The Old Game of Making Big Men Out of Little Ones Is Pie For the Texas League

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 7.—When Joe W. Gardner retired as owner of the Dallas league ball club, baseball lost a man who was responsible for sending more rookies to the big show than any other minor league owner or manager.

For 15 years Gardner has been known in big league circles as a manufacturer of baseball talent. In 1902 he and Ted Sullivan, a well known baseball man, organized a Texas league. From that date to this Gardner has shipped a number of youngsters to the big league annually.

This spring he retired from baseball selling his interest to Hamilton Patterson and Doc White, the old White Sox pitcher.

Among the players he sent up active in baseball today are Arthur Fletcher, shortstop of the Giants; Eddie "Hack" Spencer of the Tigers; Branch Rickey, part owner of the Cards and Hank Gowdy, catcher of the Braves, who recently joined the U. S. service.

Some of his other charges including Frankie Truesdale, Jack Onslow, Charlie McDonald, George Jackson, Gene Dale, Bill Loudon, Rube Peters, Claude Berry, are scattered throughout the international league. Southern and other circuits.

Claude Berry, catcher; Harry Clarke, infielder; Fred Hunter, infielder; Otis Johnson, infielder; Charlie Moran, catcher and Rip Reagan, pitcher, went up in 1903.

In 1905, Branch Rickey and Hack Spencer, catchers, went to the White Sox. Spencer hit "boozie" and drifted back. He made a comeback and is now catching for the Tigers. Rickey is part owner of the Cards. He also caught for the Browns.

Jimmy Stephens, catcher, went to the Browns in 1906, followed by Rube Ferris, pitcher.

In 1907, Bill Loudon, infielder, went to the Yanks. He later played with the Tigers and Reds, Benny Myers, outfielder, was shipped to the Browns, and afterwards played with the Dodgers. Charlie Pruitt and Jess Garrett, pitchers, went to the Browns and Portland, respectively.

Two stars were sent up in 1908, Harry Ables, pitcher, and Mike Murphy, catcher. Ables went to the Browns and thence to the coast. Murphy went to the Reds.

Art Fletcher of the Giants was landed in 1909. Drucke went to the Giants this year, as well as Rube Peters, pitcher to the White Sox.

Hank Gowdy was the biggest star turned loose in 1910.

In 1913, Gene Dale, pitcher, went to the Reds. Charlie McDonald, infielder to the Reds. Jewel Ens to Providence.

King Brady went to the Yanks in 1915, and was sent to the International and is now hurling for Toledo, in the A. A.

Red Josefson, outfielder, was bought by the Giants in 1916. He was tried out at Marlin in the spring, but an operation prevented him from cutting loose. He was then sent to Rochester and then to Memphis, under Mike Donlin. He quit for the year, but will be with the Giants in 1918.

His opponent is a more striking refutation to the belief about athletes fading young. He is James Riley, 71, former United States sculling champion.

Riley is after revenge. Seven years ago Ten Eyck beat him by 16 lengths over the same three-mile course, both towing the distance under 24 minutes.

GARBAGE TRUCK WAS INITIATED

Fatty Ferguson the Driver, May Find His Joy Ride Was Expensive.

The Ford truck, the only garbage truck in city service did not operate today, but instead is in the repair shop while its driver is under a $25 bail.

"Fatty" Ferguson, the driver and one of the most recent employees of the City Sanitary Department celebrated the close of his first week's employment yesterday evening by exhibiting to the residents of Locust avenue some "dare devil" stunts with the city's garbage truck. In a few minutes both the Bell and Consolidated phones began to ring and it was then that Desk Sergeant Mike Deveny received the first information of what was taking place on Locust avenue.

Traffic Cop was soon on his motorcycle and with much difficulty succeeded in overtaking the speeder. To the surprise of Policeman Ward the culprit was Ferguson, the garbage truck driver. Ferguson was brought to the city jail where he remained over night.

GRANT TOWN EAGER FOR CONSOL. GAME

Manager Kirchner Tells West Virginian He Will Accept Challenge.

In response to the challenge published in the West Virginian yesterday evening by the management of the Consolidation Coal Company baseball team for a game deciding the county championship between the Coal Company team and Grant Town Manager Kirchner of Grant Town this morning called the West Virginian and asked that his acceptance of the challenge be published.

The Grant Town manager states that since there is at this time quite a dispute over the championship that the only sure means of deciding the real champions is to have the two teams meet in a series of games. He further proposes that three games be played, but in case that they cannot be arranged, he is willing to play one more game on a neutral field letting this game decide the championship.

Grant Town is anxious to play off the deciding game or games before both teams disorganize for the year, and suggests that they are played with in the next few weeks. Manager McAteer may communicate with Manager Kirchner by calling the No. 2 store at Grant Town.

HE CURES INSOMNIA.

BOSTON, Mass.—After going practically sleepless for three years, Michael Horgen has cured his insomnia by having a special bed built. It is hung from the ceiling by weights, and when it is lifted up and let down slowly by machinery Horgen is able to sleep. The bed was built on the advice of a famous nerve specialist. Horgen has been an elevator operator for 20 years.

Aggravated Case.

Brown suffers from hay fever, does he not? I should say he does. He can't even pass a grass widow without sneezing.—Boston Transcript.

JAMES TEN EYCK

When you hear his talk about athletics going to pieces after 30 or 35 just think of Jim Ten Eyck and forget about it.

Jim is 65 and he still manages to get winning crews at Syracuse university, where he coaches.

But more than that Jim can still pull a mighty wicked oar himself and in September will compete in a three-mile rowing race.
