Mayor John B. Sargent of New Haven is at the head of an immense factory and is a skillful financier.

Hon. Amos J. Cummings says that John Griffin Carlisle is the greatest parliamentary authority in the land.

The Duke of Westminster is credited with possessing the finest carriage horses. He recently paid 1,800 guineas for a pair.

Mr. Oliver Sumner Teal, when occupying a box at the theater, invariably sits with his back to the stage and his face to the audience.

Representative Pence of Colorado was a district attorney before his election to congress, and in that position never lost a case, it is said.

W. H. Vanderbilt, some time prior to his death, spoke of himself as a goner and said: "All this money isn't worth a rap. I would give it all for your health."

Ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer of Michigan has presented the city of Detroit for park purposes a farm of 100 acres on which his grandfather filed an entry in 1820.

Leoncavallo, the composer, is described as being a pleasant young fellow who has been as poor as a church mouse and whose cranium has not been enlarged by success.

Heine said of Savoye, a mediocre diplomat appointed ambassador to Frankfurt by Lamartine in 1848, "Ordinarily he is insane, but he has lucid moments, when he is only stupid."

H. T. Foutz of Mountain Grove, Va., celebrated his seventieth birthday recently by walking 38 miles. Mr. Foutz has two sisters, aged 93 and 85 years, and a brother who is 76 years old.

Lord Herschell, the great equity lawyer, is passionately fond of music. He is an expert performer on the violoncello and assists in concerted chamber music at his own residence in London.

Lord Hannen, famous as the president of the Parnell special commission and lately the chief representative of Great Britain in the Behring sea arbitration, has just resigned his position as lord of appeal.

Philip D. Armour is a short set, broad built, prosperous looking man, with a ruddy, open face, darkly side whiskered. He is severely self made and his fortune is estimated at something like $50,000,000.

Sir James Crichton Browne, the English specialist, is a believer in the theory that the coming man will be toothless. He declares that over 10,000,000 false teeth are annually fitted into the mouths of Britishers.

Lord Houghton, the lord lieutenant of Ireland, has Celtic blood in his veins—one of his ancestors was the fourth Viscount Galway—while his children are descended, through their mother, from Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

There are no fewer than five Irish peers who take their titles from places that are not to be found in the map of Ireland. These are the Duke of Abercorn, the Earl of Sheffield, the Earl of Darnley, Viscount Bangor and Viscount Hawarden.

Baron Edouard de Rothschild has given the total sum of the money prizes won by his yacht, the Betina, to the St. Michel orphanage at Fecamp. This establishment provides for the free bringing up and education of the children of sailors who have perished at sea.

CROWN AND SCEPTER.

The queen of Denmark is stone deaf, a throat malady being responsible for the affliction.

Pope Leo has never set foot outside the precincts of the Vatican during the whole 13 years since his accession to the papal throne.

If King Leopold of Belgium were without a throne, he would probably do well on the board of trade. He is always looking out for the main chance and speculates heavily.

When the Princess of Wales was married, the King of the Belgians gave her lace of the value of £10,000. Since that time the princess has gone on collecting, and now her lace is worth something like £50,000.

Queen Victoria's eyesight is failing, and the royal oculist has frequently to be called into requisition. Her majesty now has to use very powerful spectacles when it is necessary for her to sign state documents. Blindness is hereditary in the family.

The Empress Frederick of Germany possesses a unique teaset. The tea tray has been beaten out of an old Prussian halfpenny. The teapot is made out of a German farthing and the tiny cups are made from coins of different German principalities.

Prince George of Wales owns a very curious book. In it are pasted all the newspaper cuttings touching any part of his career. The colored portrait which appeared in Vanity Fair is placed on the cover. The volume is handsomely bound and has solid gold clasps.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A coffee or tea pot hinged at the bottom to a revolving plate mounted on a stand so that the pot may be tilted without lifting.

A fireproof covering for walls, composed of asbestos sheets, softened by steaming, embossed by rollers and dried and painted or otherwise decorated.

An improved method of manufacturing axle washers, whereby they are formed into a helix having a number of convolutions with external slits for readily cutting into individual washers.

A process of treating vegetables to produce a long lasting food product, the vegetable being sliced or grated, saturated with a solution of salt and boric acid, bleached with sulphur and dried.

GASTRIC JUICE.

Plates for every hot course should be heated.

Cut all cold meats and old bread very thin. Trim the slices to make them neat.

There is absolutely no nutriment in the skins of fruit and meat, in gristle, in rinds of melons, in the fibrous parts of oranges, in gizzards or giblets.

If tea be ground like coffee or crushed immediately before hot water is poured upon it, it will yield nearly double the amount of its exhilarating qualities.

Only the breast of partridge and canvas-back duck is eaten. Small birds like plover, snipe, reed and squab are served whole. With spring chicken, half is served to each person.

An Anecdote of Lord Lytton.

Many years ago when the elder Bulwer was in his prime a laborer on the estate was engaged to do a certain job of hard work. At the end of a week he carried his account to the bailiff, who said a week's work was worth 3 shillings and 6 pence. The man insisted that this was not enough and refused to settle, and every time he met the bailiff he would stop him and ask him for his money. Finally the bailiff became angry, discharged the man and refused to allow any farmer on the estate to hire him.

The man was forced to leave the neighborhood, but he was too poor to move any great distance, so that he was still within the circuit of the bailiff's ill will. Wherever he went this pursued him, and his life in consequence was a hard one. But all the time he kept telling his family and his friends that some day he would get the money which the Bulwer Lytton estate owed him.

He was well on in years, when one day he met a man in the road. It was the some time poet Owen Meredith, now come to the title, and English ambassador to France, at home on a visit.

"You are Lord Lytton, I believe," he said respectfully.

"Yes."

"Then, if you please, I should like you to pay an account which has been due me for a long time."

Lord Lytton looked at the account, and at his request the man told the whole story. The poet was very much affected and disturbed. Then he said: "Well, I will do what I can to make it up to you."

He was as good as his word. He built a house at the gates of the park, put the man and his family into it, and gave it to them rent free, with other perquisites, so that he was entirely comfortable for the remainder of his days.—Hartford Courant.

The Wily Chinese.

A German Jew who keeps a pawnbroker's shop in Sydney is blessed with one daughter, who now and then keeps shop while her father attends sales on the lookout for bargains. During the temporary absence of old Moses recently a meek looking Chinaman walked into the shop and asked Rachel to show him some "welly good watches."

Rachel handed down four from the shelf at the end of the counter marked respectively, "$50 watch," "$40 watch," "$30 watch" and "$10 watch," and arranged them in a line on the counter in the order of their value.

John inspected them, and taking advantage of Rachel's momentary inattention slipped the $10 watch into the place occupied by the $40 watch and handed over a $10 note saying:

"I take cheap watchee."
Shortly afterward Rachel detected the swindle and sought refuge in tears. On the return of old Moses she related the misadventure with many protestations of concern.

"Never mind, mine tear," said the father, with a dry chuckle, "dove watches were all de same brice—$6—but vat a scoundrel dot Shinaman must pe, don't he?"—London Tit-Bits.

The Cause of Geysers.

Bunsen has explained the periodical eruption of geysers in such a satisfactory manner that doubt is no longer possible. A cavern filled with water lies deep in the earth under the geyser, and the water in this cavern is heated by the earth's internal heat far above 212 degrees, since there is a heavy hydrostatic pressure upon it arising from the weight of water in the passage or natural stand-pipe that leads from the subterranean chamber of the surface of the earth.

After a time the temperature of the water below rises, so that steam is given off in spite of the pressure, and the column in the exit tube is gradually forced upward. The release of pressure and the disturbance of the water then cause the contents of the subterranean chamber to flash into steam and expel the contents of the exit pipe violently. These eruptions may also be provoked by throwing stones or clouds of turf into the basin of the geyser. The water in the cavern below is disturbed by this means.—Great Divide.

Newspapers and the Love of Books.

It is not any more true in England than it is in this country that the reading of newspapers is spoiling the taste for books. Never in any other generation were there as large editions of books of knowledge and thought printed and sold as there are in this one. The figures given in the reports of the British and American book trade are amazing, especially as regards books of the highest erudition, the deepest cogitation and the wisest counsel. As many as 50,000 copies of Mr. Bryce's "American Commonwealth" have already been sold in this country and England. The works of the great authors of the past, too, are more in demand than they ever were before. It is ignorance to say that good newspapers spoil the taste for books. They promote the love of the best books.—New York Sun.

Anthrax In Mud of Sheep Wells.

An epidemic of splenic fever broke out among some sheep on a farm in the south of Russia. Thinking that the disease might be connected with the use of a particular well water, the matter was bacteriologically examined. Diatropoff was unable to discover the anthrax bacillus in the water, but an investigation of the mud at the bottom of the suspected well revealed the presence of an organism, which, on inoculation into animals, was proved beyond doubt to be the bacillus anthracis. On the well being closed, no further cases of anthrax occurred.

That the germs of the anthrax had in some manner gained access to the well is certain and opens up the possibility of the communication of this disease by means of drinking water. Moreover, the likelihood of such contamination taking place through the drainage from soil points to the desirability of destroying the carcasses of infected animals by cremation rather than burial.—London Nature.
