

OTHER SIDE OF RACE SUICIDE QUESTION

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—"I am not an advocate of race suicide, but in the poor quarters there are too many births. We are now suffering from too much prosperity among the rich and too much poverty among the poor," said Lester Bodine, superintendent of compulsory education at a meeting in the municipal museum last night.

"Large families that drag down the finances of the wage earner are responsible in a great measure for wife abandonment cases. In other cases desertion is taken to avoid all-money payment but whatever the cause the mother that must bend her back to the task of caring for her children cannot properly raise them and eventually thousands of boys and girls find their way into the juvenile courts.

"An investigation of the West Side has shown that there are 600 women there deserted. In the whole city there are nearly three times as many whose husbands have deserted them.

"Large families are compatible with large incomes, but the trouble is that the poor are producing too many children. Nothing can be done to alleviate this except education. This education is radically different from that advocated by our worthy president. I wish to honestly declare that the poor have no right to large families."

PASSENGERS FORCE CAPTAIN TO OBEY THE LAW

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—After a night of terror just above Hell Gate, 200 passengers on the steamship Warren laded this morning. The boat started last night for Fall River and the machinery broke down just outside the harbor. The captain intended to repair it and proceed. Secret Service Agent Wessels, of San Francisco, was aboard and told the captain that he was disobeying the law.

An indignation meeting was held in the cabin by the passengers and the captain was forced to return to the dock. A terrific gale was blowing and the lights were out. Steam from the broken boilers was creeping through the seams in the deck and a panic was created.

UPRISING IN CUBA REPORTED

HAVANA, Nov. 18.—A dispatch received at a late hour says that an uprising has occurred in Manzanillo, and that troops supposedly designed for Santiago are really for the latter place.

Dispatches from Santiago state that a mysterious movement of local police and rural guards has been going on for several days. One hundred artillerymen have been sent from Havana.

A special train was asked for on account of the necessity for the early arrival of the troops.

Officials deny any knowledge of an insurrection, but fear something may occur. Information reached the palace several days ago to the effect that disturbances on the eastern end of the island were probable. Senor Adrade, secretary of the government, said that nothing absolute was known, but that the government wanted to take precaution to prevent a repetition of the Cienfuegos incident.

MCCURDY REDUCES HIS SALARY ONE-HALF

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—At a special meeting of the board of trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company yesterday, at which a preliminary report of the recently appointed special investigating committee was submitted. President Richard A. McCurdy caused a stir by announcing that at his own request, his salary had been cut in half, from $150,000 to $75,000 a year.

This action was taken at a meeting of the finance committee, and Mr. McCurdy said was the first step in reducing the expenses of the company. Salaries of the other executive officers of the company also have been reduced, the saving amounting in all to between $154,000 and $150,000 per annum.

PRESENTS ARE NOT VERY VALUABLE

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 18.—The examination and appraisal of the presents received by Miss Alice Roosevelt during her visit to the Orient has begun. The officials at the Georgetown custom house have begun to open up the twenty-seven boxes in which the presents were shipped and other souvenirs of the visit which resulted in a social conquest of the Far East by the president's daughter.

Only about one third of the boxes have so far been opened, and Collector Nieman and his staff are said to be somewhat surprised, as the valuation of their contents will exceed scarcely a few thousand dollars.

As the work of appraising Miss Roosevelt's presents is being done along with the other work of the office, it is doubtful if the last box will be examined and the valuation fixed before next week.

Miss Roosevelt, who is on a visit to relatives in Massachusetts, will probably be home in time to receive them at the White House. Some of the presents she has not yet seen.

A NEAT JOB OF SECRET SERVICE

(Original.)
One morning in Virginia, when McClellan was threatening Richmond and it was daily expected that he would march a victorious army into the city, a young countryman driving a cow got mixed with the Union pickets. He said that he didn't know that the army was so near and asked permission to take his cow to his home some distance back of the Union front. He was taken to the general commanding that portion of the army, where he made his entry and gave his name as John Harding. Being questioned as to the dispositions of the enemy among whom he had been he proved so stupid that the general dismissed him with orders that he be permitted to drive his cow home.

Six hours after he had departed a Jew was found on the extreme right of the Union line selling the soldiers pinchbeck jewelry and tin watches, relieving them of their greenbacks for the worthless articles. The orders were to arrest such traders and the Jew was taken to the headquarters of the general commanding the wing, where he gave his name as Benjamin Moses. He was conducted to the rear and informed that if he came back he would be sent through the lines to the enemy.

A day or two later the commander of the Union left received an order to look out for a spy who had turned up under the names John Harding, Benjamin Moses, and lastly Gustave Laviolette, a citizen of France travelling in America and seeking a pass to go through the lines on his way to visit relatives in Louisiana. His application had been held for information concerning him and he had disappeared. After the receipt of the order the man had been chased to a clump of houses near where, a day or two later, was fought the battle of Seven Pines. A guard surrounded the hamlet, the frightened people huddling in the road that passed between the houses. The officer charged with the arrest, not knowing the man he wanted, asked for him under his various aliases. If he was there no one would betray him.

The officer was puzzled to know what to do, so he sent to headquarters for orders. While he was waiting he kept the men of the hamlet in the road but permitted the women to go and come as they chose. One man entered the place, apparently not knowing what was transpiring. He was a mere boy and not suspected, but the officer put him with the other men. After waiting more than an hour an order came which the officer proceeded to obey. He compelled the men to stand as near together as possible and drew his soldiers up in a firing line. Then he told them that if they would not give up the spy he would shoot them all down together. Of course this was a bluff, but it drew forth a response. The youngster who had entered the place passionately begged that his comrades be spared, avowing himself to be the spy.

The youngster was taken to the headquarters of the division in whose lines he was captured.

"So you're the person who has been misquoting as Jew, Breckenman and other individuals, gathering information?"

"Yes, general."

"You're old enough to know that the punishment for spying is death, aren't you?"

"Yes, general."

"Well, I wish you hadn't been caught in my lines. It's no fun for me to hang a boy like you."

To this the youngster made no reply, and the general ordered that he be taken away and kept under guard till called for. Then the general reported the capture to his superior and awaited instructions. An order came to try the spy by drumhead court martial and execute him.

The officer of the day was entrusted with the duty, and the forms having been gone through with, the general looked for notification that the disagreeable work had been done. While he waited the officer of the day rode up to his tent and dismounted.

"Is it all over?"

"No, general. The boy says he's a girl."

"A girl?"

"Yes, and I thought you'd prefer to test the truth of the claim before executing him."

"Do so. There are some women in camp. You'll find several in the hospitals."

The officer withdrew and in half an hour returned with the information that the claim had been proved.

"Send her to me," the general ordered.

The girl, still in boy's clothes, was marched to the general. She had gone through a terrible ordeal and, not yet knowing what was going to be done with her, was white as a sheet.

"How has a girl like you had the ability to play so many different characters?" asked the officer.

"I haven't?" said the girl. "The man who did so came among us at our place near Seven Pines and was surrounded by your men. While the officer was waiting for orders the spy asked if any woman would put on man's clothes and be ready to per-
