The only excuse that Count Witte can make is to frankly admit that he was overcapitalized.

It would be difficult for the plot to thicken in Russia, it being now about as thick as possible.

If Senator Depew will not resign the people will speedily find some other way to dissolve the partnership.

To the men who are drawing the big Panama canal salaries twenty years time will seem like a summer's afternoon.

It must have been mortifying to President Castro to find that Mr. Roosevelt forgot to make any mention of him in the message.

Mr. Roosevelt has succeeded in writing a longer message than Mr. Cleveland wrote, but Mr. Cleveland far eclipsed him in the length of his words.

Congress will adjourn over the holidays in order that the railroads may have one more merry Christmas before regulation shall set in.

There is a chance for a modern insurance company to get into business in this country, at popular prices, on a live-and-let-live policy.

In the fact that the northwest passage has been discovered no doubt the transcontinental roads will see a new reason for thinking that the digging of a canal to link the oceans would be a shocking waste of money.

Hundreds of Indians in the southwest who formerly refused to work are now earning average wages in manual labor. Poor Lo has decided that pay day is one of the paleface institutions worth borrowing.

CAN'T KISS THEIR GIRLS

Mothers Use Broom on Teacher Whose Discipline Was Lax

BRIGDETON, N. J., Dec. 16.—The "smack in school," made famous by readers and reciters for generations, has caused an upheaval in the Back Neck public schools, near this city, and the young schoolmaster, Smith Westcott, the story goes, was chased out of the building by irate mother, with brooms. The board of education of the township is making an investigation, while the school remains closed.

According to stories told parents by some of the pupils, discipline in the school has been lax for some time. The staid farming community had been told by some of the girls that the boys had been allowed to mingle freely with them, that hugging and kissing were every day features of life within the walls of the little building and there was widespread indignation.

Three women of the near neighborhood armed themselves with brooms and are credited with chasing the teacher from the school, standing as pickets outside, and forbidding the children to enter. The lockout was complete and no school has been held for several days.

SIR HENRY MORGAN, BUCCANEER

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY,
Author of "The Southerners," "For Love of Country," "The Grip of Honor," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY

Synopsis of Preceding Chapter

Sir Henry Morgan, former pirate, having purchased immunity and knighthood from the king of England, has reformed and has become vice governor of Jamaica. He is deposed and, killing the officers sent to arrest him, determines to become again a freebooter. Benjamin Holingold, ex-pirate, who has been bitterly wronged by Morgan, joins the fortunes of the latter in order to seek an opportunity to wreak vengeance on him. Having recruited a crew of ex-pirates and other desperadoes, Morgan seizes an English frigate and murders her crew. Off for the Spanish coast in search of treasure, in a desperate action, wherein are shown the daring and resourcefulness of Morgan and the courage of his men, he defeats two Spanish frigates and captures their convoy, a treasure galleon carrying an abbot and priests as passengers.

"We're safe!" cried Morgan. "Flatten in forward! Haul aft the sheets and braces!"

At that instant there was a terrific crash heard above the roar of the tempest. The fore topmast of the Almirante Recalde carried sharply off at the hounds. Relieved of the pressure, she shot up into the wind once more and drove straight into the seething seas.

The men were as quick to see the danger as was Morgan. They came rushing aft, baring their weapons, pouring curses and imprecations upon him. He stood with folded arms, a scornful smile on his old face, looking upon them, Carib watching and ready by his side. In another second, with a concussion which threw them all to the deck, the doomed ship struck heavily upon the sands.

CHAPTER IX.

CAPTAIN DOMINIQUE ALVARADO stood alone on the plaza of the ancient castle which for over a century had been the home of the governors of La Guayra. He was gazing listlessly down over the parapet which bordered the bare sheer precipice towering above the seaport town. There was nothing in his eyes, but a great deal in his heavy heart.

Captain Alvarado, who filled the honorable station of comandante of the port, was a soldier of proved courage. The protege and favorite officer of his serene highness the Count Alvaro de Lara, grandee of Spain and viceroy of Venezuela, he had been honored with great responsibilities, which he had discharged to the satisfaction of his master. From a military point of view the office of governor of La Guayra, which he then filled, was of sufficient importance to entitle him to high position and much consideration in the vice-regal court of Caracas.

Of unknown parentage, Alvarado had been received into the family of the viceroy when an infant. He had been carefully reared, almost as he had been De Lara's son, and had been given abundant opportunity to distinguish himself. In the course of his short life he had managed to amass a modest fortune by honorable means. He was young and handsome. He had been instructed, for the viceroy had early shown partiality for him, in the best schools in the new world. His education had been ripened and polished by a sojourn of several years in Europe, not only at the court of Madrid, but also at that of Versailles, where the Count de Lara had been sent as ambassador to the grand monarch during a period in which, for the sake of supervising the education of his only daughter, he had temporarily absented himself from his beloved Venezuela. That an unknown man should have been given such opportunities, should have been treated with so much consideration, was sufficient commentary on the unprecedented kindness of heart of the old hidalgo who represented the falling power of his most catholic majesty of Spain, Carlos II., the Bewitched, in the new world. Whatever his origin, therefore, he had been brought up as a Spanish soldier and gentleman, and the old count was openly proud of him.

With assured station, ample means, increasing reputation, with youth health and personal good looks, the young governor should have been a nappy man. But it was easy to see from the heavy frown upon his sunny face—for he was that rare thing in Spain, a blue-eyed blond, who at first sight might have been mistaken for an Englishman—that his soul was filled with melancholy. And well it might be, for Alvarado was the victim of a hopeless passion for Mercedes de Lara, the viceroy's daughter, known from one end of the Caribbean to the other from her beauty and her father's station as the Pearl of Caracas.

Nor was his present sadness due to unrequited passion, for he was confident that the adoration of his heart was met with an adequate response from its object. Indeed, it was no secret to him that Mercedes loved him with a devotion which matched his own. It was not that, but her father had announced his intention to betroth the girl to Don Felipe de Tobar y Bobadilla, a young gentleman of ancient lineage and vast wealth, who had been born in America and was the reputed head in the western hemisphere of the famous family whose name he bore.

HARRIMAN DENIES THAT HE WANTED PART OF THE STOCK

Declares that Ryan Asked Him for His Aid in Securing Control of the Equitable Life--Contradicts Ryan's Statements.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—E. H. Harriman, before the insurance investigating committee today, declared that Thomas E. Ryan asked his aid in his (Ryan's) efforts to secure control of the Equitable Life. Harriman denied that he expressed any desire to share in the purchase of the stock.

Harriman's statements created somewhat of a sensation. His testimony is directly opposed to that of Ryan.

Harriman said that he was instrumental in preventing bills from being introduced in the legislature to aid one faction in the Equitable to get control of the society.

"It has been openly charged," said Mr. Hughes, "that you get your political influence through your relations with Ex-Governor Odell."

"I should say that Mr. Odell gets his political influence through his political relations with me," responded Mr. Harriman.
