WASHINGTON'S STATUE IS MADE CROSS-EYE

WASHINGTON D. C., Friday Oct. 27.—The elements, or maybe vandals have so abused the heroic statue of George Washington on the United States Capitol explanade that the father of his country has been made to look crossed.

All kinds of things have been done to this marble statue by Greenough. The base on the south side has been split, the fissure extending the whole height of the base. Pieces have been chipped out of the baldric of the sword and other pieces have been chipped from the base. The upraised index finger of the right hand has been a target for boys for a long time, their object being to knock it off. On the south side of the base is a group representing Hercules strangling the snakes in his cradle. Little Herk and the snakes have been split so that the serpents look like joint snakes.

The crossed effect of the statue has been produced either by the elements or vandal removing the inner part on of the right eyeball. The new surface thus made has been blackened by dust.

TAFT LOPS OFF $17,000,000

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 28.—Secretary Taft has adopted a policy of economy in the war department. In consequence the estimates for ordnance work have been reduced about $8,000,000, and those for improvements of rivers and harbors about $9,000,000. These estimates have no bearing on present projects, but will apply to new work.

One of the chief reasons for this policy is that there will be a large increase in the cost of the army in order to man the new coast defenses which have been completed.

LAWSON SUES STEVENS

HANCOCK, Mich., Oct. 28.—Alleging that his character had been damaged to the extent of $20,000, Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston has brought suit for that amount against Horace G. Stevens, a well known copper mine specialist of Houghton. He charges libel. Mr. Stevens is an extensive writer on copper mining topics
