CHINESE WOMEN SERVANTS.

They Are of Common Employment Among the Japanese—Few in America.

We are accustomed to think only of Chinamen as servants, because it is almost unknown for a Chinese woman to go out to service in this country, says the New York Commercial Advertiser.

This is not the case, however, in Japan, some of the most efficient servants of that country being from China.

A merchant from this country, who has been doing business in Tokio for several years, returned home recently, bringing with him two Chinese women as nurses for his young children.

He says it is customary in Japan to place the very young children in charge of Chinese nurses, and when they are older to employ Japanese women.

The reason given is because the Chinese women are so faithful in the care of babies. A Chinese nurse will hang her head with shame if the baby cries.

She thinks it is all her fault. She hovers over her charge with anxious care, and makes a great fuss if it appears that anyone is going to behave imprudently with the child.

tated to remonstrate nervously: "You will kill them in their insides," she said.

The Chinese nurse expects to take entire charge of the child, preparing everything that it eats and washing its clothes.

The nurse who came to this country with the American babies brought pebbles all the way from Japan with which she cleaned the infant's bottle.

Chinese servants are regarded in Japan as much more reliable than Japanese.
