HOW TO USE LIFE SAVING AWL. As the illustration shows, this awl enables the skater who has broken through to pull himself out.

The use of this little tool is as simple as the tool itself and hardly needs any explanation. The method of rescuing oneself is about as follows: First—As soon as you break through the ice extend the arms. Don't get excited.

Second—Swim to the edge of the ice from whence you came. Rest one hand on the ice. Gently tread water.

Third—Take the awl in the other hand and remove the cork from the point with the teeth. Reach over on the ice as far as possible and plant the tool firmly in the surface.

Fourth—By drawing in the arm you can now easily bring the blps on to the ice. Stand up, put the cork back on the point of the awl and skate off.

In this manner it is possible to get back on the ice in twenty or thirty seconds if one preserves his presence of mind and acts with reasonable deliberation. Do not waste your strength in useless floundering or swimming in different directions. The ice over which you have skated is the only part you know to be thick enough to bear you.

When one gets one hand on the edge of the ice he can easily raise his head and shoulders out of the water. The person using this awl for the first time will be surprised at the ease with which he can rescue himself. If the ice breaks when you first try to draw yourself up on it, which will seldom happen except on very new ice, plant the awl in the ice beyond where it has broken, and if necessary repeat the operation until you reach ice firm enough to hold you.

If the ice all around be so thin that it will not hold a man in a sitting posture it will often hold when he lies flat. In such case pull the body while lying prone over on to firm ice. This can be done with one awl, but a second one will greatly expedite matters.—Translated From Der Winter by Popular Mechanics.

Stone Dust as a Shield. The British royal commission on mines has recently continued its experiments on explosions of mixtures of coal dust and air. It has demonstrated that such mixtures are eminently explosive and also that the explosions can be mitigated or confined in area by means of stone dust, which is not explosive. A coal dust area was sandwiched between a dustless region and one spread with stone dust, and an explosion was produced in the coal dust by firing a cannon. The results appear to demonstrate that the effects of an explosion may be transmitted to a considerable distance over a dustless zone by the coal dust driven before the air blast, but that the stone dust has a restraining action beyond the merely negative one of not supplying explosive material.

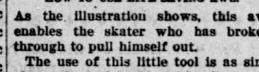

Waterproofing Fabrics. Some fabrics can easily be made waterproof by soaking them in a solution of celluloid in acetone, ether, amyl acetate or other volatile solvent, says the Scientific American. The evaporation of the solvent leaves the fabric coated with a thin film of celluloid, which is firmly united with the fiber. The thickness of the film can be increased by repeating the operation or by using a stronger solution. Fabrics thus treated are absolutely waterproof and can be washed without absorbing water. Linen which is first starched and then treated by this process can be washed with soap and water without removing the starch.

Uses of Tungsten Ore. Since the discovery of tungsten ore as a metal for the making of a filament for electric lamps and the great saving in current that has resulted the general public has lost sight of the fact that the ore is used for other purposes. It is used in the production of tungsten steel and for the production of the tungstates which are employed in fixing the colors in dyeing, in giving weight to silk goods and in rendering cotton goods fireproof. The ore has recently been discovered in several parts of Canada.

Street Railway Service. In round numbers there are 1,250 street and interurban railway companies in America, with a total of 35,000 miles of single track and 75,000 passenger cars. The total number of passengers carried annually is 10,000,000,000, and the gross annual income is $440,000,000.

Damaged Horses and Sled. Grant Savage, a rancher living about eight miles up the Entiat river, met with a serious accident on Friday last. While hauling a boiler upon a bobbed with a double team the embankment gave way and the horses and sled were hurled over the bank. The sled and one horse were ruined. The other horses were seriously injured. Mr. Savage saved himself by leaping from the load.

A LIFE SAVING AWL. Tool to Aid Skaters to Regain Ice After Breaking Through. Considering the many lives lost every year by breaking through or still oftener by skating into holes in the ice, a simple and very practical means of saving oneself from drowning should be of interest. The "life saving awl" herewith shown has long been in use in Holland, Friesland and on the lake of Constance. It is probably in use in other places, but it does not seem to be generally known. It consists simply of a wooden handle about four inches long in which a strong steel point is firmly fastened. It is carried (preferably two of them) either loosely in the outer coat pocket or on a string slung over the shoulder.

More Coal Found. D. Demaree reports that a two foot vein of coal was found on or near the Turner ranch. The coal was first discovered by a "dago" who sought to conceal it until he could secure a patent for the tract. The vein is said to be two feet thick. The coal burns finely and is covered by only two feet of earth. The place where coal has been removed is above the shale rock about 40 rods from the road. The fact of the existence of coal in this region has long been known, but this vein is perhaps the thickest and most accessible that has as yet been discovered in the immediate neighborhood of the city.

Will make long-time LOANS on Irrigated Tracts at 8 per cent anywhere in Chelan or Douglas counties.
