One of the Most Striking Scenes Connected With the Turkish Court—No One Knows Who Is to Be Named Until the Last Moment—An Impressive Prayer.

The ceremony of "naming" the new grand vizier is one of the most impressive sights imaginable, and as it has seldom if ever been described an attempt to convey some idea of it may not be without interest. It was toward 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon that the servants commenced to carry out from Djavad Pasha's rooms at the sublime porte his books, papers, pens and other private paraphernalia. This was the first intimation given to the world that the grand vizier had fallen. Shortly afterward troops filed up the hill and lined both sides of the road from the landing stage at Sirikidjy to the doors of the porte. The news spread like fire under a wind, and by 5 o'clock all preparations were completed for the reception of the new occupant of the principal office in the empire. In the great council chamber the scene was unique in its quiet dignity. The room was crowded with all the high officials present and past, and though an hour or two previously none there had even guessed what was about to happen each one took his place silently and regularly, without confusion or mistake, awaiting the advent of the still unknown chief.

PARK PLACE COR. MURCH ST. N. Y.

At the head of the hall a small vacant space was left, around which grouped the present ministers and those who had previously held portfolios. As each came in he paced slowly up the carpet with one short salute. As soon as he reached the end all present returned the terna'a with a sweep of the hand to the ground, breast and forehead. This ritual greeting, accentuated by the movement of scarlet fezes in unison with open hands, given in silence, and in the dim, curtained light of the council chamber, defies adequate description by the pen.

And then the newcomer returned the salutes separately, beginning at the left hand side, round the square of his colleagues, subordinates and superiors, and one more candidate for the vizierate was effaced, for nobody knew upon whom the choice of the sultan had fallen. Many names were whispered round, but as their owners entered the circle of greeting their chances were seen to be extinguished. One after another they followed on, till by a process of reduction it became a question of only two or three, all the rest of Turkey's statesmen and all her greatest pashas having already trodden the carpet and taken their seats of expectation. Then from the windows could be seen a small procession winding up the ascent. In front were two horsemen, he on the left a little man well known to all the watchers in the chamber, and on the right the Sheikh ul Islam, shining in the sunlight with his robes of pure white and gold.

In the passing of a breath the name of Ketchuk Said fluttered round the room, and a few moments later the new grand vizier, who had already thrice gone through the same ceremony, was standing in the center of the ministerial group. There he drew from his breast a green silk bag, and extracting from it the imperial hatt he pressed the parchment to his lips and forehead. The dark bearded sheikh repeated this homage to the words of his imperial master, and the hatt was handed to the evrak mudiri, or keeper of the archives, who read aloud that his imperial majesty the sultan, knowing the devotion, well proved, of Said Pasha, intrusted to him the duties of grand vizier, and that, having full confidence in the piety of the Sheikh ul Islam, he prolonged his term of office, being anxious in all things for the best welfare of his people, and might Almighty God bless their efforts toward that end. Then again a wave of sweeping hands and bending heads went round, and the sheikh, in full, deep tones, offered up a prayer for the sultan and the empire. In a moment the council chamber was transformed into a holy place, and the politicians, pashas and scribes, with upturned palms, seemed to have forgotten for a space the world and its vanities. It would be hard to imagine anything more striking than this prayer, amid such surroundings and on such an occasion.

With it terminated the investiture. The new grand vizier adjourned to his room with his ministry for coffee and a perfunctory cabinet council, and later on the old and new viziers and ministers repaired to Yildiz to pay their first or last respects to their lord. Meanwhile another hatt had arrived, changing the occupant of the western wing of the porte, for Said Pasha, who has been minister for foreign affairs for nine years, was bidden to vacate his familiar chair in favor of Turkish Pasha—Constantinople Letter.

Irving and Stoker.

Not many know how that talented Irishman, Mr. Bram Stoker, came to be associated with the fortunes of Sir Henry Irving. It was in this wise. Sir Henry, when on a visit to Dublin, was invited to a supper party, and during the course of the evening was induced to recite in his thrilling way "The Dream of Eugene Aram." One of his auditors, a young man with a brilliant reputation at Trinity college, was so affected by the tragedian's delivery that he burst into tears. Henry Irving asked the young man to call on him the next morning, and then and there made him an offer, which was accepted to the mutual advantage of both. The young man was Mr. Bram Stoker.—London Correspondent.

THE CORPORAL

The Sturdy Gelding Which Captured the $10,000 M. and M. Stakes.

One of the two big annual trotting stakes left to owners of horses of less than phenomenal speed is the Detroit Merchants' and Manufacturers', familiarly known as the M. and M. This race is worth $10,000, and it is competed for by good horses eligible to the 2:24 class. This year the M. and M. was won by The Corporal in the last three of six heats. This race is famous for the quality of the contests it has produced, and though it has never been won easily the field of starters that scored in the first heat was composed of better horses than ever before started for the big purse, and the race they trotted was the best in the history of the event. The owner of The Corporal, L. E. Morse, Columbus, Neb., tells The Horseman that the horse was bred by Marin Brown, who bred the dam to Hambletonian Prince when living at Waukegan, Ills., in 1888. He emigrated to Nebraska, settling in Osceola, where The Corporal was foaled the next spring. He was not broken to harness until 1893. He developed a vicious disposition, and then, showing a good deal of natural speed, was trained a little and started in a county fair race at Osceola, which he won, taking a record of 2:35 1/4, and his present owner, Mr. Morse, bought him that day. Last season he started but twice, both times at Omaha, during the September meeting, winning on each occasion. This year he has started several times, winning every heat he took part in until he reached Detroit, where he caught a slight cold. Mr. Morse states that he was not given as much work as he needed on account of the cold and the injury and did not commence to trot in the M. and M. until after Goers got up behind him.

CHICAGO'S COLISEUM.

Largest Building in the World Devoted to Purposes of Amusement.

Where Buffalo Bill's Wild West show was located during the World's fair now stands the Chicago Coliseum, which is said to be the largest building in existence devoted to amusements.

Mr. S. S. Beman, the architect of the handsome Mines and Mining building at the exposition, is the designer of the Coliseum, which is in the Italian style, massive simplicity and graceful proportions taking the place of elaborate ornamentation. The buff brick of the first story walls will be pierced with a regular series of large arched openings, 15 feet wide, filled with glass, forming a continuous arcade around the building. From the sidewalk to the top of this cornice will be 40 feet. A tower, or campanile, of picturesque design will ornament the center of the eastern facade. It will be 240 feet high and 80 feet square, be provided with elevators and be used for an observatory, and an amusement hall and cafe will be placed in the top story. A powerful electric light is to be a feature of the pinnacle. A roof garden some 38 feet wide will run entirely around the building above. So much for the exterior. Within the whole structure is embraced a ground floor area of 240,000 square feet, or about 5 1/2 acres. Together with the gallery on the roof and the mezzanine stories this gives a total floor area of 8 acres.

The extreme capacity of the Coliseum will be 40,000 persons, and the building will be used for bicycle tournaments, football and baseball games, walking matches, horse shows, circuses, conventions, etc.

SPROCKET AND CHAIN.

Joyeux has finished his long journey around France. He made about 185 miles per day.

The first cycle record was established in England by a cyclist named Whiting. Four miles were run in 16:30.

The first hotel in the world to have a sign to attract wheelmen is the Hotel du Commerce of Rouen, France.

Starbuck, the professional, is said to carry a 25 cent piece set in the center of the handle bar of his racer. This is a constant reminder that he is "after the coin."

The proprietors of some of the new tracks could improve both their banking and their bank accounts, too, by the introduction of a race between steam rollers.

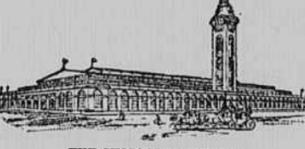

Walter Sanger's brother, William, who is one of the fastest A men in Wisconsin, is receiving the attention of the racing board. A berth in class B is being prepared for him.

An English rider rode off a dock into the sea. He was rescued, but his rescuers refused to give him his wheel, claiming it as salvage. The owner has applied to the courts to recover his property.

When a cyclist desires to go upon a tour of several days' duration, he should train a little; take a little spin every day, increasing the distance gradually. At the end of a few days he is sufficiently trained and can start without fear.

Taylor, who rejoices in the soubriquet of Old Hess, clipped four hours off of the record from Detroit to Chicago, riding the distance in 30 hours. Much of this road lies through a sandy country and is not the pleasantest riding in the world.

The Chicago Times-Herald has promoted a horse-drawn carriage contest similar to the one run in France. The race will be run Nov. 2 from Milwaukee to Chicago. Five thousand dollars' worth of prizes will be hung up. Wheelmen will follow the race.—American Wheelman.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

New York Stock Market.

New York, Aug. 19.—Speculation in the stock of the American Tobacco Company dominated to-day's share market. During the past few days rumor has been busy with the affairs of this property and there are evidences of workings of a plan to depress the value of its shares, the leader of which appears to be a well known bear operator. When the break came in tobacco most of the other shares dealt in became heavy and receded. In the final dealings there was a renewal of the depression and the market closed heavy in tone with the net changes evenly divided between gains and losses, but mostly in the fractions. The foreign trading was very light.
