Vacant Lot Crops Valuable.

Philadelphia's public school gardens, which were conducted last season on the vacant lots of the city, flourished under the patient cultivation of more than 2,000 boys and girls, so that not only were numerous unsightly lots made attractive, but at least $50 poor families were aided in the struggle for existence, says the Maryland Educational Journal. It is now estimated that the value of the vegetables raised on these 242 acres of school garden land will exceed $50,000. All this is aside from the educational value of the work itself to the little gardeners.

Need of Activity Among Officials.

It is quite often that the inactivity of the officials of a town work against its best interests, says D. M. Carr in Home Trade Advocate. Nearly every small town has ordinances relative to the cutting of weeds along the streets, and it is rarely that these rules are enforced. The streets of a town overgrown with weeds never make a good impression on the stranger. Good sidewalks, well kept streets in the residence and business portions of a place always speak well for the habits of its residents.

For the Public's Information.

It would be a good idea for every town, village and hamlet along the line of any railroad to put up a sign or two somewhere in proximity to the railroad station setting forth the name of the town and whatever claim it has for historic, residential and industrial interest, says Four Track News. Travelers often wonder when a train comes to a stop what the town is that spreads out before them and wherein lies its excuse for being. True, the railroads are doing a great deal to exploit and advertise the attractions, scenic and commercial, of most of the more important places, but it wouldn't be an altogether bad idea for the towns to do a little something themselves, if only to set up a bulletin of facts for the enlightenment of the passing traveler.

Need of Advertising.

The merchant who believes "that advertising is just throwing away money" can hardly hold out well when there is any competition to meet, says D. M. Carr in Home Trade Advocate. He might succeed in running a crossroads store in some pioneer country, but he has little place in the business world, where it is essential that up to date methods be employed.

Need of Circulating Money at Home.

Every farmer, laborer, every resident of a community, whatsoever be his occupation, who sends dollars away to a distant city that might as well be retained at home assists in tearing down the importance of his home town, says D. M. Carr in the Home Trade Advocate; helps build up great trusts and puts out of circulation in his community dollars that he will never see again.

THE LOVE OF HENRY

"I often wonder if he will always love me as he does now," said the bride in a burst of confidence. "I have thought of that for hours at a time. It would seem so awful if he didn't. I'd just want to die. That's what I was crying about just before you came in."

"Don't you ever worry about a little thing like that," advised the elderly matron, who had called.

"Do you call that a little thing?" exclaimed the bride, with some indignation.

"Why—er—no, my dear," said the experienced friend. "That was a slip of the tongue. I meant that there was no occasion to worry. That the probability was so small that it wasn't worth worrying about. I worry myself sometimes, but it's not about whether Mr. Balsover will always love me. Its whether he will be home in time for dinner or not or whether—but I don't want to discourage you."

"What do you mean?" asked the bride.

"Nothing at all, my dear," said the matron. "Be assured that Henry always will love you as he does now—in the same way precisely. The years may pass, but he will continue to glare at me when I call and break up your beautiful little domestic tete-a-tetes as he did when I happened in the other night. Don't say a word, dear. I know he doesn't mean to glare, and I wouldn't blame him anyway. I've known Henry too long not to know what he's thinking about at certain times. I know, too, that he will always take twenty minutes to say good by to his adored one when he starts for the office in the morning. Some husbands will snap and snarl over a breakfast and give their loving wives a peck on the cheek and rush right off, but you'll never find Henry doing that. Even Mr. Balsover persists in reading the evening paper after dinner instead of talking over the happenings of the day and telling me how beautiful I am and how he worships me, but Henry won't lapse in that way; I'm sure. I know Henry."

"I'm sure you only do him justice," said the bride. "And Henry thinks so much of you."

"He ought to," said the matron. "But he's a nice boy and he won't even ask you why the something or another you can't use your own comb instead of taking his and getting it all full of long hair. He won't say that he feels too tired when you ask him to take you somewhere. Henry won't get bald-headed and lose his waist entirely, of course; but even if he did he wouldn't bring you home flowers just as he does now. Henry's love is deep and too strong ever to wane. The almost delirious bliss of his matrimonial life couldn't even degenerate into something commonplace and unromantic."

"No I don't think it could," said the bride, with conviction.

"Not a bit of it," said the matron. "Never worry, my dear, until the worries come—and then make the best of them. You may be quite sure now that Henry will love you always—in just the very same identical way."

"I'm awfully glad you came," said the bride. "I feel quite cheered up."

Marion Harland's Recipes

CUSTARD FOR TWO.

Beat one egg, add to one cup of milk, two level tablespoons of sugar, a pinch of salt, and about three gratings of nutmeg. Bake in two custard cups.

RYE MUFFINS.

One cup of rye flour, one cup white flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, one fourth cup molasses, one egg, three teaspoonfuls baking powder (rounding), one cup milk or a little more. Beat well. Bake in hot muffin pans.

PLAIN SPONGE CAKE.

Beat the yolks of four eggs light, add one cup of sugar, and eat. Sift one cup of flour with one level teaspoon of baking powder, and add to the egg and sugar, with one tablespoon of cold water and the juice and grated rind of half a lemon.

HAM IN VIRGINIA STYLE

Soak a ham in cold water twenty-four hours, then cook in boiling water, allowing half an hour for each pound of ham. Let it cool in the water in which it was boiled, take out and strip off the skin. Cover with a paste of crumbs and egg. Set in the oven which should be quite hot, and bake forty minutes. Serve cold.

TWIN MOUNTAIN MUFFINS.

Cream one third cup butter; add gradually one-fourth cup sugar and one-fourth teaspoon salt; add one egg, beaten light; three-fourths cup milk, two cups sifted flour, and four level teaspoons baking powder. Bake in hot buttered gem pans about twenty five minutes.

Little Hints

Melted butter will not make good cake

Salt throw on burning fat will remove all odor and smoke

Good macaroni is of a yellowish tint and does not break readily in cooking.

A brush dipped in salt water should be used in cleaning bamboo furniture.

After blacking boots sprinkle a little caster sugar on the polishing brush and then polish.

Apples will not turn dark when pared if dropped into water to which lemon juice has been added.

A few drops of ammonia or a pinch of borax will not only soften water, but make it clearing besides.

When cooking rabbit always remove the kidney fat and the flavor of the meat will be greatly improved.

The easiest way to sprinkle cloths is to use a clean whisk broom that should be kept for the purpose.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice to a quart of water will make rice very white and keep the grains separate when boiled.

When cleaning a range add a few drops of turpentine to the blacklead and a better polish will result. This method also serves to keep the grate from rusting when not in use.

Clever Little Stories

Since the death, a few years ago of Bishop Clark of Rhode Island, an amusing anecdote has been going the rounds among his former friends.

While a young pastor, in charge of a small parish in northern New England, Mr Clark was making calls one day and came to the house of a woman who believed in having a large family. In fact several times during his pastorate the clergyman had had her babies presented for baptism, and her thrift was well known in the neighborhood.

The lady saw Mr Clark passing, and called to him: "Oh, Mr. Clark, do come in; you haven't seen my last baby yet?"

The minister replied, with a smile: "No, madam, and never expect to." —Boston Herald.

Unique Booze Club

Vermillion, S. D. April 3.—Upon complaint of Elam Babb, James McMann was arrested at Wakonda, on a charge of selling intoxicating liquor contrary to law. At the preliminary hearing here yesterday Babb made a very poor witness for the state and it was very evident that he wanted to drop the case against McMann. But Judge Copeland thought the evidence sufficient to hold the prisoner to the circuit court in bonds of $200.

It is said McMann has been running what was termed a club in the town of Wakonda. To become a member you purchased keys at the door and on entering found "wet" goods to the amount of your purchase. Each member was entitled to admit three friends on a dollar membership fee. This meant four bottles. If only one friend was invited the price of a key was 50 cents. Upon leaving the club room the key was returned to the "corkeeper" and the membership became cancelled. Of course, there was no limit as to how many times a day the same fellow became a member of the club so long as he had the purchase price.
