Salem having been connected with Roanoke by electric cars, which assures cheap and rapid transit to parties living in Salem and working in Roanoke, and as Salem can give in her different factories employment to a large number of young ladies; also cheap homes either to renters or buyers. This in connection with her cheap markets make it very desirable to the majority of us just now. For further information address box 66, Salem, Va. 5-10 law 1mo

More Work for the Coroner's Jury. Complaint was recently made to G. W. Sisler, the undertaker, that there was a new made grave in the Old Lick burying ground, which had never been reported. Mr. Sisler notified the chief of police, who made an inspection and found the body of a colored infant about three months old, partially decomposed. The box and corps, were placed back and covered up and nothing more has been done to it.

JOHNSON'S Magnetic Oil kills all pains whether internal or external. Sold at Christian & Barbee's.

ALL STYLES OF HATS.

TWO OF CHICAGO'S TOILETS.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

Something New and Novel in the Line of Headgear.

The Rolls and Swells of the Big Hat—The Pretty Things for Shoulders—Two Fresh Chicago Toilets—Something More About the Cape.

Small hats are trimmed after this fashion: A unique capote, falling over behind the ears, covered with black net, has gold and wire Greek ornaments that form a great wing across the front. Three fillets in gold run across the back, catching down the folds of net. At each ear a pear-shaped pendant of jet falls. From the bow which ties under the chin falls another pair of jet.

A soft flat of true straw-color is coquettishly turned and plaited in front, so that it forms an Albatian bow; the bow is caught there by a twist of purple velvet. Purple aigrettes, and flowers of a paler shade and of yellow, stand up at the side and back of the bow of straw.

A small one all made of fine Parma violets, edged by a border of guipure in white, has a black velvet choux in front, with an aigrette added, and two choux at the back, falling over the twist of hair that must stand out beneath. Little hats have also many quills and wings standing pertly forward, often right over the forehead.

Big hats are all curves and twists and rolls. Almost everything rolls away from the face, leaving in its stead a bow, a bunch of flowers, a choux, or a buckle. A very pale yellow straw has a wide brim that is elongated in the front, to allow it full sweep in which to curve back over the two black plumes that lie on each side. The buckle of gold, set with brilliants, holds the roll tightly. Back of the roll are two more tips, one curving gracefully away from the other, and further alienated by black aigrettes that stand between. It is wonderful what changes the plume has undergone. The slightest modification of the fashionable curve makes a plume practically worthless. You are forced to discard it, if you will be strictly comme il faut. The prince of Wales is no longer the favorite. Its curve is too sudden; our latest fancy sweeps outward more gradually and is very full at the tip.

A big three-cornered beauty is made of black tulle that is dotted, all over, with tiny knobs of cream straw. A big velvet rose rests where the hat stands off from the brow and from the rose project two knife-plumes of rose velvet. Three black plumes lift their heads behind the upturned brim.

The early garden parties will usher in many new fancies in lace—fancies which now lie, fresh and spotless, waiting to be donned by some fair maiden.

The blonde maiden has made hers all of pale blue chiffon and white lace. The white lace yoke, made of sheer Fedora, has a pointed effect given to it by three Vs of ribbon that are caught down over it. From the yoke fall two double ruffles of the pale blue.

A violet crepe fichu, knotting loosely in front, is edged with a deep flounce of lace, which falls far down the front—looking very quaint and old-fashioned. The chiffon collarettes are very soft and charming, gathered on high standing collars of the same sheer, gauzy material.

The guipure cape is very much of a favorite also. The latest capes are now all single, with effective headings, all bright silk linings. Even the lace capes follow this rule, and have but one full flounce.

Chicago's first day did not see many magnificent toilets, for the rain clouds and muddy walks forbade. Two venturesome damsels, however, careless of the consequences, were clad in fresh spring costumes, which the sun peeped forth for a little while to look upon. Then he ruthlessly retired and sent a terrible downpour of raindrops to forever destroy their brightness.

One of them was made of pale green crepon, finely plaited from top to bottom. The skirt was banded with shell ruffings of black lace, put on in pairs, each pair placed a considerable distance from another. The waist was plaited like the skirt, and simply banded by wide black velvet ribbon. A fancy bit of passementerie ran under the belt at the back, pointing up the back as well as down, over the skirt. Three plaited ruffles formed sleeves, and a small black bon encircled the throat.

The second gown was made of wood-color crepon and of changing, diagonal silk, in shades of wood and heliotrope. The crepon shirt was plain save for the wide galloon at its edge. The short jacket of the bodice, made of the bright silk, did not reach to the waist line, and therefore did not hide the wide belt of white faille. The jacket turned back in large revers, fastened with buttons. It turned back from a double lace bib, that fitted closely around the girl's neck, and came up right under her pretty chin. Her hat added to the piquant effect, for it was perfectly flat, broad brimmed and had long black wings stretching each side of a white chiffon choux.

Some of the jacket fronts are extremely small. Many of those on the new gowns come scarcely to the bodice. Some of them have an odd effect given them by an upward curve, across the bottom. The jacket front has come to stay. It recommends itself. Over a full front, there is nothing prettier than the short jaunty coat effect. It suits slim and full figure alike, another reason for its great popularity.
