The Boy Scouts of England

THE boy scout movement in England several months ago by Lieutenant General Baden-Powell is now attracting worldwide attention, and the hero of Mafeking is receiving much praise for his work. Boys were enrolled in a picturesque and cheerily uniformed corps, properly officered, to be trained in patriotism, chivalry, woodcraft and healthful exercises. Today the roll of the boy scout movement is very large. Every district, almost every village, has its local corps. The king has officially recognized the boys and given them his heartiest good wishes. The other day a national meeting of influential Britons, under the chairmanship of the lord mayor, decided to open "B. P. scout employment bureau," through which the employers of the country can engage lads who have been rigorously tested out.

The boy scout movement has entirely lived down the taunts of those who said it was "merely the ephemeral hobby of an eccentric military man." Unlike the cadet corps of rich men's sons and the boys' brigade of the poor, there are no class distinctions with the boy scouts. The unit of membership is just an embryo citizen—a lad who, if fate has endowed him with sheltered and cultured surroundings, will probably become a good citizen and who, if endowed with an unhappy home life and the streets for a playground, will quite conceivably turn out a bad citizen. The boy scout organization, with its delightful adventures and ritual, captures this embryo citizen and does its best to make his bent toward good citizenship sure and permanent.

Every boy on joining the corps has to take the scout's oath and promise on his honor three things, "To be loyal to God and the king, to help others at all times and to obey the scout law." His motto is, "Be prepared." Obedience to his authority, self sacrifice, a strong sense of duty, noticing details, tracking animals, the meaning of small signs, judging distances, heights and numbers, camping, cooking, natural history, map reading, finding the way, boating, swimming, carpentering, cycling, physical development, non-smoking, temperance sanitation, courtesy and helpfulness to women and children, thrift, honor, courage, ambulance work, rescues from fire and drowning and an ability to cope with street accidents are but a few of the objects of the boy scout training.

Slouch hat of military pattern, green or blue woolen shirt, short breeches, leaving the knees bare; stout boots, a five foot pole—these make up the orthodox equipment of the scout. Manufacturers all over England have been quick to appreciate the movement, and an amusing state of affairs is to be found on the outskirts of Bourne-mouth and in other districts, where the thrifty wives of artisans and laboring men are clothing their lads in the boy scout outfit for the simple reason that it is the cheapest they can buy.

To most of the corps Saturday night is the exciting time of the week. The boys attending school have done their home lessons. Those earning their living have not the prospect of early rising the next morning. It is the occasion for the campfire. As soon as the sun nears the horizon scouts begin to troop up to the copse or woodland set apart for their rites and exercises. They gather brushwood, build the fire, drag up logs, post sentries and settle down to the business of the evening. Songs are sung, stories are told, potatoes and appalling compounds of flour and jam are roasted among the glowing embers, and various night scouting exercises are indulged in.

There are phases of night scouting which thrill grown men no less than the boys. A dozen lamps are placed in a row at intervals of 150 yards or so across country. A quarter of a mile in front of the row, amid bushes, undulating ground, is stationed a band of twenty or thirty scouts. The leader of the defenders blows a shrill whistle, whereupon the rival band, stationed half a mile beyond, splits into units and begins its attempt to creep through the enemy's ranks and reach his lamps unobserved.

During the summer months, later in the night, many of the scouts hang hammocks between the trees, others arrange themselves in their blanket sleeping bags, two sentries are posted for three hour watches, a password is given, and the camp retires to rest.

Hearing in Powder Trust Suit.
New York, Feb. 2.—The taking of testimony in the government's suit against the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder company (the so-called powder trust) was resumed today before Federal Examiner Mahaffey in this city.
