some remarkable and sudden change has taken place.

WHERE IS THIS GOLD AND SILVER

Treasure Buried in Bedford County Years Ago.

A Story That Reads Like a Captain Kidd Romance—Boxes of Gold and Silver Brought to Lynchburg and Subsequently Buried Near Buford's—The Letter Describing Their Location Written in Cipher—Many Attempts Have Been Made to Find the Money.

The people in Southwest Virginia, in their hot pursuit of riches and the interest they manifest in developing their unparalleled resources, have forgotten, and many of them have never heard of, the fabulous treasure that is buried in some mountain crag in their midst, and has remained there for more than half a century, hidden more securely than nature placed it in creation.

The Beale papers have interested many minds, but men who have engaged themselves in trying to unravel their mystery have always abandoned their project as one hopeless of accomplishment.

It is a treasure of more than half a million dollars' worth of pure gold and silver, just as it was taken from the mountains of New Mexico, and thirteen thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, which was secured with the silver, that was burdensome to carry. All of this is within less than twenty miles of Roanoke.

The story of this mystery is one that reads like romance and is full of adventure and daring. In the year 1820 a gentleman named Robert Morris was proprietor of the Washington Hotel, Lynchburg, and in January of that year a man named Thomas J. Beale, in company with two associates, stopped at the Washington for a short time. In a few days the two men accompanying Beale left for Richmond. Beale having expressed his intention of spending the winter at Mr. Morris' hotel, remained in Lynchburg. During his stay at the Washington an intimate friendship formed itself in a strong band around Mr. Morris and Mr. Beale. At the hotel he registered simply as Thos. J. Beale, Virginia, and strangely enough no one ever knew anything more than that of his home or his birth.

In the latter part of the following March Beale, with the same men who had accompanied him to Lynchburg, left, and nothing more was heard from them until the year 1822, when Beale once more made his appearance in Lynchburg, stopping at the same hotel, and appearing the same genial gentleman, as before, but with a darker and swarther complexion, indicating that he had been exposed to the Southern sun. In March of that year Beale again left, but before doing so gave to Mr. Morris an iron box stoutly made and securely locked, and told him that it was only through the confidence he had in him that he would entrust the box to his keeping; that it contained articles of value.

Mr. Morris did not have any further tidings from Beale until May 9, 1823, when he received a letter written in St. Louis. This letter stated that Beale (Beale) would leave in a week or so for the "plains" to hunt buffaloes and other wild game. The letter then gave some instructions in regard to the box. After again assuring Mr. Morris that the box contained papers vitally affecting the fortunes of himself and others engaged in business with him, the letter authorized Morris, in case none of the party should ever call for the box, to open it and stated that in addition to the papers addressed to himself he would find other manuscripts which would be unintelligible without the aid of a key to assist in reading them, and such a key, the letter stated, had been left in the hands of a friend in St. Louis, sealed, addressed to Morris, and indorsed not to be delivered until June, 1832.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Morris was at perfect liberty to open the box in 1832 it was not until 1845 that he decided to break the lock and examine its contents.

When the box was opened the contents were found to be just as Beale, in his St. Louis letter, had stated them—two letters addressed to Morris and some other unintelligible manuscripts. One letter, however, told a tale that has lost none of its interest by age. It gave an account of their business in the wild and unexplored West and the sudden and expected find of enormous chunks of gold and silver.

About the year 1817 a party of about thirty, Beale included in the number, determined to visit the West, their only object being hunting and adventure. On the 19th of May, 1817, the party reached St. Louis, where they procured the necessary outfit and a guide for their trip. They left St. Louis, Santa Fe being their objective point, which place they expected to reach in the following fall.

Their destination was reached in December, and nothing of interest occurring the party soon tired of the little Mexican town and longed for weather which would enable them to resume their wanderings and exhilarating pursuits.

In March some of the party, to vary the monotony of their existence, determined upon a short excursion for the purpose of hunting and examining the country around them. They intended to be gone only a few days, but a month elapsed before they were heard from. After leaving Santa Fe the party pursued a northerly course for a few days. They were on the eve of returning one evening when they came close upon a large herd of buffaloes, heading for a valley a short distance away. They pursued the buffaloes into the valley and killed many of them.

One evening about sundown the party were encamped on a narrow ravine, and while the evening meal was being prepared one of the party discovered something in a cleft in the rocks, something that had the appearance of gold. Upon examination it was found to be gold.

THE ROANOKE TIMES PUB. CO., H. J. BROWNE, PRESIDENT.

The remainder of the party was informed of the find and the hunting party turned into a mining camp. Tools were secured and the services of Indians were engaged to perform the necessary labor.

Finally the bulk of gold and silver became so enormous that it was thought best to remove it to the States for safekeeping and the safety of their lives. The plan agreed upon was to take it to Virginia and bury it in some place that could be found afterward, and leave papers locating it in the hands of some one whom they could all trust.

Mr. Morris was selected as the man of trust, and Mr. Beale spent the winter with him at the "Washington" to study the man, and, if advisable, leave the box with him.

Upon opening the box the letters above referred to were found, and also three unintelligible papers, marked "1," "2," "3," with nothing on them except figures. By the aid of a copy of the Declaration of Independence, which was used as a key, paper No. 2 has been deciphered. It reads as follows:

"I have deposited, in the county of Bedford, about 14 miles from Buford's, in an excavation or vault, six feet below the surface of the ground, the following articles, belonging jointly to the parties whose names are given in No. 3, herewith:

"The first deposit consisted of 1,014 pounds of gold and 3,813 pounds of silver, deposited in 1819. The second was made December, 1821, and consisted of 1,907 pounds of gold and 1,288 pounds of silver; also jewels, obtained in St. Louis in exchange for silver to save transportation and valued at $13,000."

The papers "1" and "2" could never be deciphered. No. 1 locates the vault and No. 2 gives the names of the parties to whom it belongs.

The facts in the matter have been given to the public by a friend of Morris, who learned them in 1863, and have been published in pamphlet form. The inhabitants of Bedford county have hunted for this treasure but so far in vain.

The Populists Now Have a Majority.

TOPEKA, Kans., Jan. 19.—The Republican senators and representatives met in joint session this morning and balloted for State printer. None of the Democrats were present, and although a solid vote was cast for Crane, he did not receive the constitutional majority. The Republican house then adjourned at 12 o'clock and the Populists began the unseating process. The Populists' election committee reported in favor of unseating Kline, Republican, from Jackson county, and seating Shellenberg, Populist, in Reno county. Dix, Republican, was ousted and Mitchell, Populist, seated. The grounds were the same in both cases. In Jackson county, the town of Holton, and in Reno, the town of Dickerson, were not mentioned in the legislative appointment two years ago and, although they are in the center of their legislative districts, the Populist committee held that their votes should not be counted. In the senate similar tactics will be followed, and by this means the Populists will have a clear majority on joint ballot without the aid of the Democrats.

A Place Named for Dana.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The Times-Union (Senator Hill's organ) of to-day says: "Two vacancies in the board of regents of the university, caused by the death of Francis Kernan and George William Curtis, are shortly to be filled by the joint ballot of the two houses of the legislature. Public opinion seems to be concentrating upon Francis McNeirney (Roman Catholic bishop of Albany) and Charles A. Dana—Bishop McNeirney in place of Kernan and Dana in place of Curtis. It would be impossible to make a better selection, and if these gentlemen will consent to serve, their election ought to be unanimous. Bishop Doane (Protestant Episcopal bishop of Albany) is already regent and putting Bishop McNeirney on the same board will demonstrate that it is non-sectarian. Both these gentlemen here suggested are admirably qualified by profound and varied learning, by literary tastes and accomplishments, and by high personal character, to adorn the board and add to its dignity and usefulness."

The Old Howlett House Burned.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 19.—Information was received here to-night of the burning of the old Howlett house, located on the south bank of the James river, opposite Dutch Gap, and famous in war annals. There was a Confederate battery of artillery stationed at this house during the war, and while General Butler was cutting a canal through Dutch Gap his troops were constantly fired upon from this point. It was occupied by a family from Michigan, who lost all their personal effects. The loss was very slight and no insurance.

A Large Crowd Will Attend the Inauguration.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The committee on public comfort, of which M. I. Wheeler is chairman, are receiving so many applications for quarters from all parts of the country that it is evident the crowd at the inauguration of Cleveland is going to be immense.

GEN. LEE'S MEMORY HONORED.

Interesting Meeting Held by William Watts Camp.

Gen. James A. Walker, of Wytheville, Delivers an Address—A Large Audience Present—The Banks Were All Closed Yesterday—The Dead Hero Eulogized Elsewhere—Services Were Held in Atlanta and Richmond.

Yesterday was a legal holiday in the State, and all banks and State buildings were closed in observance of the birthday of Virginia's favorite soldier, General Robert E. Lee. William Watts Camp of Confederate Veterans held an interesting meeting at 8 o'clock last night in the Y. M. C. A. building. The house was crowded, there being many ladies present. The veteran General James A. Walker, of Wytheville, was the speaker of the evening. The banner of the camp was placed upon the rostrum just behind the speaker.

The meeting was called to order by S. S. Brooke, commander of the camp, after which prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Ferguson, chaplain of the camp. At the conclusion of the prayer Lieutenant-commander W. B. Johnson, after eulogizing General Walker for his valiant service and deep devotion to his country, introduced him as the speaker of the evening.

General Walker commenced his remarks with greetings to Camp William Watts, and the mournful gratification he felt in speaking to an organization that bore the name of one whose memory recalled the noblest type of the virtues, the courage, the chivalry and the accomplishments which made up the true Virginia gentleman of the days before the war. He said it was one of the most pleasing recollections of the present to reflect upon the friendship which ceased only with William Watts' life.

General Walker then spoke at some length upon Stonewall Jackson, saying: "Many men of great genius have borne the reputation of being crazy and Stonewall Jackson was at the beginning of the war no exception to this rule." He then recounted the story of Jackson's wonderful strategy in the Swift Run Gap affair, when he left only General McDowell to cneck General Bank's army in case of a movement on the Federal side, who remained in blissful ignorance of the fact that they were only confronted with one division, while General Jackson was winning a battle at McDowell.

General Ewell during the delay previous to the victory insisted that General Jackson was crazy, and was only satisfied of his sanity when he received his telegram dated McDowell, May 11, 1862: "By the grace of God we defeated Milroy here to-day. J. T. JACKSON."

General Walker then rehearsed some thrilling stories of the war and concluded his address with a eulogy of Gen. Robert E. Lee, in which he spoke of his characteristic modesty and of the financial positions he had been offered for the use of his name, saying: "Can the wisest sketch of a fanciful imagination think of the name of Robert E. Lee heading a flaming advertisement of the drawing of a gambling lottery, or being connected with a black Friday, or a wildcat bank to allure ignominy and trusting depositors to financial ruin. In Richmond there stands a proud equestrian statue of General Lee, the greatest general or military hero of any age or clime." General Walker was listened to throughout with deep attention. About a dozen members of the Grand Army post were present.

Richmond Honors His Memory.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 19.—To-day being the anniversary of the birthday of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the day was generally observed throughout Virginia as a legal holiday. All the state and municipal offices, banks, courts, railroad offices, freight depots and public schools of this city were closed. This evening the First Virginia Regiment, with full ranks, marched to the Academy of Music, where an appropriate address was delivered by Capt. Geo. Wayne Anderson, company commander.

To-night R. E. Lee Camp, a sister by Pickett Camp and the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, assembled at the armory of the former, marched to the First Presbyterian Church where the day was celebrated, the following being the order of exercises: Organ voluntary; prayer by Comrade Rev. L. R. Mason; singing by choir; presentation on behalf of Lee Camp of a beautiful gold badge to Dr. Moses D. Hoge, by ex-Commander John Murphy. Dr. Hoge then delivered a touching lecture on the life, character and services of General Lee.

The Day in Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Jan. 19.—General Lee's birthday being a legal holiday in this State the occasion was appropriately observed to-day, especially under the auspices of the Virginia Society of this city. All State offices were closed. The only formal exercises were those at the Young Men's Christian Association auditorium and at the banquet this evening, where James Lindley Gordon, of Charlottesville, delivered an eloquent tribute to the memory of General Lee. Governor N. rhen, Mayor Goodwin and other prominent men also made speeches.

Appealing the Briggs Case.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Briggs case will be appealed direct to the general assembly. The prosecuting committee filed to-night with Rev. Dr. Saul D. Alexander, the stated clerk of the Presbytery, their notice of appeal.

McGarran Will Try Again.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—A new McGarran bill was introduced in the Senate to-day and referred to the judiciary committee.

The Weather.

Forecast for Virginia: Fair, northerly winds, becoming variable.
