CENTRAL BANK IS PLANNED

MONETARY COMMISSION HAS EVOLVED ITS THEORY OF A MORE STABLE FINANCIAL SYSTEM.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Although the plans have not yet been worked out in all of their details it is possible today to give a general outline of the proposed Central Bank of the United States, the establishment of which will be recommended to congress by the monetary commission. According to information, the institution will not receive the public's deposits or do a general banking business.

Its main function will be to act as fiscal agent for the government and through its large note-issuing capacity, limited beyond a certain point of taxation—come to the aid of other national banks in times of emergency.

The organized capital of the institution will be $100,000,000, and the stock will be apportioned among the national banks, and perhaps state banks on a capital basis, with provision prohibiting any bank from acquiring notes exceeding its quota.

The stockholders will elect a board of directors by territorial districts. In addition to this governing board, there will be another board of government directors, comprising leading treasury officials, these to be designated by the president, secretary of the treasury and the comptroller of the currency.

If they prove competent, the active bank officers who are to be selected jointly by the boards, will serve for life. The advocates of the institution claim that this will eliminate all politics. The policy of the bank is to be left to the board of directors. The present plan is for the central bank to handle all government receipts and disbursements; its branches replacing the subtreasuries. It will issue its own notes which will be secured by a large reserve of gold and gilt-edged commercial paper or credit representing the actual transaction of business between solvent concerns.

No loans made or discounts will be accepted on bonds, stocks, realty mortgages or any speculative security. It is said that it will not be the purpose of the bank to make large profits but rather provide a reserve of credit strength and support to national banks and any profits that may be made will be divided between the stockholders and the national treasury.

Although President Taft and the chairman of the banking and financial committees of the senate and the financial committees of the house are friendly to the scheme the public is admittedly skeptical. The public fears that it will concentrate money power and give Wall street control of the nation's currency. Advocates of the institution claim that it will give the banking system of the country an organization and cohesion which it always lacked. Instead of entering into competition with banks, it is said that it would be a resource for each institution.

The advocates also claim that because it would manage the operations of the treasury and government receipts and disbursements, it would not be a distributing factor. Much opposition to the central bank has arisen, it is stated, from the disaster that fell to the old bank of the United States which was conceived by Hamilton and killed by President Jackson.

The advocates point out that the organization of the institution will be entirely different from that scheme and that there is no chance of it meeting with disaster.

Exposition Has Paid Bonded Debt.

Seattle, Oct. 7.—The last cent of the exposition bonded indebtedness is wiped out. The principal of $350,000 was paid some time ago. Today the Washington Trust company received from President Chilberg of the exposition a check for $22,500, representing the interest.

RE-FORESTATION IN OREGON

James J. Hill offers $1000 in prizes for wheat exhibits grown without irrigation throughout the dry farming districts of Oregon, Montana and Washington at the National Dry Farming Congress, that will be held at Billings, Mont., October 26-28. Farmers and commercial clubs are being advised of the offer so they may take advantage of it. There will also be exhibits made of fruits raised without irrigation and other grains.

A ton of Douglas fir seeds, capable of sprouting 80,000,000 big fir trees, will be planted within the coming few weeks by the national forest service in Oregon forest reserves. Fully one-third of the seed will be sown in the Bull Run reserve where reforestation is undertaken experimentally to see what effect it will have in increasing the flow of Bull Run river, the source of Portland's water supply. It is estimated that the present flow of the stream is sufficient to supply the city for the next 50 years, but it is believed the volume of water can be doubled, providing for all future demands the city may make upon the river. Other forest reserves will be experimented upon in covering bare slopes with the baby trees. Forest service officials have been handicapped in the past in securing the seed in sufficient quantities although from $1.50 to $2.50 per pound is paid for Douglas fir seed.
