FROM ALL AROUND THE CITY.

Current Local Events of the Day Briefly Told.

Bits of Facts and Gossip Gathered on the Streets by Times Reporters—Points Political, Social and General Happening Yesterday.

Preparing For a Christmas Entertainment.
Preparations are being made by the children of the United Brethren Church for an entertainment to be given during Christmas week.

Chickens and Turkeys Stolen.
S. J. Akers, a huckster at the market house, had twenty-five chickens and six turkeys stolen from his huckster on Nelson street some time Thursday night.

Badly Cut His Hand.
L. C. Camper, a carpenter, cut his hand very badly Thursday afternoon while dressing a plank with a drawing knife. Dr. Harrison was called, who rendered the necessary medical aid.

Rev. E. B. Pollard at Virginia College.
Rev. E. B. Pollard, of the First Baptist Church, preached to the young ladies of the Virginia College at their chapel last night. Rev. C. S. Stanton delivered the sermon on the previous night.

Charged With Stealing Coal.
Mary Hall, a colored woman, was arrested by Special Officer Davis last night on the charge of stealing some coal from the Electric Light Company. Her case will be investigated in police court this morning.

Gorton's Minstrels Coming.
R. F. Trevellick, Jr., the advance agent for Gorton's Minstrels, was in the city yesterday making arrangements for the appearance of that organization at the Academy of Music next Friday night, December 22.

Death of John Vaughan.
John Vaughan, aged 50 years, died yesterday morning at 8 o'clock at his residence near Fairview Cemetery of the grip after an illness of a week. Mr. Vaughan was unmarried and was engaged in the dairy business at the time of his death.

Young Men's Christian Association.
At 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon Rev. G. T. D. Collins will deliver an address to the members and friends of the association. The music will be led by Capt. J. H. Wright, assisted by the organ and a quartette of instruments. All men are invited and strangers will be cordially welcome.

Serious Illness of S. L. Mayo.
S. L. Mayo, a well-known engineer on the Shenandoah division of the Norfolk and Western railroad, is very sick with pneumonia at his residence, 245 West Shenandoah avenue. Julius Mayo, of the McDowell, W. Va. Recorder, arrived in the city Thursday in response to a telegram announcing the illness of his father.

Griffin's Investigation To-day.
The investigation of the charges against the first sergeant of police, A. H. Griffin, who was indicted for being accessory to the lynching of Thomas Smith September 21 and who is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer September 20, will be held to-day at the mayor's office, beginning at 10 o'clock, before Mayor Trout.

Death of a Colored Convict.
Col. S. S. Brooke, clerk of the Hustings' Court, received a letter yesterday from the superintendent of the State penitentiary stating that William Jackson, colored, died in prison December 13 of hemorrhage. Jackson was sentenced to the penitentiary last May for three years on a charge of throwing a lighted lamp on Lottie May.

A Hungry Thief.
Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock Robert Adick, who resides in West Roanoke, was awakened by a noise in the kitchen, and upon going down he found that a thief had entered through the window, and stole a loaf of bread and part of a ham. It is supposed that the thief upon hearing Mr. Adick approaching made his escape.

Miss Witter a Prize Poetess.
The judges selected by Fishburne Bros. to decide on the merits of the prize poems on the Yellow Rose tobacco, met yesterday and awarded the first prize of $10 to Miss Belle Witter. The second prize of $5 was awarded to Miss Emma D. Hunt. One of the judges favored for the second poem the one written by Dr. J. W. Davis, of the Evening World.

Snyder & MacBain's Attractive Windows.
The most unique and attractive show window ever arranged in Roanoke was exhibited yesterday by Snyder & MacBain. In one of the windows is a life-like representation of a cow, one of the best pieces of work of an expert taxidermist, and a milk maid in wax standing by. Crowds of ladies and children were gathered around the windows all yesterday afternoon.

An Attractive Looking Store.
Pritchett Bonavita, the proprietor of the Campbell avenue confectionery, has added to his stock of fresh candies and nice fruits until the place is one of the most attractive in the city. He makes a specialty of five-cent goods, suitable for Christmas trees and presents. His wares are very neatly arranged, and it is really worth a visit to the store to see the pretty things in the confectionery line he has on sale.

Successful Entertainment.
The entertainment last night at Brugh's old store room on Jefferson street, under the auspices of the Elpaal Society of the First Baptist Church, was attended by a large number of people, who enjoyed the entertainment. The chief attraction was the pantomime "Genova," arranged by Misses Wortham and Carnifex, in which the leading parts were taken by Miss Gortie Hines and Master Otay Reynolds. The music was well arranged and charmingly rendered by Miss Sue Read Fellows.

Change in Their Charter.
Judge John W. Woods, of the Hustings Court, granted an amendment to the charter of the Roanoke Electric Light and Power Company yesterday that will allow the company to mortgage, sell and otherwise dispose of its franchise property, real or personal, as it may deem best and to purchase the stock of other companies and to indorse, assume and otherwise make itself liable for the payments of the debts of others, and to secure those debts by mortgage or other conveyance of its real and personal property.

Close of a Successful Revival.
The most successful revival held in the city since the advent of the Rev. Sam Jones was closed at the Greene-Memorial Church last night with a powerful and eloquent sermon by Rev. J. E. Schoofield, of Danville, who has preached in that church morning and evening every day for two weeks. The sermon of the revivalist was one of the best of the series and there were few people present who did not feel the effect of his forcible appeals, as he pointed out to the wayward sinner the road to eternal bliss. The announcement was made that Rev. Dr. J. J. LaFerty, of Richmond, would preach at Greene-Memorial Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Notice.
ALL parties indebted to the late firm of Kaplan & Schiller, or better known as K. & S., must come forward and pay their accounts or make satisfactory arrangements with the trustee. All accounts not settled by the first of the year will be put in an attorney's hands for collection. D. GRINBERG, trustee for K. & S.

MRS. HATFIELD IN TOWN.

She is a Member of the Famous Hatfield-McCoy Clan and Came to Buy Goods.

Mrs. L. J. Hatfield, a member of the famous Hatfield-McCoy clan, who for so many years has terrorized the Big Sandy region in Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia, was in Roanoke yesterday accompanied by her son-in-law, John Dingess. The object of these worthies' visit to the city was to purchase a stock of whiskies and cigars for the saloon Mrs. Hatfield operates at Warncleffe, W. Va. Mrs. Hatfield's apparel was not quite so fantastic as it was on the occasion of her former visit to the Magic City, and she was arrayed in a tailor-made gown of black trimmed liberally with orange and bottle green ribbons. Mrs. Hatfield is social in her disposition, and, while on the train yesterday morning, occasionally offered the trainmen and commercial travelers on board a "nip" from a huge black quart bottle which she carried in her satchel. Mrs. Hatfield, although proficient in the use of firearms, has abandoned her former custom of habitually wearing a gun on her person.

We are the sole agents for Radam's Microbe Killer in Roanoke. Persons suffering with any blood or chronic disease should try this wonderful remedy. Fifty-page book free, giving germ theory of disease. JOHNSON & JOHNSON.

Choice millinery at half price at the store of the late firm of K. & S. Come and be convinced.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.
The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price, 25 cents per box. For sale by Christian & Barbee.

The entire stock of the merchant tailoring department of the late firm of K. & S. will be sold at public auction on Tuesday, December 19, at 10 a. m. at the old stand of the Merchant's Cafe on Jefferson street.

Baths.
Turkish and Russian electric, hot, cold, shower and needle bath for ladies at Robokah Sanitarium, 131 Eighth avenue s. w., from 1 to 3 p. m.

In the history of all failures and selling outs in the city of Roanoke there never were any such goods offered as are being offered now by the trustee of the K. & S. The goods are seasonable, choice, stylish and at prices which the smallest sized purse can reach with ease.

Don't be talked into having an operation as it may cost you your life. Japanese Pile Cure is guaranteed to cure you by Christian & Barbee.

PANTS, suits and overcoats will be cheaper now made to order than ready made by attending the trustee's auction sale of suitings of the late firm of K. & S. on Jefferson street, next to the Commercial National Bank.

MATSUYAMA MIRROR.

A WONDERFUL JAPANESE DEVICE THAT PUZZLES SCIENTISTS.

Images Reflected Through Metal—A Japanese Fairy Tale That Will Be Enjoyed Around Every American Fireside—How a Mother Lived In a Mirror.

[Special Correspondence.]

YOKOHAMA.—Among the many marvelous things to be seen in this country of marvels that first attract the attention of the foreigner is the Japanese mirror. Its peculiarity consists in the fact that it is made of metal—generally of bronze—coated on the front with an amalgam of tin and quicksilver, and so highly polished that but for its weight it might be mistaken for an ordinary looking glass. The back is adorned in relief with flowers, birds or Japanese characters which extend to the handle, and the general appearance is that of a handsome metal fan.

That which is most extraordinary about the mirror, however, is the quality it possesses of reflecting a luminous image of the design on the back. In other words, the sunlight seems to penetrate the metal and display the figures that are otherwise hidden from view. The attention of men of science has long been attracted to the phenomenon, but no explanation heretofore given has proved satisfactory. The consensus of opinion is that the effect is produced by an unequal convexity resulting from the manipulation of an iron tool accompanied by the application of mercury.

In connection with these mirrors, the Japanese have a pretty fairy tale and because of the poetical thought it conveys, and the pleasure it may afford to young as well as old, I send you the following free translation as it has been given to me by one of the English residents here: A long time ago there lived in a quiet spot a young man and his wife. They had one child, a daughter, to whom they were greatly attached, and their home was known as Matsuyama, a beautiful village in the province of Keiso. It so happened that the father was obliged to go to the great city of Tokio, the capital of Japan. The mother, never having been farther from home than the next town, could not help being frightened at the thought of her husband making such a long journey, yet she was proud of the fact, for he was the first man in all that country side who had been to the big town where lived the emperor.

At last the time arrived for his return, and dressing the baby in its best clothes and arraying herself in the pretty blue gown which she knew her husband liked, she waited to give him welcome. And when he came, how the little girl clapped her hands and laughed with delight over the beautiful toys her father brought. "And for you," he said to his wife, "I have brought this. It is called a mirror. Look and tell me what you see inside."

He gave to her a plain, white wooden box, in which on opening it she found a round piece of metal. One side was white like frosted silver and ornamented with raised figures of birds and flowers. The other was as bright as the clearest crystal. The young mother looked into it with delight and astonishment, for from its depths was looking at her with parted lips and bright eyes a smiling happy face.

"What do you see?" asked the husband, gratified at her astonishment. "I see a pretty woman looking at me. She moves her lips as if she was speaking, and—dear me, how odd, she has on a blue dress just like mine!" "Why, you silly woman, it's your own face that you see," said the husband, proud of knowing something that was new to his wife. "That round piece of metal is called a mirror, and everybody in the great city has one, although we have not seen them in this country place before."

The wife was charmed with the present. But the wonderful thing was far too precious for every day use, so she shut it up in its box again, putting it away carefully among her most valuable treasures. Years passed on and the husband and wife continued to live happily. The joy of their life was their little daughter, who as she grew up became the very image of her mother. The latter, mindful of her own passing vanity on finding herself so lovely, kept the mirror carefully concealed, fearing that the use of it might breed a spirit of pride in her little girl. She never spoke of it, and as for the father he had quite forgotten the circumstance. So it happened that the daughter grew up as simple as the mother had been, knowing nothing of her own good looks or of the mirror which would have reflected them.

After awhile, however, a terrible misfortune occurred in this happy little family. The good mother fell sick, and though waited upon with loving care by day and night she grew worse and worse until at last the sad announcement was made that she must die. Calling the girl to her, the mother said: "My darling child, I must soon pass away and leave you and your father alone, but I want from you a promise. Here is what is called a mirror," taking it from its hiding place and handing it to her daughter. "Promise me that you will look into this mirror every night and morning, for there you will see me and know that your mother is still watching over you."

The child promised with many tears, and the mother, being now calm and resigned, soon after died. Obedient and dutiful, the daughter never forgot her mother's last request, and each morning and evening took the mirror from its box and looked at it long and earnestly. There she saw, as she supposed, the bright and smiling vision of her lost mother. Not pale and sickly as in her last days, but the beautiful young mother of long ago. To her at night she told the story of the trials and difficulties of the day, and to her in the morning looked for sympathy and encouragement in whatever troubles might be in store for her. So, day by day, she lived as if in her mother's sight, striving still to please her as she had done in her mother's lifetime, and careful always to avoid whatever might give her pain or grief. Her greatest joy was to look in the mirror and say: "Mother, I have been today what you would wish me to be if you were by my side."

Thus seeing his little daughter every night and morning looking into the mirror, he longed to converse with it, her father one day asked her the reason for the strange behavior. "You see, father," she said, "I look into the mirror every day to see my dear mother and talk with her." Then she told him of her mother's dying wish and how she never had failed to fulfill it. Touched by so much simplicity and such faithful loving obedience, the father shed tears of pity and affection; but he could not find it in his heart to tell the child that the image she saw was only the reflection of her own sweet face, which by sympathy and association had become more and more like her dead mother's day by day. And so she lived on, happy in the thought that though absent in the flesh, the one she loved best was always present in the spirit and always looking on her from the depths of her cherished mirror! THE POULTERER.

Too heavy feeding and want of exercise tend to barrenness.

Keeping fowls on hard runs or floors will cause swollen feet or legs.

Hens in confinement need to have egg-shell material supplied to them.

Any kind of poultry may be improved by a careful selection and breeding.

Chickens will keep healthier if they can have loose ground to scratch over.

Even in winter, if the hens are expected to lay regularly, care must be taken not to let them become too fat.

The principal reason why cooked food fattens the fowls more rapidly is because it is much more easily digested.

When fowls are closely confined, the runs need spading up occasionally to prevent them from becoming too foul.

Early broilers usually prove very profitable. Push the growth until they will average two pounds and then sell.

It will pay to sell all the common turkeys and make a new start with some of the better breeds like the Bronze of Narragansett.

A small quantity of sunflower seed given occasionally will add to the gloss of the plumage. A handful to a dozen fowls will be sufficient.

Bran, ground oats and cornmeal make one of the best rations for growing chickens. It may be improved somewhat by baking and then crumbling.

In selecting the hens, if there are any that have proved themselves exceptionally good mothers, it will pay to keep them over if they are past 2 years old.

The nests should be dark, warm and supplied with good nesting material, which should be changed regularly, even in winter, to prevent its becoming too foul.

Setting hens are scarce in winter, so if early chickens are wanted a good incubator will be necessary, the size depending upon the number of chickens to be hatched.

Leaves or chaff make a good litter to scatter on the floor, and by throwing grain among it the fowls will be kept busy scratching it over, and in this way take exercise.

One of the principal items in raising chickens in the brooder is warmth. If they get chilled, they will crowd together in a brooder so closely that some will be smothered.

What is one of the best grains for laying hens. It is rich in material for growth, while stimulating to the egg functions. At present prices it can hardly be considered an expensive feed.

With good treatment pullets hatched in February will lay in September; those hatched in March will lay in October, while those hatched in April will usually begin laying in December.—St. Louis Republic.

THE CRITIC.

Harriet Hosmer, the American sculptress, it is said, can wear as many medals as a hereditary grand duke. She has spent the last 20 years almost continuously in Europe.

Poems over the signature of Annie Fields, which appear in the leading magazines, are written by the widow of the well known publisher, James T. Fields. Mrs. Fields lives in Boston.

M. Lambrose says: "George Eliot had the face of a man, an enormous head, hair disordered, a large nose, thick lips, a prominent mustache, a long face like a horse and a voluminous lower jaw."

Few living American writers have as much knowledge of military and naval affairs as is possessed by John Habberton. Few follow current reading as closely as the author of "The Maid of Bethany."

Appreciative parents and friends are inundating Dr. Edward Everett Hale with reports of children's sayings which Dr. Hale was said to be collecting for philosophical purposes. The statement, Dr. Hale says, was an entire hoax.

General Lew Wallace is at work on a fourth novel, the material for which he has been quietly collecting for several years. General Wallace refuses to state with what age or people he will deal in his new work, nor will he even say when he expects to have it finished.

Rudyard Kipling passes most of his leisure time in cultivating flowers. The novelist wrote to Mrs. W. S. Dana, in regard to her book on New England wild flowers, that he disliked to transplant flowers, as in digging them up it "made the roots of the poor little things squeak."

THE CONDUCTOR.

The passenger trains of the future are to be heated by steam on the Lehigh Valley road.

A Roumanian lady is at her own expense constructing a railway from one of her estates to the nearest town.

There are eight tunnels on the Transandin railway in Chili and Argentina, the total length of which is 9½ English miles.

The Pennsylvania company contemplates putting on a line of sleeping coaches between Louisville and St. Louis over the Louisville division of the Pennsylvania and Vandallia.

The Big Four in its dining car service will supply its passengers on either the American or European plan, in the latter case the traveler paying for any article on the bill of fare desired.

The Frisco line runs a through Pullman tourist sleeping car from St. Louis to California every Saturday evening via Burton, Albuquerque and Bartow to Los Angeles. Second class tickets are available on tourist sleepers.

Three dollars is the amount of the fine which, according to a Buffalo paper, is to be assessed against each brakeman on the Western New York and Pennsylvania who spoils a wheel by keeping the brakes set too long at a time in descending long grades.
