A Line of Talk.

Two telephone girls were talking over the wire one afternoon. The subject of the conversation was a lawn party, which was to take place the next day. Both were discussing what they should wear, and, after five minutes, had come to no decision.

In the midst of this important conversation a masculine voice interrupted, asking humbly what number he had. One of the girls scornfully asked:

"What line do you think you are on, anyhow?"

"Well," said the man; "I am not sure; but judging from what I have heard, I should say I was on a clothesline."

BLUFFED THE SULTAN OF TURKEY

CAPT. CHESTER RECALLS GRISCOM'S THREAT TO BOMBARD THE CAPITAL.—INDEMNITIES PAID IN HASTE.

Rome, March 12.—Admiral Colby Mitchell Chester, after having spent some time in Egypt, is now in Rome enjoying the city and seeing his many friends, among the latter Lloyd C. Griscom, the American ambassador. Their friendship dates from the time when Mr. Griscom was charge d'affaires at Constantinople in 1890. At that time the admiral was a captain in command of the battleship Kentucky, then on her way to the Far East, and he has just recalled an incident which showed the diplomatic ability of Mr. Griscom and his readiness to seize the opportune moment.

For years he had been vainly claiming the payment of certain indemnities which Turkey, with her traditional diplomacy, had evaded, and thus all efforts on peaceful lines made by several ministers of the United States had been frustrated.

Mr. Griscom's "Other Measures"

Mr. Griscom thought an apparent resort to force might win the trick. The Kentucky was going to Turkish waters, but could absolutely spare only five days there, which particular, however, was unknown to the Ottoman government. Mr. Griscom renewed his claims on the porte, making it understood that on this occasion, if the demands of the United States were not satisfied, other measures would be adopted.

Contemporaneously he telegraphed—not in cipher—to Capt. Chester to keep ready at Smyrna, but not to undertake any action until he received further instructions. This, of course was known, as it was intended to be, to the Ottoman authorities, and Kiamil Pasha, then governor of Smyrna, implored the central government to give in, as the town was panic-stricken at the idea of being bombarded by the Kentucky. Indeed, some of the inhabitants had already taken to the hills.

The indemnities were immediately paid, but the Sultan, wishing not to appear to have paid under coercion, gave a dinner for the occasion, at which, naturally, Mr. Griscom, Capt. Chester, and the officers of the Kentucky were the guests of honor. Indeed, he even wished to give a high decoration to the captain, but, having the difficulties of an American official accepting such an honor represented to him, he conferred it upon young Chester, the captain's son.

Wanted Lieutenant to be an Admiral

During this most diverting dinner the Sultan suddenly fixed his eye on a young man at the far end of the table. He turned to Mr. Griscom and the following dialogue ensued:

"Who is the young man second from the foot of the table?"

"Oh, that is a lieutenant of the Kentucky, your majesty."

"I like his face. A lieutenant? Well, I am going to make him an admiral of my navy."

"But—"

"No buts. I have spoken."

In fact, the fortunate young man, who was Lieutenant Pitt Scott, later Commodore Dewey's aid in the battle of Manila bay, was approached next day, and the exalted position of which the Sultan had spoken was offered to him. This to the amazement of the entourage of his majesty was declined courteously.

New Minister Makes a Hit.

The new minister in a Georgia church was delivering his first sermon. The darky janitor was a critical listener from a back corner of the church. The minister's sermon was eloquent, and his prayers seemed to cover the whole category of human wants.

After the services one of the deacons asked the old darkey what he thought of the new minister. "Don't you think he offers up a good prayer, Joe?"

"Ah mos' suhtainly does, boss. Why, that man axed de good Lord fo' things dat de odder preacher didn't even know He had!"

An Orondo Address.

An Orondo man this week had occasion to write his father-in-law, in Germany, and this is how he had to address his letter:

Herr Anton Kiser, Forman by Herr Henrick Hibey, Hidinghauser, Haslinghausen, Cr. Crafelden, Deutchland, Europa.

A Want Ad is the "First Cause" of a Good Many Things in this City

If you will look about you, in the business life of this city, you cannot fail to see things and conditions, whose "first causes" date back to want ads.

In an office you will see a valuable clerk, stenographer, bookkeeper or other employe who came to the house through a want ad. In the home you will see a servant—whose history in that house dates back to a want advertisement—and a musical instrument, or an odd piece of bric-a-brac or furniture, or a set of books—all in that house as a result of want advertisements.

Here and there, all over the city, you will find homes whose owners have found them as a result of want advertising; and tenanted apartments and prosperous boarding houses, and private schools, and a host of minor business enterprises—all owing, as "first causes," to the classified advertisements.

The want ads. have been busy in this city—they have accomplished things—brought about things—initiated enterprises, and consummated them. And what they HAVE DONE is but a slight hint of what they ARE TO DO in the city.
