LITERARY TASTE IN MEXICO

AMERICAN CONSUL - GENERAL WRITES INTERESTINGLY OF THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE MEXICAN PEOPLE.

(Special to the World.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2.—Down in Old Mexico the like hot stuff in literature.

Consul-General Gottschalk, writing to the Department of Commerce and Labor, says the people there want to read translations of Edgar Allan Poe's creepy creations, or neurotic French novels. The Consul General wittily dubs the latter "emotional works," and no tame love idylls or character sketches find sale in the book mart.

If it isn't something racy, then it must be stirring. Briefly, the Spanish temperament won't stand for pastels in words. Needless to say, Henry James is taboo.

But they take to the works of Theodore Roosevelt. Gottschalk declares naively, "Occasionally works of thrilling contemporaneous interest have grown popular such as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and of recent years, President Roosevelt's published works." The strenuous life appeals to the devotees of the simple life in tabasco land.

It would appear that the Spanish-American is intolerant of "Sunday school stories." He wants the kind of a book that flushes the cheek or makes shivers run up and down the spine. He thinks the favorite books and plays of Americans "too illegitimate," according to Mr. Gottschalk, and that art and literature has too little of the impulsive and dramatic.

Consul Lespinasse of Tuxpam, who also writes the department on the same subject, thinks Hackettesque plays and Dumaslike novels best suit the Mexican taste.

"Chivalrous sentiment," he says, "is a prominent characteristic among all classes in Mexico, and novels of all kinds strongly appeal to their nature if at all worthy of being read and the price is moderate."

It is somewhat paradoxical that the Spanish-American, who is generally horribly averse to exertion, to hardship, and is, in fact, rather indolent, should demand stories brimming with action, seething with strenuousness, or palpitating with hardship.

That he should love romance and stories of the tender passion is to be expected in a Latin temperament, but why does he take an interest in the works of Theodore Roosevelt?

Rev. E. O. Jessup of the Baptist church sold his house on Chelan st. and all the furnishings to Mrs. L. R. Kufus yesterday. Mr. Jessup will rent rooms from Miss Wells on A street. His study will be in the church in the future.

R. J. Brett was down from Sheehan Flats Sunday.

Mrs. C. J. Wurtz left this morning for Spokane.

William Edmund of Orondo came down today to engage fruit packers.

Miss Amanda Peterson of Monroe is visiting her friend, Venetia Treadwell.

Miss Eloise Scheble returned from a three weeks' visit in Seattle yesterday.

Miss Katherine Silverman, who has been visiting in Helena, Butte and Spokane for two months, returns home tonight.

Mrs. S. M. Howard, of Kallispel, Montana, is visiting her sister Mrs. D. Demaree.

Mrs. S. E. Cushing has gone to Winchester for two months to home-stead with her daughter, Mrs. S. A. Clapp.

J. Buchanan and wife of Leavenworth attended the quarterly conference of the Church of God at Wenatchee last week.

Mrs. Thomas Baker and daughter, Hazel, from Marysville, Wash., passed through here on their way to Chelan.

Mrs. Annie Richardson has just returned from Everett, where she has placed her three little daughters at school.

Mr. F. W. Smith, manager of the Columbia River Lumber company, left Saturday noon for Everett.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Huper of Sumner, Wash., have been visiting for the past week with Mrs. John Elfers. They were charmed with the valley, and have decided to locate here in the near future.

A lot of new Oakes photo post-cards are attracting much attention at Armstrong's stationery store.

A party of friends surprised Mrs. May Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Vondell served a dainty lunch. All report an enjoyable time.

The Order of the Eastern Star will meet Tuesday, October 6, at 7:30. All members are requested to be present.

Now is the time to do your advertising. The fruit grower and the farmer are prosperous and the merchant should let them know what they have in stock in the shape of bargains.

The new furniture for the Wenatchee Business college has been installed and the rooms are now ready for occupancy. The school will open next Monday. The present year promises to be a prosperous one for the school, and within the coming month many students will enter.

The Ill Effects of Eye Strain Among Children.

Children are often times backward in their studies, get behind in their school work, and, to the mortification of the parents, get the name of being stupid boys or girls from no other cause than eye strain. If the child complains of dull pains in the region of the eyes, or is subject to headache, looks askance or with partly closed lids, these are symptoms of eye strain, and the parents should consult a competent optometrist.

Howard Thomas, the local optometrist, is especially equipped to fit the most complicated case of eye strain scientifically, being a graduate of the Philadelphia Optical college, and with a number of years practical experience, making this a specialty.
