TECHNICALITY CITED BY COUNSEL FOR CONVICTED PENCIL FACTORY SUPERINTENDENT.
ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 18.—A new effort to save the life of Leo M. Frank, sentenced to be hanged January 22, for the murder of Mary Phagan, was begun in Federal district court here today.
Attorneys for Frank filed a petition for his release on a habeas corpus writ on ground that he was convicted without due process of law, and is being detained illegally.
To Make Appeal.
If the petition is denied, the attorneys said, appeal will be taken directly to the United States supreme court.
The petition alleges that the prisoner's constitutional rights were violated by return of a verdict during his absence from the court room; that the jury was influenced by popular demonstrations, and that the trial court therefore, lost jurisdiction in the case before a conviction was reached. Federal Judge Newman announced he would hear arguments on the petition Saturday.
Previous Effort Failure.
A previous effort to bring the case before the Federal supreme court failed when both the state courts and the supreme court refused to grant a writ of error for a review. That action also was based on allegations that Frank's constitutional rights had been violated but it did not involve a habeas corpus proceeding.
Today's petition sets forth that Frank knew nothing of the agreement of his attorneys to waive his presence when a verdict was received and that his attorneys could not legally act for him where such a right was involved.

WORTHINGTON NEWS.

Glenn Martin left for Oakland, Md., on Tuesday last, where he will remain until after the holidays.

A convention has been called to meet at Davis & Billingslea's this evening (Friday) to nominate a municipal ticket.

The box supper held at J. O. O. F. hall on Wednesday evening for the benefit of the public school library was a financial success, about $20 being realized.

Mr. Terrence H. Shaver, of Worthington, and Miss Cora D. Hall, of Barrackville, were united in marriage on Wednesday evening by Rev. W. J. Eddy at the parsonage.

Ellis W. Hedlin, our good Republican friend of Sturms Mills, was a business visitor in town on Friday.

Lloyd Rinehart, of Kuhn's Run, passed through town on Friday with a large sled load of evergreens for Christmas decorations.

E. E. Terlick is in poor health at this writing. He is suffering from an attack of his old enemy, asthma.

All of our merchants have their Christmas goods on display, but the dull times seem to have a bad effect on the sales.

The present cold snap is about the worst ever experienced here. Seventeen degrees below zero is the lowest reported here.

Miss Edith Parish, of Hundred, W. Va., was visiting relatives here last week.

So far as known none of the Sunday schools of this place will observe Christmas with special programs.

FARMERS TO GATHER AT THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY

Farmers' Week, January 4 to 9, Has Become a Big Annual Agricultural Event At the State's Agricultural College

Farmers' Course students viewing a post-mortem examination showing the effectiveness of the tuberculosis test in bovine tuberculosis.

Extra preparations are being made at Morgantown to take care of the large number of farmers who will gather in from all parts of the state during the first week in January to attend the annual Farmers' Week activities at the College of Agriculture. Leading farmers in ever-increasing numbers are forming the habit of going to the college year after year for this week of inspiration and instruction. Many look upon Farmers' Week as a sort of winter vacation which may be spent very profitably in learning the newest and best in agricultural advancement.

Three Courses of Instruction. In order to meet the needs of as large a number of persons as possible, the following courses are given: General Agriculture, Dairying, and Horticulture. The work of these courses consists of practical and scientific lectures and practice work in the laboratories or barns, or on the University Farm. The instructional work is given by the regular teachers of the College of Agriculture and by practical agricultural experts who are familiar with our farm problems.

Special Lectures. A valuable feature of the week is the series of meetings at 4 and 8 p. m. each day, when addresses will be made by some of the most prominent speakers of West Virginia and other states. Some of the speakers are: Dear R. L. Watts, Pennsylvania State Agricultural College.

Professor Alfred Vivian, Ohio State University.

Mr. Herbert Quick, Agricultural Editor and Author, Berkeley Springs, West Virginia.

Mr. L. P. Bailey, Belmont Stock Farm, Tacoma, Ohio.

Professor W. C. Coffey, Illinois State University.

Hon. H. E. Williams, Commissioner of Agriculture, Charleston, West Virginia.

Hon. A. D. Williams, State Road Engineer, Morgantown, West Virginia.

Dean E. D. Sanderson, College of Agriculture, West Virginia University.

When a man makes up his mind that he wants to know a little more about the whys and wherefores of farming, and says that he will leave home and farm for a week or two to go to the agricultural college, his neighbors sometimes begin to wonder what sort of notion has struck him now.

Last winter I learned that our state college of agriculture was preparing to give a short course in agriculture for the benefit of the farmers of the state. As soon as I heard of it I began to scheme and plan to take advantage of it.

My neighbors held up their hands in astonishment. "Why, I thought you knew how to farm as well as any one round here!" Well, what if I did—perhaps I could learn how to do it more easily. When my alfalfa failed

Tester. Mixing fertilizers for the field and spray materials for the orchards, right before our eyes, took out a lot of the mystery connected with these subjects and made them seem simple and easy. Of course in a short period like a single week classes must be hurried and lectures must be condensed, but a wide-awake man with a note book can get a very good idea of many important processes and principles.

When they wanted to show us how to dress a mutton so that the carcass would not taste strong, they simply rigged up a classroom in a barn and an expert killed and dressed an animal while we looked on—explaining the various points to be noted as he proceeded. When it comes to fixing in mind the ideal type of dairy cow, beef animal, hog or sheep there is nothing to compare with a look at the live animal itself. You might talk and describe and explain all day long without much success but just give me a good look at the animal itself and a little explanation to go with it, and the mental picture will stay with me long after I've forgotten even the name of the man who lectured to me.

But, now, don't misunderstand me, regarding the men who lectured. I want to say that they are as clever and as "human" a lot of men as it has ever been my privilege to meet. They seem to appreciate and understand our farm problems and to want to give us sympathetic practical help rather than cold impersonal criticism.

In fact, I made a number of acquaintances, both among professors and farmers from all parts of the state, that I shall remember for years. That is one reason why I am going back to the college again, January 4th to 9th, to attend Farmers' Week this year. I think I shall make it a rule to set aside a week for the College of Agriculture every winter. The trip, and the lectures and demonstrations, together with the agreeable associations give all the elements needed for a pleasant and profitable winter vacation.

FARMER JOHNSON ATTENDS COLLEGE

Demonstrating how to dress a mutton, to grow I did not always know why. When my silage spoiled I was disappointed, but did not know the reason why. When my apple trees produced only small misshapen fruits instead of large perfect apples, I wanted to know the reason why. So I went to college for a few days and now I know the reason why about lots of things. It is mighty satisfying to be able to do things after a definite plan and to know the reason for each step.

The whole subject of bacteria in relation to soil fertility; to the preservation of silage, and to the production of milk, was thoroughly aired. Percentages of butter fat in milk became a reality when you could see them actually measured up on the Babcock

COMING BACK.
Yes, he deserves a lot of credit. It is mighty hard to "come back."
We hear this remark frequently. What is meant by "coming back?"
Simply not losing your grit. It takes a mountain of grit to succeed, and those that succeed have it. It does not take much grit to start a savings account, but it takes some to keep at it.
