 James A. Pugh, who was shot and badly hurt last Monday night, was not so well yesterday as he had been, and his wounds do not heal as rapidly as his physicians had hoped for.

Received a Bad Scalp Wound.
 Charlie, the ten-year-old son of Henry Rohn, who lives on Second avenue, n. w., received a bad scalp wound yesterday by being struck with a brick while playing with some other boys.

Fancy Christmas Groceries Received.
 The Jefferson Street Grocery Company yesterday received one of the largest lots of fancy Christmas groceries ever exhibited in the city, which they are arranging in an attractive way.

A Tea This Evening.
 The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Mark's Lutheran Church will give a tea this evening from 7:30 to 10 o'clock, at the residence of J. H. Marsteller, at the corner of Seventh avenue and Third street.

Mrs. Ginger Will Not Go to Marion.
 Mrs. P. J. Ginger, who was recently adjudged insane, will not be sent to the asylum at Marion, but will be taken to-day to Rockbridge county, where her two brothers have promised to take care of her.

Cow Stolen and Butchered.
 A fine cow, the property of J. T. Engleby, was stolen and butchered on his farm on the river south of this city Saturday night. The matter has been reported to the police force, but no clue has been obtained as to the personality of the thief.

Stores Will Hold Open Late.
 A considerable number of stores in the city will be kept open later of evenings than usual from now until after the holidays. This was inaugurated by Snyder & MacBain, who kept open until 10 o'clock last night.

Kindergarten Christmas Exercises.
 The children of the kindergarten will have their Christmas exercises in the chapel of the Second Presbyterian Church, on Roanoke street near Tenth avenue, on Thursday, December 21, at 11 a. m. All interested in the work are invited to attend.

Too Much Thieving to Suit Them.
 A number of thieves are at work in the county stealing poultry, stock, etc., from the farmers. In order to devise some means of stopping this thieving, a mass meeting of the citizens of the county will be held at 2 o'clock Friday, the 22nd, at Grange Hall, near Hollins.

Colored People's Benevolent Society.
 The colored people of this city have organized a Benevolent Society with the following officers: President, Miss Lucy Addison; secretary, Mrs. Susie Blair; and solicitor, Mrs. T. T. Henry. The society held a meeting yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock and made arrangements for work during the winter.

Cut Off Three of His Brother's Fingers.
 Dr. Downey yesterday afternoon dressed the hand of a little four-year-old son of Moses Dean, a well-to-do colored citizen of Ballyhack, whose three fingers had been accidentally chopped off with a hatchet in the hands of his six-year-old brother whom he was assisting in chopping wood.

The Election of the Vigilant Officers.
 The election of officers of the Vigilant Fire Company, which was to have taken place at the next regular meeting, which falls on Christmas day, has been postponed on account of that day, and the officers will be elected at a called meeting which is liable to occur about December 28.

Question Over the Appointment of a Chief.
 The question has been raised whether, under the existing laws passed by Council, anyone is eligible to the office of chief engineer of the fire department. The resolution of Council says that the chief engineer must have been a member of the fire department four years. The Roanoke fire department was organized in 1891 and it is claimed there can be no legal chief engineer until 1895 unless Council repeals the resolution.

Verdict of $300 for Captain Banks.
 In the Husting Court yesterday the case of A. J. Banks vs. the Washington and Roanoke Land and Improvement Company was tried before a jury, which returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $300. John M. Hart and J. Ran Bryan represented Captain Banks and Lucian H. Cooke the defendant.

Discuss Plans For Relieving the Poor.
 The pastors' conference convened yesterday morning in the Young Men's Christian Association hall at 9 o'clock. After the reports of the pastors were read, which showed a large attendance at all of the churches Sunday, plans were discussed for the relief of the poor. Rev. Dr. J. J. Lafferty, of Richmond, and Rev. Dr. J. B. Taylor, of Salem attended the conference.

Some One Stole His $175.
 Maggie Dickerson, a heavy weight denizen of Pot Liqueur Plats, was arrested last night by Officer Johnson on a warrant charging her with stealing $175 from Thomas Mahoney last Saturday night. Mahoney is a resident of Harrisburg, Pa., who was taking in the sights in the Magic City Saturday night, lingered too long around the flowing bowl and came to grief.

Arranging for a New Year's Dinner.
 The ladies of Woodside Presbyterian Church, at Norwich, are making arrangements for furnishing a dinner to any of those who will be out of employment on New Year's day. The dinner, which will be served after 2 o'clock at the church, will be open to all, regardless of church preferences. A musical entertainment will follow and an effort will be made to make the day as enjoyable a one as possible.

The Cemetery is Not a Goat Pasture.
 A number of citizens yesterday called the attention of a Times reporter to the fact that thirteen goats were allowed to remain in the City Cemetery, walking over, and otherwise desecrating the graves, and disturbing the shrubbery. The citizens did not hesitate to express their opinion that if there is a keeper of the cemetery, he should look after matters more closely, and if there is not a keeper of the cemetery there should be.

An Approaching Marriage.
 The announcement has been made of the marriage of Basil H. Cooper, a popular business man of Bluefield, W. Va., to Miss Etta J. Shartzler, the accomplished daughter of A. C. Pollard, of this city, which will be celebrated at the First Baptist Church by Rev. E. B. Pollard Wednesday, afternoon at 3 o'clock. After the marriage the young couple will take the 4:30 train for Bluefield, where they will reside. There will be no cards.

Want the Case Transferred to Richmond.
 Col. John E. Penn went to Richmond Sunday night to make a motion to the court of appeals to move from Wytheville to Richmond the case of the Pocahontas Coal Company and the Crozier Steel and Iron Company vs. the Roanoke Rolling Mill. The counsel in the case are Colonel Penn, for the Crozier Steel and Iron Company; Hon. J. Allen Watts, for the Pocahontas Coal Company, and Griffin & Glasgow and Hon. A. A. Phlegar, for the Rolling Mill.

The Light Coated Thief Again.
 The man with the light overcoat has been getting in some more of his bold robberies. Last Sunday night while Miss Addie Kenney, clerk for P. F. Van Miller, was going up Salem avenue near the corner of Park street, a young man wearing a large light overcoat turned up over his ears and a felt hat pulled down, suddenly sprang out of the shadows and snatched her pocketbook from her hands and immediately ran and escaped. The pocketbook contained $14. The police have obtained no clue to the mysterious highwayman who has been working Roanoke so industriously.

MESSAGE ON HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS.

 ment at Honolulu. The President has, therefore, determined that he will not send back to the Senate the treaty which he had withdrawn from that body for further consideration on March 9 last.

On your arrival at Honolulu you will take advantage of an early opportunity to inform the queen of this determination, making known to her the President's regret that the reprehensible conduct of the American minister and the unauthorized presence on land of the military force of the United States, obliged her to surrender her sovereignty for the time being, and to rely on the justice of this government to undo the flagrant wrong done to her.

You will at the same time inform the queen that when reinstated the President expects that she will pursue a magnanimous course by granting full amnesty to all who participated in the movement against her, including the persons who are, or have been, officially or otherwise connected with the provisional government, depriving them of no right or privilege enjoyed before the so-called revolution.

Expected to Relinquish Her Authority.
 "Having secured the queen's authority to pursue this wise and humane policy which it is believed you will speedily obtain, you will advise the president of the provisional government and his ministers of the President's determination on the question, which their action and that of the queen devolved upon him, and that they are expected to relinquish to her promptly her constitutional authority."
 "Should the queen decline to pursue the liberal course suggested, or should the provisional government refuse to abide by the President's decision, you will report the facts and await further instructions."

Two Communications Withheld.
 The President's message was identical as presented in both Houses. But in the case of the House of Representatives the chief executive added a supplementary message as follows:
 "In making the communication I have withheld only a dispatch from the former minister to Hawaii, numbered 70, under date of October 8, 1892, and a dispatch from the present minister, numbered 3, under date of November 16, 1893, because, in my opinion, the publication of these two papers would be incompatible with the public interest."

Grieved Herself to Death.
 SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 18.—A special to the Morning News from Waycross, Ga., says: Mrs. George W. Bennett died of heart failure at her home in this city this morning. Her little child died last night after an illness of several days. This morning as the mother for the little child was carried into the house, Mrs. Bennett fell on the floor and died instantly. Mrs. Bennett grieved sorely over the death of her child, and it is thought that she grieved herself to death.

Death of Mr. Word.
 Q. M. Word, whose serious illness is mentioned in another column, died at his residence, No. 515 Third street s. w., at 3 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Word was in his 81st year and has been a resident of this city for many years. He leaves two sons, Harry and Moton, and two daughters, Mrs. W. D. Stuart and Mrs. P. W. Reynolds.

THE PHILOSOPHER.
 In every soul is a slabbish grave where some fond hopes lie sleeping.
 There must be love back of the hand that is reached out to save another.
 Happiness is a roadside flower growing on the highways of usefulness.
 The best education in the world is that got by struggling to get a living.
 Buy what thou hast no need of, and ere long thou shalt sell thy necessities.
 A craving for sympathy is the common boundary line between joy and sorrow.
 Be not afraid of enthusiasm; you need it; you can do nothing effectually without it.
 Life appears to be too short to be spent in nursing animosity or registering wrong.
 He who puts a bad construction on a good act reveals his own wickedness of heart.
 Language cannot express to any one much beyond what he has lived or experienced.
 Metal will certainly rust if not used, and the body will assuredly become diseased if not exercised.
 The hero never asks, "What will people think of me if I do these things?" but, "What will I think of myself if I do not do them?"
 The heart is always hungry. No man lives happily alone. The wisest and the best is wiser and better for the friends he has.—Toronto Star.

THE JEWELER.
 Cats' eyes, when large and of purplish tints, are still used.
 A pretty lace brooch is a crescent of pearls carrying a corneal ball.
 The eagle has been introduced into England, imbedded with diamonds with ruby eyes, as a chatelaine pin.
 Enamel tapes, blue, crimson and lavender, are used to form chatelaine pins for watches enameled in the same color.
 A horseshoe brooch with a watch hanging in it is a novel combination. The horseshoe is of diamonds and can be detached.
 A lacepin for a woman of sporting tastes has a long round bar. A horse with a mounted figure at full run has two legs on one side and two on the other, apparently in the act of jumping.
 Watches are coming more and more into favor. A new design is a jeweled swallow holding in its beak the bow of a diamond incrust watch. This idea is carried out with other animals.—Jewelers' Circular.

THE DOCTOR.
 Barley water and linsed tea are said to be excellent for the voice.
 If you wish to avoid wrinkled, scrawny necks, avoid high, close collars.
 Continual worrying, as well as giving way to paroxysms of anger, will permanently injure the health.
 Sir Benjamin Richardson, an eminent London physician, gives it as his opinion that bicycling, long persisted in, will inevitably injure the spine, the lungs and the circulation of the rider.

A FERNICIOUS WEED.

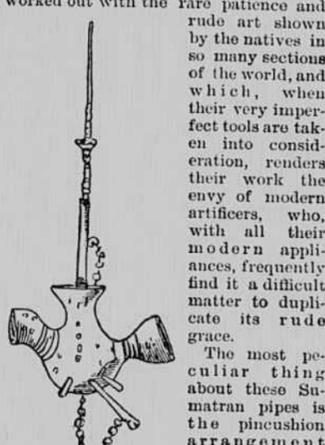

Farms of North Dakota Threatened by the Russian Cactus.
 [Special Correspondence.]
 LA MOURE, N. D., Dec. 7.—Congress will undoubtedly soon be asked to appropriate a good round number of American dollars to aid the farmers of North Dakota in their efforts to save their farms from a vagrant weed commonly called the Russian cactus. Among botanists the weed is known as Salsola kali, var. tragus. It is supposed to be a near relative of the native tremble weed (Amaranthus albus), and it scatters its seed principally by trembling before the wind.

This weed is probably the most formidable pest that the farmer in any part of the United States has to contend with, and in spite of their efforts to rid the land of it the weed has made steady and rapid progress until many families in Bonhomme county, S. D., have been compelled to abandon their farms to it.
 It was in that county that the weed first made its appearance in this country, about three years ago, and it is the belief that it was imported from Russia in flax seed. The weed compelled a colony of Russians to leave the county, and they went to Ellendale, N. D. The cars in which they and their effects were transported were partially filled with flax, and in this way the seed of the vagrant of the field was brought north. In two years' time it had gained a firm foothold. Last year it was estimated that the weed had damaged the wheat crop $2,000,000, and the present year the injury is fixed at double that amount.

The size of the weed varies according to the opportunity it has for growing. If crowded, it will run up in small, stiff sprigs from 4 to 6 inches high. If given plenty of room, it forms a branching, harsh, thorny, rounded mass, bursting with needlelike spikes and covering an area of ground 6 feet in diameter. It is tender and succulent when young, but as it grows old it becomes hard and stiff.
 In the face of this advancing enemy the farmer seems helpless to save himself. It is possible to burn it only at that season of the year when it has become matured and dry, and as that is the time when the vast wheatfields are ready for the harvester, the farmer menaces his grain when he strikes the fire. The only successful method of stopping the self-sowing of the seed, yet hit upon, is the planting of a row of sunflowers around each field. The stalks stand closely together and prevent the weed from traveling over the ground inclosed by them. To uproot the weed by plowing it up is out of the question, for its prick is so painful that horses refuse to travel in it.

A law has been enacted in each state requiring the farmers to destroy the weed, but the measure is a useless one, as the farmers have no way of meeting its requirements. It is not improbable that this weed will march like a destroying angel through the entire wheat growing territory in the United States.
 The farmers have organized to destroy the weed and will send a memorial to the present congress asking financial aid. It looks now as if the farmers would undertake to build a double line of fence across the state. The weed would drift against the fence and could be gathered and burned.

Brass Pipes of Sumatra.
 [Special Correspondence.]
 BOSTON, Dec. 7.—The island of Sumatra is unique in two items connected with the tobacco world, one being the bright, glossy, light colored leaf so familiar to our cigar smokers, and the other the fact that, although no tobacco but what is termed in our tobacco vocabulary "cigar tobacco," is produced there, the natives had, until the introduction of the American cigarette, the most interesting brass pipes in the world.
 These pipes were made of solid welded brass, 30 to 34 inches in length, and brought to a higher point of barbaric utility, art and novelty than such work in almost any nation of the olden times. They are decorated with an etched or engraved design, the figure being worked out with the rare patience and rude art shown by the natives in so many sections of the world, and which, when their very imperfect tools are taken into consideration, renders their work the envy of modern artificers, who, with all their modern appliances, frequently find it a difficult matter to duplicate its rude grace.
 The most peculiar thing about these Sumatran pipes is the pincushion arrangement about the head, or bowl, which accommodates four prickers of steel about nine inches in length, which when not in use are stuck into the bowl as pins into a cushion, and are used to clear the bowl and its orifices leading to the stem from the clogging of the incombustible residue of the tobacco, which is naturally greater in a brass pipe than in one of brier or meerschaum.
 Another curious item is that at the under part of the bowl there is an orifice intended to hold a supply of agaric or punk, and that the looped chain is intended to hold a small flint stone. When the native wishes to smoke, he fills his pipe with tobacco, draws a rather square steel pricker from the pincushion and deftly holding his pipe between his knees chips away until he precipitates a spark onto the punk. His breath soon makes it glow, and a leaf or blade of grass will carry the flame to the tobacco and so render the owner of the pipe totally independent of matches or of asking a neighbor for "some fire." This is almost exactly the same principle as the old Spanish macheros. WILF. P. POND.
